FOUND NO NEW CONTINENT

EXPLORERS DISCOVER DEEP SEA NORTH OF ALASKA.

Mikkelsen's Party Traveled 500 Miles Over Ice—Will Continue Operations Next Year.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The commanders of the Anglo-American polar expedition, which lost its ship, the Fuchs of Bedford, in an attempt to find a new continent north of Alaska, reported to the American Geographical Society today that the soundings disclosed no such land. This dispatch came from Erik M. Mikkelsen and Ernest Leffingwell, the joint commanders of the expedition, and was dated at Dawson, Alaska, September 10.

The explorers reported that their sledge trip north of Alaska covered 500 miles of sea ice and that they crossed the edge of the continental shelf twice. Their soundings, taken 50 miles off the Alaskan coast and beyond, were made to a depth of 300 feet, but found no bottom.

Next year, they reported, they will continue the exploration of the Beaufort sea, surveying the coast and making ethnological studies.

Pioneer Receives Serious Fall.

EUGENE, Or., Sept. 12.—John Stewart, an early Oregon pioneer, fell from an apple tree at his residence, No. Eugene Tuesday evening, striking on his head, causing concussion of the brain, and is in a critical condition, his death being momentarily expected. Five years ago next month his brother, Joseph, fell from the top of a headgate on the millrace at Springfield, and was killed, his neck being broken.
