Growers Fear Large Losses if Weather Conditions Do Not Improve.

SOME YARDS ABANDONED

East Side Reports Are Less Favorable Than West of River, Still Price Keeps Low Despite the Gloomy Outlook.

The prospects are for light showers here Priday, but I do not think there will be a heavy rain. It will probably again be cloudy. The rain today was not general in the Valley .-L. Lodholz, local forecaster temporarily in charge of the Weather

These are anxious days and sleepless nights for the Oregon hopgrower. The crop-probably the largest ever grown in the state and on the eve of being harvested-is at that critical point where only a few days of bad weather would mean ruin. A short period of sunshine and dry air and the bulk of the crop will be saved. Otherwise the loss to the state will run into the hundreds of thousands.

Even with weather conditions favorable the entire crop of Oregon is not going to be gathered. The low market price of hops has made it difficult for growers to negotiate loans on the crop, and some of them have found it utterly impossible to raise money with which to pick the hops. The country and city banks have refused to advance money on the crops alone, and no farmer has enough faith in the future of the market to pledge his lands as security. The result will be that a considerable portion of the crop of the smaller growers will be left on the vines. The hops that will be thus sacrificed, however, will be those of inferjor quality, and it will be the best thing for all conrerned that they are not picked.

What is worrying hopmen most, however, is the blight that has attacked the yards in several parts of the state, and may become general unless the weather changes for the better. Mold, as the resuit of the presence of fice, appeared after the hard rains of a week ago, and the damp weather since then has only aggravated the trouble. It is impossible yet to state the exact extent of the dam-age, but allowing for the exaggeration, which is natural under the circumstances It may be said that a fifth at least of the prop will never find its way into the klins.

East Side Suffers Most.

The worst spets appear to be on the cast side of the river. In the big yards on the West Side comparatively little inon the West Side comparatively little in-lury is reported. In Clackamas County some of the yards have already been abandoned. Several yards near Oregon City, Woodburn and Butteville will not be picked because of their moldy condi-tion. Marion County is apotted, with some farms showing no trace of mold, while had conditions exist in neighboring while bad conditions exist in neighboring yards. On the west side of the Willam-ette the only signs of mold are in a few spots along the river. Generally speak-ing, the yards are better in the southern and than in the northern part of the Val-

Practically all the reports at hand are from infected yards, and when it is considered that less than 100 of the 1200 yards

If conditions become no worse Oregon will turn out about 125,000 bales of hops, and they will be of exceptionally fine quality, as the growers will find no in-ducement to gather hops of any but a prime or choice grade.

Low Price for New Crop.

production this year, provided the hops are all picked, at 2,000,000 cwt. The world's crop last year was 1,577,000 cwt. CONFLICTING YARD REPORTS

Growers Finding Mold on Their Hops Cease Picking.

SALEM, Or., Aug. 29.—(Special.)—
Various reports were received today from hopyards in this part of the Valley, some to the effect that much mold has developed, while other reports are that mold has not been found. From the different reports several conclusions are drawn by disinterested persons; that in yards that were sprayed, there is no mold; that in some sections there is no mold, even though the hops were sprayed; that in some sections a large majority of the yards have mold and the hops will be scarcely worth picking. carcely worth picking.

scarcely worth pleking.

It is also apparent that some growers are picking hops believing them to be free from mold, while in fact they are badly infested. Many of the growers examine only the lowest hops where mold has usually been found, but it is said that this year the hops on top of the vines are the moldy ones and these the growers do not examine.

In about a dozen yards in the vicinity of

In about a dozen yards in the vicinity of Mount Angel and Silverton, picking was abandoned today and the pickers discharged because the growers found that the hops are moldy. Wherever growers find that they have moldy hops they quit picking, for it is apparant that only first-class hops will bring a price sufficient to cover the cost of picking. In two or three days a pretty fair idea may be In about a dozen yards in the vicinity of or three days a pretty fair idea may be had of the extent of the mold. In the meantime dealers who are interested in boosting or bearing prices are using the condition of the yards to promote their

LANE GROWERS WILL NOT PICK

Many Yards May Be Plowed Up if Conditions Do Not Improve.

EUGENE, Or., Aug. 29.-(Special.)-A number of hopgrowers in Lane County will not have their crops picked this year, owing to the present low price of hops, the high price of labor and the gloomy outlook for a rise in the hop market.

The crop over the county will show a good average. Those men who will not harvest the crop, as a rule, say that it is the best yield they have had in years, in some cases the best they have ever Two or three yards were dug up last year to give place to crops in which there is not the gambling element there is in the faising of hops, and it seems probable that more yards will go this Fall if con-ditions in the market do not improve. The land on which hops are raised will that are much more certain as to price.

Being a poor mathematician, Anne disposed of several bumpers before she began to count-then she remembered her sick husband, and she was broke.

Officer Gaibraith observed her dejected condition, and thinking a ride in the city hack would cheer her, helped her in. Anne made no protest, it seemed good to be waited on, but when brought be-fore the Municipal Court yesterday morning the thought of her poor sick

WIFE STOPS PROCEEDINGS

Waiter Says He Thought His Spouse Had Secured Divorce, but She Entertains Contrary Opinion and Has Him Arrested.

When Mrs. E. F. De Divers started for the County Courthouse the other day to swear out a warrant for her did not know that he had secured a Heense to marry another woman, and that the wedding was to come off the same evening. After talking for a few minutes with a Deputy Clerk and the brother of the prospective bride, however, and looking up the record of the marriage licenses issued, she became certain that her husband meant to commit bigamy. As a result of these investigations De Divers is now in sail awaiting trial. His ball was fixed at $500.

Deputy Sheriff N. H. Bird was detailed to arrest De Divers Wednesday night. This would have been an easy matter had De Divers put in an appearance at 8 o'clock, the hour set for the wedding ceremony. The bride waited at 163 Wood street, and the minister waited, but no bridegroom was to be seen. Then the Deputy Sheriff, who lives near De Divers, went home and retired, leaving Ernest Sell-hinder, a brother of the prospective bride, to notify him in case De Divers appeared During the time when the ceremony was to have been performed De Divers was piloting schooners over the bar to his heart's content. He met Mrs. Minnie Johnson, his bride-to-be or not to-be, at 10 o'clock, and together the journeyed to a nearby saloon for a pail of beer. It was about this time that the Deputy Sheriff was awakened by a quick rap on the door, and in a short time had handcuffs on De Divers, and was on his way with his charge to the County Jall.

De Divers first meet Mrs. Johnson was filed without presentation of a formal claim and as soon as the papers were served at the Queile, the Savoy and other restaurants in this city and Seattle. Mrs. Johnson is 29 years old, and De Divers is of the same age.

Mrs. De Divers, who claims she has been his wife for five years, was, before her marriage, Miss Nellie McDonald. She is now living with her parents at 128 Spring street, at Mount of the same age.

The trial of John Conrad, husband of Essie Watkins, keeper of a North End resort, has been set for September 6. ents at 128 Spring street, at Mount Tabor. She married De Divers Decem-ber 24, 1903, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. H. J. Talbot. They lived at 1184 East Main street, and have one child 2 years old. It is said that De Divers believed his wife had secured a divorce, as when they separated several months ago and he went to Seattle she told him she intended to do so. SUES TO REGAIN DOWER RIGHT in the Circuit Court against S. B. She al-leges that upon the death of her hus-band Cobb took possession of the hand Cobb took possession of the property and now claims it as his own. This sult is the beginning of litigation by which it is hoped to clear the title property valued at between $20,-

Mount Scott Property Claimed to Be Part of Peck Estate. Mrs. M. L. Peck has brought suit

When Mr. Peck died the tract of 10 acres, one-quarter of a mile east of the city limits on the Mount Scott line, was worth but $1000 an acre, but it has since increased in value on account of the improvements put upon it by a number of people who purchased lots with a clouded title. A part of the property is said to be held by the Mount Scott Rallway Com-pany, and the balance by about 500 small holders.

The whole trouble arose over three mortgages for $6000, $2000 and $1500 upon which Mr. Peck borrowed money at various times. Upon the death of Mr. Peck the arrangements in regard to the mortgages were attended to by President Bowman of a defunct East Side bank. For some reason the dower rights of Mrs. Peck and her children were not properly cared for, and this furnishes the ground for the present sult.
