MULKEY DECLARES HIS INTENTIONS

Portland Lawyer Will Enter the Senatorial Contest Against Fulton.

FIGHT TO BE STRENUOUS

Man Who Once Wore Toga for Six Weeks Plans to Win by Appeal to the Plain People of Oregon.

Frederick W. Mulkey, ex-United States Senator from Oregon, is being groomed for the Senatorial race at the April primaries. During the Summer he will engage in the most strenuous training. Gallops to the far corners of the state to become better acquainted with the people of every section have been arranged by his trainers. He will single-foot it to the nearby districts also to meet his old friends and make new ones. By next Spring his admirers think he will be in fine fettle to trot in a winner in the Spring meet with Fulton.

Mr. Mulkey already has once romped in a winner, but be it remembered, in the Senatorial sweepstakes, and followers of the political ponies are scanning the form charts to dope out his previous performances and get a line on his chances to push his nose under the wire ahead of the salmon county statesman.

The Mulkey handshake has been unlimbered and the latest candidate is now ready to pass among the dear people and enlist their votes. The campaign of the Summer promises to enliven many a corner-grocery gathering in the alfalfa belt, for Senator Mulkey will start out within a few days to swing around the circle, going first into the Tillamook, Coos and Curry district and later through the sagebrush belt of Harney, Crook and Malheur. He will meet the farmers on their own homesteads and will talk to them sitting in neighborly fashion on their rail fences.

Strenuous From Jump.

Strenuous is the word from the jump. Mr. Mulkey has just completed a 12-day jaunt through Klamath and Lake Counties. Eight days of the dozen were occupied by Mr. Mulkey in stage journeys over the sizzling bunchgrass prairies. The remainder of the Summer campaign will be just as active, for he will travel through country where the locomotive is as much of a stranger as the extinct dodo.

No Pullman cars for Mr. Mulkey this Summer. He expects to wear callouses on his hands holding to stage seats while traversing rough roads. He plans to take on the rugged tan of the honest husbandman and for the coming strenuous month even his tailor will be forgotten. Back to the simple life for Mr. Mulkey.

There is a platform too that goes with the Mulkey campaign. Oh, my yes! Most of it is Roosevelt and the rest is Statement No. 1. Thorough accord with the Administration is the keynote of the propaganda that will be spread broadcast in many a speech throughout the cow counties during the August campaign. The farmers may be busy getting in the crops, and they may be tired after the long day's work is done, but they will troop out to hear the latest candidate just the same. Mr. Mulkey expects, however, to make his speeches short, out of consideration for his hard working audiences.

Found People Cordial.

"I am a candidate for the Senate," said Mr. Mulkey yesterday. "On my recent trip I found the people cordial and they treated me in a very friendly fashion. While I did not talk politics, I made inquiry as to the political problems the people of the different sections were interested in. My purpose this Summer is to learn the needs of all parts of the state and to personally meet the people and find out what their interests are. I shall travel through the more remote counties during the coming month.

"I feel I have only one chance of election and that is by the primary law as it was enforced at the last election. I believe in the election of Senators by the direct vote of the people. I do not believe the people can look for any legislation from the United States Senate that will be beneficial to them unless they can participate directly in the election of Senators. Oregon, under the provision of Statement No. 1 of the primary law has taken advanced ground so that the Legislature merely registers the will of the people.

"Believing as I do in the direct election and realizing also the difficulty of changing the constitution at present, I believe in the rigid observance of Statement No. 1 and I believe legislators should so pledge themselves.

"I know of no better arbitrator of political issues, or of the political preferment of men, than the majority of the people, and while I do not believe the people of Oregon will ever send a Democrat to the Senate, as the state is so overwhelmingly Republican, should they so decide, I believe their decision should be rigidly observed and respected by the Legislature.

Logrolling Thing of Past.

"This plan removes political log-rolling and deadlocks and gives the Legislature a free hand in solving the problems the people expect the legislators to consider. It absolutely removes boss rule and reduces to a minimum the influence of the large interests which would otherwise seek to elect a United States Senator to be their personal representative.

"If the people of Oregon will make one more stand on the provisions of Statement No. 1 it will be accepted, if successful, as an issue decided and the people of the state will never have to fear boss rule again. It seems to me to be the great overshadowing issue before the people of the state.

"So far as National issues are concerned, it would make but little difference who represents Oregon in the Senate, provided the successful candidate be a Republican, as there are no National issues that especially divide the Republican party. It would be better, of course, if the delegate from Oregon were in hearty sympathy with the National Administration. There has been considerable opposition developed in the United States Senate against the administration of President Roosevelt; largely due to the fact that individual Senators and the Senate as a body seem jealous of their powers.

"A great many powers exercised by the Senate have been usurped. I think the freedom with which the Senate seeks to amend treaties negotiated by the Executive Department of the Government was never originally contemplated by the framers of the Constitution. The tremendous power exerted by the Senate in reference to the confirmation or rejection of Executive appointees was, in my opinion, never contemplated by the framers of the Constitution.

"The Senate gained most of these powers when legislative questions were of chief importance to the Nation, but the principal problems of today are not those of constitutional law, but rather of administration law. The conflicts between the Senate and the Executive are largely due to a refusal on the part of the legislative branch of the Government to accord to the Executive Department sufficient power to cope with administrative questions.

"The result is that the Executive is constantly appealing to the Legislative Department for legislation which, in the nature of things, it should possess as an independent power. In other words, the Executive at the present time enjoys only what may be designated as delegated ordinance power. The time has now arrived when the Executive Department should also have supplemental and independent ordinance power.

"The administration of Theodore Roosevelt will, in my opinion, be designated in the future as an administration of great and constructive statesmanship. He has evolved policies of government that have been energetic and fearless. His administration has checked the tendency to concentrate wealth in the hands of a few and to reduce the importance of individuals as distinguished from corporations of large capitalization.

"In an economic sense, his administration has done more to prevent the country from accepting the doctrines of socialism than any other since the doctrine of individualism has been accepted by the civilized world. It should be the concern of the people of Oregon and of the Nation at large to insist that Theodore Roosevelt retain the Presidency for another four years; if he absolutely refuses, then it should be the duty of the Republican party to nominate a man who has been in complete sympathy and accord with his administration.

"Taft has proved himself a statesman. He is of splendid magnetism and I favor his nomination in case President Roosevelt cannot be induced to accept another term. I sincerely trust that the people of Oregon will give Secretary Taft a cordial reception when he comes here, for it is only necessary to come in contact with the man to feel the power of his personality."

COLONEL WALKER GOES EAST

ARTILLERY DISTRICT COMMANDER CALLED TO BOSTON.

He Is Succeeded in Command at Fort Stevens by Lieutenant-Colonel John V. White.

Colonel L. H. Walker, artillery district commander of the Department of the Columbia during the past two years, leaves his headquarters at Fort Stevens this week for Boston, where he has been assigned to command of the important coast fortifications. He is succeeded in command of this district by Lieutenant-Colonel John V. White.

Both officers are veterans of the Army in point of service and both have splendid military records. Colonel Walker entered the military academy at West Point July 1, 1867, and graduated June 12, 1871, when he was assigned to the Fifteenth United States Infantry, then stationed in New Mexico. He served on frontier duty in New Mexico and Arizona for some five years, during which time he was in command of one of the parties pertaining to exploration west of the 100th meridian, under the direction of Lieutenant George M. Wheeler, Corps of Engineers. In August, 1876, he was ordered to the military academy at West Point as assistant instructor of tactics and discipline, and remained on that duty for four years, when he rejoined his regiment in New Mexico, serving on the Mexican border and in Colorado for two years, when he transferred to the Fourth Regiment of Artillery, and served at Fort Adams, Newport, R. I., and Fort Monroe, Va., for some five years, when his regiment was ordered to Atlanta, Ga., and the Gulf coast. Here he served for four years, and was then assigned to Light Battery F, Fourth Artillery, stationed at Fort Riley, Kan., where he remained for over three years, during which time his battery was sent to Chicago, to assist in suppressing the labor riots.

In September, 1896, he was transferred to battery G, Fourth Artillery, at Washington, D. C., and at the beginning of the War with Spain was promoted to be Captain of Battery K, Fourth Artillery, and commanded the defenses of Fort Hunt, Va., protecting Washington City during that war, when he was ordered across the Potomac to Fort Washington, which he commanded for some two years, when he was promoted to Major in the Artillery Corps, and sent to command a battalion of coast artillery at Fort Hamilton, New York City. In September, 1903, he was ordered to the command of Fort Casey, on Puget Sound, where he remained some two and one-half years, and then, after a tour of some four months in China and Japan, was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel and ordered to command the Artillery District of the Columbia. He was promoted to Colonel, Coast Artillery Corps, January 25 last.

Lieutenant-Colonel John V. White graduated at West Point in 1871. He served in the First Artillery until promoted to Captain in the Seventh Artillery in March, 1898. He was promoted Major in August, 1903, and detailed for four years in the Adjutant-General's department. He served as Adjutant-General in the Philippines until November, 1905, most of the time in the Department of Mindanao, and from January 1, 1906, to June 30, 1907, as Adjutant-General of the Southwestern Division, with headquarters at Oklahoma City, and later at St. Louis. Upon the abolition of the division he was ordered to Fort Stevens, Or., and promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, January 25, 1907. Colonel White is not altogether a stranger in Portland, as he served at Vancouver Barracks from October 1, 1884, to October 1, 1886, as a Lieutenant in Light Battery E, First Artillery.

WEATHER LESS HOT

Day Fairly Comfortable With the Mercury at 89.

HUMIDITY TRIFLE HIGHER

Thermometer Stands at 68 at 5 A. M., and Climbs Steadily Until Late in the Afternoon. Cooler in the Evening.

HOURLY TEMPERATURES.

5 A. M.	68	12 noon	83
6 A. M.	68	1 P. M.	84
7 A. M.	67	2 P. M.	89
8 A. M.	73	3 P. M.	88
9 A. M.	77	4 P. M.	89
10 A. M.	81	5 P. M.	88
11 A. M.	81	6 P. M.	86

Relative humidity: 5 A. M., 60 per cent; 5 P. M., 41 per cent; average, 55 per cent. Yesterday, 52 per cent.

The sun yesterday appeared to be remaining in its normal capacity of warming things up comfortably, rather than in attempting culinary pursuits. It was disagreeably hot all day, to be sure, and yet the weather hardly seemed to justify comparison with a certain phase of destiny, as on Tuesday. The highest point reached by the thermometer was 89 degrees.

And yet Portland sweltered and perspired nearly as much as Tuesday when the mercury crawled up to 102 degrees and tried to break the local record. This was because the humidity was somewhat higher and it is the humidity that combines with the heat to make things uncomfortable for such unhappy mortals as have other things to do besides keep cool. The average humidity yesterday was 55 per cent as compared with 52 for Tuesday.

Suffering from the heat was not nearly so marked as on Tuesday and the temperature was not sufficient to play freaky tricks with the draw bridges as on the day preceeding. People who had to frequent the streets found themselves getting along with a relatively small degree of misery, provided they did not hurry.

The day started out warm. At 5 A. M. the reading at the weather office was 68 degrees and there were indications that Portland was in for another day of it. By 6 o'clock the mercury had not moved and at 7 o'clock it had dropped back a notch. Eight found it in the 70's, however, and by 11 o'clock it had passed the 80 mark by one point. Noon found the record at 83 and by 2 o'clock 89 had been reached.

The sun's motives were still in doubt but an hour later when the thermometer had retreated a point it was seen the day wasn't to be marked by any new heat records. Again at 89 the sun rallied and tried to get up into the 90's but the best it could do was 89 and it then gave up the struggle and retreated slowly down the line. By dark it was comfortably cool outdoors, with a faint but refreshing breeze in the air.

A list of the record days for the past ten years was compiled yesterday by the weather bureau and is as follows:

Day.	Year.	Deg.
August 5	1898	97
July 26	1899	93
July 20 and June 12	1900	90
August 14	1901	94
August 10	1902	97
June 7	1903	97
July 25	1904	100
July 8	1905	99
July 3	1906	101
July 30	1907	102

The highest temperature previous to Tuesday was 102, on July 23, 1891.

TELEPHONE GIRLS KEPT BUSY

Heat Increases Number of Calls More Than 10 Per Cent.

Because of the excessive heat yesterday and the day before, the telephone girls of Portland had much more work to do than usual. Tuesday the telephone was used 28,000 times more than on an average day, according to figures given out by the Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph Company, and yesterday the heat caused an increase of 21,050 in the number of calls.

An average Summer day's use of the telephone, as shown by a count, made July 10, is 207,000. Tuesday the telephone was used for 235,000 conversations, and yesterday the girls conected phones for 228,050 calls. Yet the 'hello girls," who are perhaps the busiest people in the city in hot weather, were at the same time cooler than the majority of people in the city. Realizing how much harder the girls have to work in hot weather, the company has installed along the switchboards a number of electric fans, so that each of the girls is constantly in the breeze that the fans throw out.

The hotter the weather, the busier the girls are. As the sun rises higher in the sky, the telephone is resorted to more and more, until in the afternoon it becomes necessary to increase the force of girls to answer the calls from the people who shrink from going into the streets.

Prepares for a Cold Winter.

ALBANY, Or., July 31.—(Special.)—Though yesterday was the hottest day of the year, a thief last night entered the residence of M. Sternberg here and took two Winter overcoats. He entered by a rear window and disturbed no other property.

TOO LATE TO AFFECT CROPS

Had Heat Come Earlier Yield Would Have Been Spoiled.

THE DALLES, Or., July 31.—(Special.)—One hundred and three degrees of heat was registered here today by the thermometer of the official weather reporter, S. L. Brooks. In the coolest and shadiest part of the city it was the highest mark reached since July 4, 1906. In other portions of town the mercury ranged from 105 to 110 degrees, the latter occurring in the east end, where there is no foliage to break the force of the sun.

The heat rose freakishly, jumping from 93 to 101 degrees between 11 and 1 o'clock. Had this scorching weather occurred a month earlier, as it did last year, the crops of this section would have been reduced from the maximum yield, which is now realized, to a 25 per cent crop.

Despite the intense heat, throughout this vicinity, no prostrations have been reported.

Goes to 104 at Pendleton.

PENDLETON, Or., July 31.—(Special.)—This has been the warmest day experienced in Pendleton this season, the official thermometer registering 104 in the shade. A slight breeze has been blowing all day, however, and the heat has not been oppressive. A brief electric storm tonight cooled the atmosphere greatly.

Falls Four Degrees at Roseburg.

ROSEBURG, Or., July 31.—(Special.)—Yesterday was Roseburg's hottest day, the mercury reaching the 100 mark. Today the thermometer showed only 96.

At the Theaters

What the Press Agents Say.

"STORY OF GOLDEN FLEECE"

Nance O'Neil Appears in a Great Role at the Marquam.

America's greatest tragedienne has found another part worthy of her tremendous power as an actress and is creating a sensation in the role of Media, the mythological sorceress who makes it possible for the Argonauts under the leadership of the faithless Jason to find the fabled golden fleece. The play is a beautiful one, and in the third act is reached the highest point of dramatic intensity. Miss O'Neil is splendidly supported by the regular company, reinforced by a great number of supernumeraries. The production is rarely beautiful, the wood scene in the second act being especially effective. Notwithstanding the warm weather, the audiences are large and appreciative and "The Story of the Golden Fleece" is a success both artistically and financially. If you haven't seen it you will be foolish if you don't go tonight.

"A Royal Slave" Matinee.

This afternoon at the Star Theater there will be a matinee of that beautiful Mexican romance, "A Royal Slave." The last of the Aztec kings is the principal character, one of the Montezumas called Aguilla. This role is played effectively by Frank DeCamp, and it is a star part. Mr. DeCamp is giving a first-class performance, which is not surprising, since he starred in the part for three seasons. Miss Eunice Murdock, as the Spanish woman, is second to DeCamp in importance and has the same part she played on the road for many months. The rest of the company is well cast and there is ample comedy provided by Charles Conners and Lillian C. Fields, the latter rendering a song.

"The Road to 'Frisco" Today.

There will be a matinee performance at the Lyric this afternoon, and the Allen Stock Company will again appear in that striking frontier drama, "The Road to 'Frisco." It is one of those plays that can always be relied upon. The action goes with a rush from the first to the last curtain, and there is such a strong heart interest and such genial comedy that it would be a dull person indeed who would not become enthusiastic. The Lyric is always cool, no matter how high the mercury may climb, owing to the excellent system of ventilation and artificial cooling that has been installed. It is the only place to go during the hot Summer days.

"THE UNDERTOW" MONDAY

Great New Play of Political Graft at Marquam Next Week.

The Stockwell-MacGregor Company, with Franklyn Underwood at its head, will be seen at the Marquam next week, commencing Monday night, in the startling new play of newspaper life and newspaper graft, "The Undertow." During the past season this has been one of the big hits of the Eastern cities, for the reason that, in addition to being a splendid play, it deals with live questions, the most serious that the American people are now facing. It is a vital, impressive story of life in our cities. It applies to Portland as well as San Francisco and other graft-ridden cities.

"The Westerner" at Lyric Next.

The next attraction promised by the Lyric management will be another one of those knock-out successes for which the Allen Stock Company is becoming famous. "The Westerner" has never failed to please an intelligent audience, and there can be no question but that it will be a wonderful favorite with Lyric audiences. The company will be so cast that no one will be out of his particular line of work. There will be one of the best times of the Summer for the showgoer in "The Westerner." Remember, the opening performance Monday night.

AT THE VAUDEVILLE THEATERS

What Women Enjoy.

There never was a woman who did not want to show her husband that she was master. "Taming a Husband," the headline act at the Grand this week, is, therefore, of especial interest to women. It is a laugh every minute and the acting is of a high order. Beatrice Moreland, the talented comedienne, and Stanley Johns are the interpretors. Cavana, a contortionist on a slack wire, does stunts which no other wire artist dare imitate. Miss Grace Orma is an entertainer on her own account. Those who imagine they have seen the best of coin manipulators should see Allen Shaw and then they will reverse their opinion. Shaw has no superior in this line of mistification. Night shows start at 7:45 and 9:30 o'clock.

CLOSES ANOTHER LEASE

J. Whyte Evans Secures Fifth-Street Quarter for 35 Years.

Another long-term lease was closed yesterday by J. Whyte Evans, whereby he secures control for 35 years of the quarter-block at the northeast corner of Fifth and Glisan streets known as lots 2 and 3, block P, Couch Addition. The property is owned by Rev. and Mrs. George B. Van Waters. For the first 10 years Mr. Evans agrees to pay $300 a month rental for this quarter. After that the rental will advance to $400 a month for the remaining 25 years. In addition to the lease, Mr. Evans secures an option to purchase the property any time within 10 years for $60,000. The lease was placed on record yesterday.

During the last three months Mr. Evans has closed more long-term leases than were ever before drawn in Portland. In addition to the leases on the Pittock and Pennoyer blocks, which were sold to the trustee company, Mr. Evans has secured contracts on a number of important downtown corners. The Van Waters property is held in his own name and may later be improved with a large building.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Although the barometer continues relatively low over the Willamette Valley, the high pressure area yesterday over Eastern British Columbia has advanced sufficiently far East to change the wind direction west of the Cascade Mountains, and it is much cooler at all stations from Seattle south to Roseburg. East of the Cascade Mountains the hot spell continues and the temperatures this afternoon ranged between 92 degrees at Baker City and 102 degrees at Walla Walla. The humidity at Portland was slightly higher than yesterday, and during the hottest part of the day the heat was oppressive, notwithstanding the thermometer was 12 degrees lower.

The indications are for showers in this district Thursday with lower temperatures.

FORECASTS.

Portland and vicinity—Showers and cooler, south to west winds.

Western Oregon—Fair south, showers north portion; cooler, except near the coast; south to west winds.

Western Washington—Possibly showers; cooler, except near the coast; south to west winds.

Eastern Oregon, Eastern Washington and Idaho—Thundershowers; cooler.

Property Sales at Colville.

COLVILLE, Wash., July 31.—Saturday's records in the office of the County Auditor showed a total consideration of $18,910 for real estate sold and transfers recorded on that day. Of this amount the Washington & Northern Railway and F. A. Blackwell, of Spokane, paid $7100. Aside from these transfers, the records show a considerable number of sales of other property in Newport to the Blackwell interests at good figures. The most important sale of Colville Valley lands during the week was the one made by William H. Pelker, of his home farm of 160 acres near Addy, to David R. Schively, for $5000.

Best Harbor For 600 Miles
At Bay City on Tillamook Bay

In all the magnificent stretch of sea coast, for 600 miles, from San Francisco to the mouth of the Columbia, there is only one deep harbor of any size and with any depth. This is Tillamook Bay. Here, there is sufficient area for an unlimited number of vessels, with ample dock facilities for innumerable ships. The channel is straight, 24 feet deep at mean high tide, safe, and easily navigated. The bay is seven miles long and three miles wide. Vessels carrying 1,000,000 feet of lumber have sailed out of the port at Bay City with no trouble whatever. Bay City is certain to become the greatest lumber-shipping port on the Pacific Coast. As sure as you are alive, every dollar you put into Bay City now will grow into ten dollars within five years. The lot opposite the Lytle Depot, listed at $7600, can be had now for $5000 spot cash. Free site for the first company that will establish a sawmill at Bay City.
