LEARN COST OF RAILROADS

WASHINGTON COMMISSIONERS HEAR EXPERT TESTIMONY.

Adjourn After Receiving Data Concerning Lines of Northern Pacific and O. R. & N.

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 13.—(Special.)—The State Railroad Commission hearing to determine the value of railroad property, adjourned this evening to meet at the Hotel Butler, Seattle, Tuesday morning, where evidence of Seattle real estate dealers will be taken as to the value of railroad terminals and other property in that city.

Today's sessions were given up to the identification and introducing as exhibits of the reports of the experts that have been employed by the Commission. These included reports on present right of way values by H. D. McArthur and Jason M. Averill, and a most interesting report by Engineer Frank Graves, who swore he had walked over every foot of track of the O. R. & N., and whose report covered in detail the number and sizes of ties and rails, the number of frogs, sidings, mileposts and danger signals; the depth of cuts and the character of same, and the depth of graveling on that line.

Engineer H. F. Gillette put in hundreds of pages of figures showing the original cost of the Northern Pacific line, and Engineer H. L. Gray said that the O. R. & N. officials had declared they had no construction cost records, but that he had found some of them stored at a Portland dock, and had been able to check up all items with the ledgers and engineers' records of that road. A. C. Spencer, of Portland briefly cross-questioned Gray in an effort to show the books were incomplete as to some of the older parts of the road, but Mr. Gray testified he had been able to check up all of the figures to secure every item considered in properly learning the original cost.

Mr. Gillette reported the original
