AHTOM, FINANCIER, GOES TO ROCKPILE

Supposedly Destitute Chinaman Punished for Deceiving His Countrymen.

Induces Charitable Mongolians to Raise Relief Fund and Buy Him Ticket Home-Then Gets Drunk.

For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain the heathen Chinee is peculiar All of which has been said before and quoted numerously, but never has the thing been more fully exemplified than in the case of Ah Tom, supposedly a pau-per, in reality a financier. Tom was in the case of Ah Tom, supposedly a pauper, in reality a financier. Tom was in the Municipal Court yesterday, charged with being a penniless and worthless beggar, whereas the officials should, in reality, have been looking into the methods of finance whereby he has amassed the fortune he posesses. That is only incidental, however.

Some time ago Tom conceived the idea of returning to the land of his birth, that he might end his days in the happy land of his forefathers, far from the blighting influences of Occidental civiligation. It was about this time that he first appeared in Portland from some little country town, saying he had been the burnt out and had lost the fruits of a lifetime of work. Old, palsied, ragged, his pilght was sufficient to arouse the latent sympathies of a highlinder. And when he went among his fellow countrymen and spoke of the devils that pursued him here, waiting to plack the spirit from his body and carry it to perdition with the moment of death, their superstition as well as their sympathies were awakened.

Why should this failing old man be ney to the great unknown. Certainly he could not cultivate his soul here in the midst of a barbarian civilization, so far removed in distance and practice from all that is good.

The result was a comfortable purse of something over $200. A tender-heart dyoung Mongol who is a Christian on Sunday and a pagan the other six days of the week acted as solicitor of funds. This kindly worker, Yom Wing by name, used such of the money as was necessary. used such of the money as was necessary

But his confession was general and he made no reference to the fact that the particular contamination comes from the product of our broad, prosperous, im-posing corn-belt country. too far. The arrest was made by Police Captain Slover.

Wireless telegraphy is slow and ponderous compared with the way news of police doings travels in Chinatown. Even before the Captain had instructed the jailor to search the prisoner, indignant Orientals began pouring into the station. As best they could they protested against the locking up of Ah Tom. He was soon to leave America. He was old and poor and a fund had been raised for him. It was not right to take away his chance of going back to sleep amid the bones of his fathers.

"Search him and lock him up," said the Captain in a tone of finality, and there was a wail from the sympathetic concourse of heathens.

So they searched the poor, unfortunate old pauper. There was really no use searching him, for he was possessed of not a thing in the world. But it is a rule of the department to search all prisoners, and so they searched him.

In his pockets there was nothing but a rusty knife and a set of dice. Then Jailor Endleott got inside the coat and struck something hard. It felt like an old washer. He fished it out and it was $20 in gold. There was another washer of the same denomination and another and still another.

that Ah Tom was worth something like $3506.

The horde of big-hearted, charitable workers did not pause to learn how much money there was. They began thinning out when the first $160 was counted, and by the time the $250 mark was reached there wasn't a Chinaman romaining except Ah Tom, who was hardly sober enough to properly represent his race. Out around the corner there was a noise like a Chinese indignation meeting.

It went hard with Ah Tom in the Municipal Court yesterday. Judge Cameron said drunkenness was no uncommon or grievous crime; but the thing of supplementing an already comfortable fortune by appeals to charity was heinous. So the Court said that before so-journing to ante-mortem life of esthetic journing to ante-mortem life of esthetic quietude in the Flowery Kingdom, it was only right and fitting that Ah Tom should do penance for his Occidental sins. This penance, it was decreed, shall take the form of 30 days at breaking of rock.

This kindly worker, Yom Wing by name, used such of the money as was necessary in buying poor old Tom chop suey and roast pork, fish and such things as were needed to maintain the corporeal relationship between spirit and body until such time as transportation had been purchased. The programme included a passenger ticket to Seattle, thence to Vancouver, B. C., and thence to Hongkong by steamer. This paid, the venerable and unfortunate pligrim would have money enough to take him to the province of his birth, far up the Yang tse Klang, provided, of course, he didn't meet a few old-time friends and get mixed up in a sociable game of dollar-limit fan-tan there in Hongkong.

The fund completed, such clizens of Chinatown as had contributed to it were overcome by that righteous satisfaction which serves as the guiding Taht of public benefactors and charitable workers generally. They had given from 4 to 60 cents apiece and they settled back to enjoy $4 worth of satisfaction. And it was while Yom Wing, custedian of funds, was on his knees before the joss, asking safe journey for his protege to the land of Yen Shee, that the trouble had its beginning.

JOKE WAS ON WRONG MAN

Commission Merchant Accused of Having Elkskin in Possession.

A huge joke that was calculated for the sole benefit of Deputy Game Warden Greene, of Portland, resulted yesterday in a trial by a jury in Justice Reid's court of Herman Meizger, a Front-street com-mission merchant. He was acquitted in two minutes' time.

Recently a hide was shipped from Linoln County to Mr. Metzger, and was said to be a calfskin. Wishing to put up a job" on the Deputy Game Warden here. "job" on the Deputy Game Warden here, unknown "jokers" up in the woods wrote to Mr. Greene, saying that if he would investigate a certain package of goods just shipped to Metzger he would find an elk skin, possession of which is contrary to the law. Greene did as advised, and found the said hide. He arrested Metzger and the latter decided to fight the case. The case took up considerable time in Justice Reid's court yesterday, all the evidence being laid before the jury, which brought in a verdict of acquittal in two minutes.

borrowers to pay up promptly so that the assets of the institution may be well in hand by the time the reorganized bank is ready to resume business."

A. E. Reames, the attorney in charge of the reorganization plan, said yesterday that about $450,000 of the telephone bond holdings of the bank had been signed for by depositors, and that depositors were calling at the rate of 40 or more a day made ready to open for business. He expressed himself as sanguine of the uith mate outcome, and as $300,000 in new capital is assured, the capital of the reorganized bank will certainly be $300,000 and may reach $750,000 at the rate stock is being taken by depositors in the old institution.

One out-of-town creditor yesterday took $10,000 of the stock and expressed perfect satisfaction with the proposed plan for reorganizing the bank. A plan is beling formulated for the establishment of a band department to be run by the new concern in which holders of the bonds taken by depositors of the old bank may place their holdings on sale, in case they desire to realize upon them, and Mr. Reames is of the opinion that this department will charge no commission for selling the bonds, but is to be maintained solely for the convenience and benefit of the holders that have taken over bonds in part settlement of their deposit accounts.
