Varied Resources of City Library

Reference Department Offers Opportunities for Serious Study Not Yet Fully Appreciated by Patrons. BY LILLIAN TINGLE. THE resources of the reference department of the Portland Free Library are comparatively little understood, even by many people who regularly avail themselves of the circulation department, or frequent the periodical room. In order to appreciate fully the benefit of a reference library, one should try to do serious study in a place where such an aid is unavailable.

Therefore it is not surprising that during the summer months many out-of-town teachers, students and others make their headquarters in this pleasant, quiet, knowledge-lined room. By a new arrangement, any regular reader may obtain a "reserved" card which enables him to leave undisturbed on his table the pile of books in which he is interested. This plan saves much time and trouble to both students and attendants.

It is rather interesting to note some of the topics upon which special study has been done during the past month. The list includes: The Geology of the Black Hills, Independent House Telephone, Woman and Child Labor, The Making of Sand-Lime Brick, Analysis of the Springs of North Baden, The Race Question, The Construction of Concrete Piling, surely a sufficiently varied assortment.

Much work, too, is done in connection with the public documents, of which the library has a complete set, all very conveniently arranged and indexed. The method of handling and arranging these was recently very favorably commented upon by one of the librarians in charge of the collection of documents in Washington, D. C. More housekeepers ought to avail themselves of the practical information which is to be found in the farmers' bulletins.

The library is growing daily more practical and useful along technical lines. This is especially true in regard to architecture. During the past two years a fine collection of architectural plates (especially good in illustrating detail) has been arranged and classified. These who are planning their own homes will find this collection helpful, especially in the matter of interior decoration. In regard to engineering, not only are there all the published indexes, but also a special index of all recent publications and special articles. There is also a very useful collection of trade catalogues.

The assistants are always ready to make out lists of books and articles on any subject. Much help is given in the making of club programmes. There is a collection of these that is especially strong and suggestive. Many of them have been lent in different parts of the state.

The valuable "Old Oregon" collection in the west room is now all catalogued except some of the pamphlets—the rarest part of the collection. The art room contains many books that are usually far beyond the means of the ordinary library. To the Wilson collection, which was the foundation, many beautiful and costly books have been added by the kindness of Miss M. F. Failing. The most recent acquisition, which will be open for inspection very shortly, is a splendid eight-volume set of Rembrandt plates, costing $400.

The Audubon Bird Books, given by Mrs. W. S. Land, are in a specially made case in the art room. Portland is fortunate enough to possess the only set of these books to be found on the Pacific Coast.
