Weakness of Beavers at Bat Shown by the Averages.

M'CREDIE THE EXCEPTION

Portland Manager Leads Team With 25 Hits Out of 78 Times at Bat, Giving Average of 321. Fielding Records.

The Beavers have been home a month now, and have won eight games and lost 14. That is a great deal better than the record in the Southland, and shows that the boys are beginning to pick up. In the first San Francisco series at home they won two and lost three, in the Los Angeles series they dropped four out of Angeles series they dropped four out of Angeles series they dropped four out of five. While playing with Oakland they won three out of the seven games, and in the last series succeeded in capturing two out of five. Within the last few days Shinn left the team and Frank Gum was benched and bought a ticket back to

Since the return from the land of the since the return from the land of the Winter tourist resorts Anson R. Mottjoined the team. Mott has made himself one of the most popular players and has been doing good work all the time. Artic
Ross is now with the team, but is not desirous of playing. Ross complains that he has lost his arm and cannot do good work in the outfield. He states good work in the outfield. He states that he thinks he is fast enough to play in the Northwest League, but is afraid that he cannot make good in the Pacific Coast League. He will be given a two weeks' trial by Manager McCredie and if he make good will be retained. Ross he makes good will be retained. Ross will probably go in at left field, and Bas-sey will be switched to center field. Lovett's injured finger will keep him out for some time.

Where Is First Baseman Yates? Manager McCredle made arrangements and signed Dick Yates, a first baseman from the University of Chicago, but so far the player has not put in an appearance. McCredle has not heard from the man, and does not know whether to sign another first baseman. San Francisco came north this last series with a different team than played the first series. Shaughnessy, the big ex-policeman of the Bay City, occupies Murphy's place in right field. Shaughnessy was a member of the crack Sun Francisco policemen's team that traveled through the East last season, and his work attracted the magnates of the South. Murphy has evidently quit baseball for good. He left San Francisco for Klendike, and it is not known whether he will return to baseball. Hildebrand is sick in San Francisco. Los Angeles will probably arrive today, and at present it looks as if no game will be played. The grounds are wet, and the boys cannot do good work.

How Beavers Are Batting.

The batting averages of the team show The batting averages of the team show that Frank Gum leads the team. He was only up eight times, still he hit three times safely. Walter McCredle is the real sticker of the bunch. Since his return from the South he has been up 78 times, and has hit safely 25 times. He is the only man on the team hitting over 300. KELLY IS CHOSEN CAPTAIN

Champion Sprinter Honored by Fellow Athletes at Eugene.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Engene, Baker City, the world's champion sprinter, was unanimously elected captain of the track team for the season of 1908. Kelly accepted the honor and expressed his feelings to his teammates in a few well-chosen words.

He is the strongest athlete who ever came to the university, and as an all-around man he is probably without a peer. His record of :09 3-5 in the 190-yard dash stands as the world's record, and his 21 1-5 seconds for the 220-yard dash, made at Spokane on a slightly curved track, equals the world's record for a straightaway. In the Pullman meet held in Eugene this year he ran the same distance in 21 4-5 seconds, equaling the world's time for a quarter-mile track. Kelly is 23 years old, is a good student, and at present is taking a course pre-paratory to law, Parsons claims he is going into training to meet Kelly at Jamestown and refuses to take a chance against him in the meantime. Superintendent Inglis thought Parsons would take advantage of the first chance offering to meet of the first chance offering to meet Kelly and sent both mail and tele-graphic invitations, but he finally had to telegraph to a Los Angeles sport-ing writer to get a word out of Par-sons. Then it was a refusal to come north.

Only people who appreciate the higher, more clustve things are likely to care much for Mr. Skinner's work in "The Duel," or for the play itself. It is a drama for the thoughtful, written with a clearly defined object in view. Its literary excellence places it easily in the front rank of recent dramatic craftamanship, and it combines learned discussion of an and it combines learned discussion of an abstruce subject, dramatic quality and the element of sheer human interest to a the element of sheer human interest to a remarkable degree.

It is largely antithetical dialogue, argumentative far beyond what we expect in the acting drama, but it clutches the interest and sways the emotions so effectively that the audience is never allowed to relax until the logical denouement is reached.

"The Duel" was written by Henri Lave-dan, of the French Academy, and has been admirably translated by Louis N. Parker. It is symbolical of the struggle now in progress in France between the mother church and atheism. The Abbe Daniet and Bolene typity all that is best and most admirable in religion, while Doctor Morey is scientific agnosticism incarnate. As in most duels, there is a woman in the case, but the love element is also symbolical. It stands for something more than a mere individual affair of the heart.

At the end religion is benignly triumphant, as it should. The play is, in fact, a powerful preachment for the church, made through the effective and ever-interesting medium of the drama.
Otts Skinner represents all that is best in the actor's art. His technic is above criticism, he has the voice, stage presence and power of character portraying that are consummate. Portland has seldom seen so fine an artist.

The presence of E. M. Holland, unquestionably one of the greatest of English character actors, in the cast makes the performance all the more notable. Mr. Holland was last seen here with Kryle Bellew, two years ago, and the local public is glad of his return. His work as the missionary hishop last night was such as is seldom given us to witness.

The cast is small and so uniformly good that was detailed that were death of the rest of the cast is small and so uniformly good that were death of the rest of the second series of the cast is small and so uniformly good.

that every detail of the performance is a perfectly balanced. But four of the parts are of great consequence. In fact, the others are merely bits, but they are carefully and ably played. Walter Hitchcock, who plays the doctor, interprets the role so well that the duel is always a fight worth watching the classics of the second control of the control fight worth watching, the clashing of an-tagonistic minds and personalities never becomes one-sided. Keith Wakeman never falls below excellence in her playing of the woman torn between love for the man and her inherent devotion to soul duty.

Every one who appreciates the very best the stage has to offer should see "The Duel," and be glad of the opportunity. The engagement closes touight, and it is to be hoped that an audience worthy of the offering will be present.

THE production of "Dolly Varden" by last night was undoubtedly the best work ning to end the performance went with a swing and a dash, and in every detail the telligence of theater audiences. Sometimes I'm prone to think that only such plays and such actors as split the ears of the groundlings are marked for success; that dramatized tommyrot alone appeals to the great American public; and then comes such an instance as that of last night and my cynicism is knecked galley-west. Here is an actor and a play which appeal entirely to the cultured understanding.

Only people who appreciate the higher, more clusive things are likely to care much for Mr. Skinner's work in "The Duel." or for the play itself. It is a drama for the thoughtful, written with a clearly defined object in view, Its literary excellence places it easily in the front rank of recent dramatic craftsmanship, the success of th comedy in his portrayal of the aged and self-satisfied dandy.

Florence Sinnot, in the role of Dolly Varden, created by Luiu Glaser, puts plenty of animation into the part and plenty of animation into the part and keeps things moving. The way she han-dled the heaviest part of the piece last night, after only a scant allowance of rehearsals, does her credit. George Kun-kel, who is a comedian pure and simple, surprised the audience and got a hearty hand with his fine rendering of the lyric, "When We Meet in Lovers' Lane," which was one of the daintiest touches of the entire performance. More of Kunkel, in any piece, would be acceptable. Albert Wallerstedt's fine baritone has excellent opportunity in the many tender love-songs of the role of Captain Richard Beliville, and of this opportunity he makes most pleasing use. His "The Girl You Love," and duet with Miss Sinnot, "What Love Means," were treats in themselves.

No doubt last night's audience missed semething good when, on account of a misplaced orchestration, Teddy Webb's topical song, "Everybody's Awfully Good to Me," had to be cut out. Webb guarantees, however, that he will sing the song tonight, without an orchestration if necessary, and with this addition the "Dolly essary, and with this addition the "Dolly Varden" week ought to be the prize at-traction of the company's engagement.

The railroad business is growing so that the amount of fuel required by the railroads is increasing all the time.
