

TO BE CONSIDERED

High Prices Should Not Influence Young People Who Contemplate Marriage.

REV. E. M. HILL'S ADVICE

Mercilessly Flays Trusts for Forcing Men to Place Most Sacred Relation on Basis of Dollars and Cents.

Discussing the question, "Ought a Young Man to Marry Under Present Economic Conditions?" at the Taylor-street Methodist Church, last night, Rev. Everett M. Hill said that to ask that question is to insult every man and woman with a soul. The reason men are forced to place the most sacred relation in the world on a basis of dollars and cents, he said, is because the trusts have sold out for a song to a multitude of trusts.

Other Trusts Unimportant.

"We may boast for joy at the downfall of the oil trust, we may be glad the beef trust is throttled, though most of us would live longer and happier if we ate less meat; we may rejoice at the detronement of the copper trust or the steel trust, yet it profits us nothing. If all these trusts were reduced to the subservience of the common people, and the liquor trust still held sway, the foundation of unhappiness would still be ours. It strikes us at the point of deepest interest, entering into the holy of holies, the home.

Do His Steps, or What Would Satan Do If He Were an Editor?

In His Steps, or What Would Satan Do If He Were an Editor? was the topic discussed by Rev. H. C. Shaffer last night at the First United Brethren Church, East Fifteenth and Fourteenth streets. Mr. Shaffer sweepingly condemned practically all the methods of all newspapers. If he were conducting the newspapers of the country, Dr. Shaffer would reverse their management and "give the people what they need, not what they want."

Celibacy Not More Holy.

"Notice carefully that the Lord does not say that this condition of celibacy is more holy than the state of matrimony, a thing which a great church has declared, and for which it has suffered unspeakable things throughout the world, but especially in this country, where Christ said that the marriage relation is so holy that only those who are fit should enter into it.

Money Does Not Talk.

"Finance has but little to say with respect to this question. It is not right to deny that two hearts that are one in truth shall not be one in reality simply because of the wolf who howls that they cannot afford to wed. No particular stress in any generation can annul the fundamental need of the home. The general statement holds good that where there is a will there must be a way, and that where there is love there is a chance for love to get a living though butter is 40 cents a pound and going up, and bacon at 25 cents and not coming down.

GARBAGE AND WASTE

Rev. J. D. Corby Preaches on Problems of Modern City.

Much Now Regarded as Worthless on Refuse Heaps and in Slums Can Be Made Valuable.

Home-Coming Celebration.

In the Universalist Church of the Good Tidings, yesterday morning, Rev. James D. Corby preached on the subject "Can Evil Be Destroyed?" His text was "Overcome evil with good," Romans xlii:21. "My real text this morning," said he in the course of his sermon, "is a bottle filled with refuse from the street. Its contents are unpleasant to the eye, unclean to the touch, and offensive to the nostrils. It is a waste of time to try to get rid of it because it is not only offensive but dangerous. If left in the street, it breeds disease. Many cities have simply carted it from one place to another, they have dumped it into rivers where it has polluted the drinking water and caused typhoid.

Diabolical Management.

"What would Satan do, if he were an editor? What would be his policy if he controlled the press? The answer is: First—The general policy would be to place a paper before the people that would sell. And in order to sell a paper, he would have to make it interesting, and a large amount of the records of criminal proceedings, and the weaknesses of men and women, and the doings of the devil would doubtless continue the present plan. We can see the seed of the higher life and the seed of the lower life in the first page, sometimes in red ink, in order of course, to appeal to that class of persons who are naturally too sluggish to think without the aid of the crude coloring of crime pictures.

Weakness of Some Churches.

"The weakness of much that passes for religion is that it avoids the soil rich with rotteness. Many churches exert no more moral force than an afternoon tea. They are people who do not grapple with the world's villainess. We have vastly improved our methods but we have not developed long distance telephone salvation. The personal touch will always be necessary in religion. The moral message will accumulate so long as goodness is afraid of soiling its hands and virtue is afraid of getting its feet wet. A church that is converting no sinners is growing no saints.

Feast of the Virgin Celebrated.

The feast of the birth of the Virgin Mary was celebrated yesterday at St. Michael's Church with great solemnity, high mass being said at eleven o'clock in the morning. A cornet solo was played by Angelo De Dominicis, the great soloist of Chittenden's band. Mr. Vascetti, the popular tenor soloist, rendered a song. Solemn benediction followed the mass.

The Hebrew people throughout the world are celebrating the beginning of the Jewish New Year, 5667, dating from the creation. Special services were held last night at the Temple Beth Israel and by the Congregation Ahava, Shalom, and Israel, at the Abington building, 7:30 o'clock. Rev. E. V. O'Hara Speaks on "Dr. McLoughlin."

Priest Refers to That Piece of Old-Time Federal Legislation as "The Original Oregon Land Fraud."

Came Here 83 Years Ago.

In 1824 Dr. McLoughlin came to the Oregon country as chief factor of a great trading company. For more than 30 years he was autocrat of the entire territory. When they were big with the destiny of Oregon. Each year brought an increasing number of immigrants from the East. Dr. McLoughlin was a man of a calm and scholarly defense of the Catholic Church. Three years later Dr. McLoughlin made his profession of faith and received his first communion from the hand of Father Blanchet. Dr. McLoughlin's life was a life of sacrifice and self-denial. He was a man of a calm and scholarly defense of the Catholic Church. Three years later Dr. McLoughlin made his profession of faith and received his first communion from the hand of Father Blanchet.

Retired to His Land Claim.

"On resigning his office he retired to his Oregon City claim which he had taken possession of as early as 1825. Some of those whom McLoughlin had given assistance had already shown their ingratitude by trying to deprive him of his claim. In order to prevent trouble he bought up their pretensions but failed to ally their hostility. In 1850 the opposition secured the passage of a section of the Oregon Donation Land Bill confining McLoughlin's claim. The plot was carried out with the most outrageous duplicity and calumny. Its effect was to impoverish McLoughlin.

Convention Great Success.

The fifteenth convention of the Oregon State Spiritualists' Association, which ended yesterday, is said by those who took part in it to have been the most progressive ever held by the organization. The closing all-day meeting yesterday was a success from start to finish. Arrangements for the Abington building, was beautifully decorated, the sunflower (the Spiritualists' official flower) being everywhere in evidence; besides, a profusion of the flowers in season loaded down tables and stands.
