

SLUGGARD HAST HUT

Police Judge Rebukes Unwillingness to Think.

IMPOSES 190-DAY TERM

Nathan L. Sadler, of Palestine, Tex., Refuses to Exert Gray Matter and Court Loses Patience With Him.

Unwillingness to think is a more serious offense than larceny in these relatively enlightened days. Under a decision returned by Municipal Judge Cameron yesterday forenoon, the mental sluggard is a more reprehensible type of offender against established social and economic conditions than the thief, the vagrant and the whole run of petty offenders.

The heaviest sentence that has been imposed by the court during the present year went to Nathan L. Sadler, of Palestine, Tex., because Sadler was unwilling to do his own thinking. Sadler is not physically lazy. In fact, he invited the long term of 190 days of hard work on the rockpile under a sweltering sun. He seemed to prefer the prolonged physical toll to the brief minute of mental exertion incident to deciding his own case. While it was plain he was not mentally defective to a degree warranting his confinement to an asylum, yet he clearly lacked the power of ideation which has been designated as the line of demarcation between man and monkey.

Sadler was arrested for idling about the city doing nothing. He said he was willing to go to work, but someone secured him a job. He didn't care what kind of work he did, what the wages were, he added.

"What have you been doing this past year?" Judge Cameron asked him.

"Nothing," said Sadler. It was too much trouble to lie.

"What do you intend doing?"

"Anything."

"Speak up or you'll go to the rockpile," continued Sadler, carelessly. He plainly did not intend to abandon monetary habits.

"Are you willing to leave town and go to sea?"

"It's up to you."

"I'm not your guardian. Can't you speak for yourself—do you want to be sent to the rockpile?"

"It's up to you."

"I'm tempted to send you up for 190 days—the biggest sentence I ever gave a person of your kind."

"All right."

"Very well, you may break rock for 190 days. A man who is unwilling to think as you are needs some powerful remedy. I hate to have the county taking care of you, but I suppose you'll earn your way."

"I suppose so," said Sadler. Not a muscle of his face moved.

He knew the way to the prisoner's box, but stood until Bailiff McDonald led him out as a horse would be led.

If James Cassaday lived among the Indians they would make him wear skirts, care for his children and bring wood for the fire. The braves would shun his society, refuse to speak to him even casually and call him "squaw-man." Cassaday doesn't live among the Indians, however. In the barrooms of Albina he is hailed as a good fellow, which he is.

Yesterday, Cassaday was shown up for the shiffling "squaw-man" he is. Confronted with a charge of drunkenness and vagrancy, he had to establish having a visible means of support. And to establish this he had to produce a job. Cassaday supports him from revenue derived through the washstand. He not only buys his food and clothes but pays for his spree. He operates on Mrs. Cassaday much as his fellow brigand Halsull operates among the timid people of the Nile.

Compelling her to part with her earnings he squanders the money as he sees fit. It was shown.

There is some doubt as to whether Mrs. Cassaday will ever want him back now that he is in jail. But it does not seem necessary for her to call at the jail and take charge of him. Judge Cameron said that the "squaw-man" could not be trusted to travel alone all the way to Albina. Cassaday begged that his wife be sent for once, but the officers are taking their time about it.

A WAIL FROM BROOKLYN

Complaint That Wandering Cows and Horses Nearly Own Suburb.

PORTLAND, June 18.—(To the Editor.)—I have $20 that I would like to put into a fund to make our streets and sidewalks in Brooklyn a little better condition than a barnyard.

It has been a mystery to me why Brooklyn in Brooklyn has not increased in value in proportion to other parts of our city. But one has only to take a walk along any of the streets, or on the Brooklyn car running to the car shops to see what is the matter with this section. Cows and horses are herded along the walks. Motormen on the streetcars are often obliged to get off their cars and drive horses off the track on Powell street before the cars can proceed. Some little child along the street takes the chance of being crippled for life by being tangled up in a rope, the other end being tied to a horse or cow.

During the winter three or four of these cows are huddled into a shed so small that they have hardly enough room to stand, and there they are left weak in and weak out the whole winter long, without any exercise whatever. And in the Spring these same cows are taken out to again defile our walks and private property. They are hardly able to stand on their feet, let alone walk. Later in the season, when the grass is dried, these cows are staked out in the baling pen all day, without any drink or shade. And to save two bits, some people of Brooklyn will

PLAN EAST SIDE LIBRARY

Improvement Association Takes Up Subject in Earnest.

At the meeting of the East Side Improvement Association last night, the East Side branch library was considered. O. M. Scott reported on the conference with the Portland Library Association. The Portland Library Association offers a building site to the East Side people for this purpose. This site is a quarter-block on East Eleventh and East Alder streets. The conditions on which the site is offered are that the East Side people shall raise the funds for the erection of a suitable building. As soon as the building is completed first-class service will be provided by the Portland Library Association.

The entire expense of maintenance of this branch library will be borne by the Library Association out of its regular funds. It devolves upon the people of the East Side to provide for the erection of a suitable building in order to get the advantage of a first-class library. They can make this just as good a building as they wish to pay for. The subscribers will be expected to choose their own building funds in conjunction with the committee of the Library Association. In regard to the erection of the building, the title of the property will be vested in the Library Association and the funds therefore should pass through its hands.

The report and statement was adopted as a basis for future action, and the discussion turned on the problem of raising money for the erection of a $10,000 building. O. M. Scott said that three full rooms would be needed, one general reading-room, one for periodicals and one for children. Remarks were made by Mr. Brewster, Dr. A. W. Moore and Mr. Sabin on the importance of the library. Mr. Bolso declared the success of the movement depended on creating an interest among the people, which would not be easy at this time of the year. It was finally decided to authorize the present committee, O. M. Scott, Joseph Buchtel and H. E. Prouty, to organize an executive committee of ten active men thoroughly alive to the need of the library, which should have power to organize the campaign for raising the money.

FINISH CARLINE TUESDAY

Street Railway Company Promises Service Through Rose City Park Soon.

Streetcar service from down town, all the way through Rose City Park to Columbia avenue, is promised by the railway company for next Tuesday. For several weeks the cars have been running to the foot of the Rose City Park hill, while the work of preparing Sandy Road for the extension has been going on.

The reduction of the grade on the hill has about been completed. The cars will run almost on a level from the top of the hill to the east side of Rose City Park. The work of cutting down the hill necessitated the removal of 12,000 yards of earth.

The hill has been graded to 60 feet wide at the top and 40 feet at the bottom. This grade is a good one for a regular traffic besides furnishing the streetcar with an easy grade.

Sandy Road is also to be gravelled from end to end. The plans contemplate making it one of the best general traffic roadways in the city. The excellent surface of the road will provide one of the best runs for automobiles within the city. The direction of Sandy Road, the cool shady ride afforded along its entire length and the absence of hard hills all the way to the Sandy River, will eventually make this thoroughfare one of the preferred haunts for automobilists.

PLANS FOR NEW BUILDING

Excavations for Y. M. C. A. Home Will Begin in August.

The committee having in charge the erection of the new Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. building will probably decide this week on the brick to be used and order it. The cement was ordered some time ago and is now on route from England. Since the cement was ordered the price has gone up 20 cents a barrel.

The committee is much pleased with the floor plans as now drawn up. The architects are working on the elevations, and are nearly ready to begin making the working drawings. The tenants of the half-block on Taylor street between Sixth and Seventh streets have been notified to vacate August 1, after which excavations for the new buildings will begin immediately.

finishing touches of their work. The plans were gone over for the last time and it was found there is no likelihood of a hitch. All emergencies have been provided against.

The Rose Fiesta is now out of the hands of the committee and in the hands of the public. All else that can be done is within the province of the people. Those who have roses should share them in the cause. Those who have no roses should lend the support of their presence on the streets during the two big parades. As to the turnout there can be no question. The city is preparing to participate as one person. The biggest crowd that ever thronged the streets of Portland is assured for the parade of Friday. Thursday's turnout will be no great ways behind in standpoint of numbers.

Must Decorate Today.

Today will be another day of placing decorations. Not only bunting, but roses, will be in evidence by tonight, for buds used today will be presentable for the Fiesta, florists say. The floral decorations on floats, however, will be reserved largely until Friday morning. In the keen competition for trophies and cash awards the hundreds taking part realize that the freshness of their flowers will be an important point in making awards. For this reason they will keep their blooms in water or on the bushes until the morning of the big floral parade.

Thirty special streetcars were secured yesterday to transport school children who are to appear in tomorrow's parade to the Shattuck and Land schools, which are the points of rendezvous. The 2000 children who will participate in the parade must be on hand not later than 1:45 P. M., and ready to take their places in line at that time.

Already Like Fairyland.

The Forestry building is already a fairyland of flowers. The decorators have accomplished wonders with the spacious interior. Their work will be completed by tonight, and the exhibit of roses will be opened to the public tomorrow forenoon at 10 o'clock. Hundreds of entries have been made, and scores of rose exhibits are in position at this time. The Rose Society is making its annual display in the building.

Judges of all Forestry building exhibits were announced yesterday, three in number—L. G. Prunder, Mrs. P. I. Fuller and Miss Elizabeth Lord. The judges on decorations are Mrs. F. Eggert, W. T. Gardner and George H. Hill.

Grand Marshal C. E. McDonnell announced his staff yesterday for the Friday parade. The staff is made up of National Guard officers, as follows: Lieutenant-Colonel J. M. Poorman, Majors J. L. May, F. S. Baker and T. N. Dunbar.

POET WOULD ACCEPT

Joaquin Miller Discusses His Senatorial Aspirations.

IS NOT SEEKING OFFICE

But If People of Oregon Want Him They Will Find Him at Eugene—Here to Attend the Rose Carnival.

Joaquin Miller, the poet of the Sierras, arrived in Portland last night from Eugene, the home of his boyhood, where he has been visiting relatives. He will spend a few days here in order to see the Rose Fiesta and will then go to Canyon City, Or., where he will be in attendance of the day at the Fourth of July celebration.

"Do I want to be a Senator from Oregon?" he repeated, when asked the question at the Imperial Hotel. "I can answer like the inscription on the tombstone of the Spartan, 'Sparta has many a better son,' and I say that Oregon has many a better son. But, I will be a Senator. It may be in a few years, and it may be in 20 years. I am a young man and there is plenty of time. There is still much life in the man who walked the Klondike and who has something far surpassing Maine, something 40 times finer than anything in California. But, when have we had a Senator or Representative who has cared to mention the wondrous sea, or to consider our mountain peaks, which knock their foreheads against the stars?"

"Oregon may like that negligent representation. I am not finding fault with it, but the work I have done in this life is in celebration of these mighty movements of nature. Senate or no Senate I shall keep it up, because this is the heart and core of nature. I shall go on doing as I have, celebrating Oregon, grateful and glad to point out where they have ever by any word or act drawn attention to the existence of a single one of these majestic snow peaks, of these thunderous and populous rivers, or the mightiest sea coast on the face of the earth."

"I have just returned from Washington, D. C., where a man asked me if we were entirely on the sea, or entirely on the mountains. We have something far surpassing Maine, something 40 times finer than anything in California. But, when have we had a Senator or Representative who has cared to mention the wondrous sea, or to consider our mountain peaks, which knock their foreheads against the stars?"

Leave It to the People.

"I leave the matter entirely with the people and give them many years to decide.

"Should it become necessary for me to commence campaigning I shall do it in my own way. I shall say all the things I can think of about them. I shall praise them on the stump in a way that was never heard before. It is wiser to come and abuse a candidate, but that is exactly what I would not do.

"How did the Senatorship idea first come to me? Well, there was some talk of it during my visit to the Lewis and Clark Exposition. I have been considering the matter for two years and have begun to find something interesting in it. I do not know whose place I will take, but if the nomination is forced upon me, I shall reluctantly—mind you, reluctantly—consent to accept."

WANT THETIS AND BEAR

Report That United States Cutters Are Wanted by Newfoundland.

VICTORIA, B. C., June 18.—Newfoundland waters are reported to be negotiating with the United States Government, according to letters received here, for the purchase of the revenue cutters Thetis and Bear for sealing off Newfoundland. The Thetis is now engaged in sealing patrol in Alaskan waters.

The salmon season is commencing in earnest, over 20 tons of fish being brought from two traps today. The United States cutter Rush, which broke her crankshaft while towing the seized sealing schooner Carlotta G. Cox, is reported from Comox, where she is coaling. She is expected to reach Seattle tonight.

Habitual Drunkenness Charged.

—Mary L. Roberts has filed a suit for divorce against John C. Roberts, to whom she was married February 24, 1888. The plaintiff charges her husband with gross and habitual drunkenness.

The lights of the automobile revealed him in the road the chauffeur turned aside. Lickel did likewise, and the collision resulted.

Without delay, Lickel was placed in the automobile and driven rapidly to the Good Samaritan Hospital, where Dr. George F. Wilson was summoned to attend to the injuries. It was found that Lickel had sustained a fracture of the skull. An operation was performed early this morning, but it could not be announced just how serious was his condition.

Lickel was conscious and to Sheriff Stevens and Deputy District Attorney Gus C. Moser, who were called in by M. Van Alstine, made a statement to the effect that the accident was unavoidable.

FIGHT THE STOCK LAW

Lents People Object to Enforcement of the Statute.

A test case is to be made of the stock law, which is now being enforced in Lents precinct. E. L. Rayburn is the Deputy Sheriff for that precinct and has been making an effort to enforce the law. It is asserted that the law is not being properly enforced, and the matter has been taken up with Sheriff Stevens. It is asserted that the Deputy Sheriff takes up cows running at large without notifying the owner. A charge of $50 is made before the owner can recover his cow. Those who are fighting enforcement of the law say that before a cow can be taken up the owner must be notified that the animal is at large; then if he does not keep her up he can be fined.

Owners of stock at Lents and the neighborhood have raised money with which to fight the enforcement of the law. They say that it works a hardship on them to keep up stock in that section, which is a rural district. The cows, they say, keep down the growth of grass and small brush and prevent the spread of brush fires. Enforcement of the stock law is cause of constant friction in all the suburbs eastward.

A petition has been circulated in the Lents precinct asking for the removal of Rayburn from office.

Men's Diseases Cured to Cured

Stay Cured

Different doctors have different ideas in regards to cures. Some call a suppression of symptoms a cure. They do for drug effects cure the disorder permanently. It is a system of local treatment entirely original with me, and is employed by no physician other than myself. This is just as substantial as it is broad. So-called "weakness" is but a symptom of disease and a radical cure is merely a matter of restoring normal conditions throughout the organic system, and this I accomplish thoroughly and with absolute certainty.
