LINEMAN DIES IN MID-AIR

Autopsy will be held to determine cause. Coroner Not Certain That Electric Shock Killed John Carlberg. May Have Been Heat.

John Carlberg, a lineman 25 years of age, died at 4:33 yesterday afternoon at Seventeenth and Upshur streets from causes that have not yet been ascertained. It was at first supposed that he was killed by an electric shock, as he was working on heavy voltage wires for the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company at the time.

Chief Claims Agent Boynton, of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company, said last night that from the facts in his possession he believed the death resulted from the effects of excessive heat and heart disease.

When the police received notice of the accident, Captain Slover sent the patrol wagon out, but it had scarcely left the barn when Coroner Finley was summoned, it being found that Carlberg was dead.

Just prior to the death of Carlberg, Downing suffered a severe electric shock while working near the same place, and for a time his life was despaired of. He was removed to the Good Samaritan Hospital, where it was said last night that he would recover.

Carlberg took a position with the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company May 1, 1907, and, according to Chief Claims Agent Boynton, was an expert lineman. He was well liked by his associates. Nothing is known of his relatives.
