

BRIDGE OF SALMON

Rogue River Fish King Explains His Method.

YOUNG FISH NOW DEVoured

Hatcheries Located Too Far Up the River and Are Turned Loose Before Able to Take Care of Themselves, Says Mr. Hume.

SALEM, Or., June 21.—(Special.)—If the Oregon Fish Commission will follow my advice, they will make salmon no plentiful they can walk across the Columbia River on their backs," said R. D. Hume, the Salmon King of Rogue River, when in Salem today to argue before the Supreme Court a bill to amend the law governing the hatcheries.

Wrong Location of Hatcheries. The present system of hatcheries and of operating them is all wrong. The hatcheries are located way up the streams, where it is inconvenient to handle the fish properly, and where proper material cannot be had with which to feed them.

The hatcheries should be located down the river, within convenient distance of the canneries, and large feeding ponds should be provided to keep the young fish kept until they are four or five inches long. Then the salmon heads should be secured from the canneries, cooked, ground up into pulp and strewn upon the ponds. That makes the best kind of feed for young salmon and would be inexpensive under such conditions.

"If fish were thus cared for until they had attained an age at which they could take care of themselves, there would be a plentiful supply. As it is, the Columbia River is almost depleted of the kind of salmon that made the river famous for its fishery product."

Will Talk to Fish Warden. "I am going to Astoria to talk the matter over with the Master Fish Warden, but I have my doubts about his doing much good. The fishery department is mixed up too much with politics and with efforts to legislate for Rogue River, where my headquarters would keep the river well supplied with fish if the meddlers would keep their hands off."

Mr. Hume has a number of specimens of young salmon with him to show the results of his method of feeding.

His decision was given orally and was very short, but he stated he would issue a written decision prepared by Monday. He said he had some doubt of the validity of the law, and so long as he was in doubt he would comply with the statute and reserve doubt in favor of the law. He said he thought it the trial courts' duty to leave it to the Supreme Court to decide the question.

Fire broke out in the sawmill at 4:30, and enveloped the mill before pumps could be started. The mill was owned by the H. McCormick Lumber Company, and was only partly covered by insurance. It will not be rebuilt. Lumber yard's loss will be $40,000. Loss on the mill will be $25,000.

SOUTHERN MAN CURED Of a Terrible Eczema by Cuticura in Six Weeks.

"Some time ago I suffered terribly with eczema, and I had the best medical attendance, but the more medicine I took the worse it seemed to get. I kept on with medicine for about five weeks until I saw the Cuticura Remedies advertised, and I at once purchased the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent, but had not the slightest hope of their curing me. After I had used the first set of the Cuticura Remedies I saw the improvement, and in just six weeks my skin was as smooth as ever.
