

SENATORS RESPONSIBLE HEAD RESPONSIBLE

Resignation of Judge Wickersham Result of Two Senators' Attacks.

CHARGES NOT SUSTAINED

Senators Nelson and McCumber Become Hostile to Alaska Judge and Try Their Utmost to Oust Him—They Partly Succeed.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Oct. 3.—The resignation of Judge James Wickersham, of Alaska, puts an end to one of the bitterest and at the same time one of the most important political fights that was ever taken on to the floor of the United States Senate. The Wickersham case is an extreme example of the wrong that can be done by the abuse of Senatorial power; its culmination is a reflection upon the Senate. It is a fight closed by the accused because he preferred to resign rather than undergo the contumacious inquisition which would have been his if he had stood his ground. He is a man of high ability and of high character, and his resignation is a severe blow to the credit of the administration.

Judge Wickersham was appointed originally by President McKinley and served four years with credit to himself and to the administration, but in that time he incurred the ill will of powerful mining interests in Alaska, and those interests, like similar interests in the States, had a pull in the Senate. When President Roosevelt reappointed Judge Wickersham in 1904 his intention was held up in the Senate by Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, and Senator McCumber, of Iowa. Mr. Nelson and McCumber, to make their protest stick, preferred charges against Wickersham, and while those charges were pending the Senatorial committee to act. Those charges served to prevent in 1904 his nomination was held up in the Winter of 1904-5. But the charges were sent to the Judge, and a year later, when his nomination went to the Senate, the answer was ready. And it was convincing to most men, but not to Nelson and McCumber. Meantime they had introduced new charges which served as a pretext for delaying confirmation for another 12 months.

Nelson and McCumber Are Active. The President took no stock in the charges, for he gave Wickersham a reappointment each time Congress adjourned, and when it came to the President's desk Wickersham's nomination. But each time the nomination was called up Nelson and McCumber had new charges to bring against Wickersham, and each time they were taken up by the Senate, which has a tender regard for the wishes of most members of that august body, would not confirm Wickersham, or if they did, they would do so on condition that he was objectionable to those two apostles of honor, Messrs. Nelson and McCumber. In season and out, Judge Wickersham was called upon to answer the charges of Nelson and McCumber, and each time he answered in a way that satisfied President Roosevelt and the best men in the Senate. He would not answer to the charges of Nelson and McCumber, and the President accepted the word and the judgment of this representative in preference to the charges of Senators Nelson and McCumber. He was satisfied that Wickersham was the victim of persecution, and so far as lay in his power he proposed to give Wickersham a square deal. Of course he could not force the Senate to confirm the Judge, but he could do practically the same thing in effect—he could nominate him again at the opening of each session of Congress and reappoint him upon adjournment, thus retaining him continuously on the bench. And that is what he did, and what he promised to do to the end of his term unless the Senate, in the meantime, treated Wickersham fairly.

Case Never Comes to Vote. But the Wickersham case was never given fair consideration in the Senate. Reidel was discussed in the Senate session; never was it allowed to come to a vote. Had it been put to vote Wickersham would have been confirmed by an almost unanimous vote. There were few Senators who would have voted with Nelson and McCumber; some have done so out of friendship for the Senators, but not many. Yet Nelson and McCumber knew very well that they could never beat Wickersham in a fair fight; they knew the Senate would never vote to reject his nomination; so they resorted to cowardly tactics. They sought Wickersham from ambush and to the extent that they prevented his confirmation, they won out. But they failed of their main purpose in that they could not get Wickersham off the bench. That was their thorn in their side. They found themselves between two fires. They knew the Senate would not back them up on a vote; they knew the President, after careful investigation of the facts, would never be prejudiced against Wickersham by their trumped-up charges, so they made a dogged fight which availed them nothing.

No lawyer of merit can afford to spend the best years of his life fighting for vindication, when his enemies hold the commanding card that stands between him and the vindication he seeks. Judge Wickersham saw that, no matter how friendly the President might be, there was no way of changing his status as long as Nelson and McCumber persisted in their filibuster, so he decided to end it all and resign. Nelson and McCumber will now be satisfied, to some extent though not nearly as well satisfied as if they could have induced the President to abandon Wickersham, or as if they could have induced the Senate to reject his nomination. But they are not. They are not satisfied. They are not satisfied because they know the Senate will not back them up on a vote; they know the President, after careful investigation of the facts, would never be prejudiced against Wickersham by their trumped-up charges, so they made a dogged fight which availed them nothing.

LIKE WESTERN MEN, BEST

Washington State Girl Tourists Criticize the Eiffel East.

Chicago Tribune.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Tribune of an aggravated form broke out among the State of Washington boosters—one young woman and one married woman were holding Park yesterday afternoon, and the party broke up and retreated to the Sherman House in confusion.

The cause—well, the reader must judge.

There were no signs of discord until Miss Kincaid, of Douglas County, a vivacious blonde, had her picture taken at the zoo, and Miss Anna Level, daughter of the Lincoln County Sheriff, and Miss Mabel Simmons got a man—Chicago product, at that—and went off by themselves.

Mrs. Howard Bramwell, of Whitman County, chaperon, was considerably vexed, but Philip R. Bates, of Portland, Or., payer of all expenses of the trip and thoroughly experienced in woman-kind, only smiled, and thereby proved himself a thorough diplomat.

Miss Kincaid monopolized the attention of Cy De Vry, head animal trainer, might have acted as an incentive for jealousy, it is said, but the girls would not acknowledge it. The cause of the party is the famous exposition of the city of Chicago, which was expressed when Miss Mabel Simmons, of Cheelan County said: "Whitman and Douglas Counties were getting all the good things published and written to the home people as though the rest weren't working."

In the party are girls of all sorts, and with their cowboy hats and red felt, they are looking like a party from the West. When arranged for dinner, with white frocks, they appear the same as the typical Chicago girl.

During the trip to the famous town exposition every girl in the crowd has received from three to a dozen proposals of marriage, both verbal and written.

When one of the silly love missives fell into the hands of an outsider there was a scene. Miss Irma Dunford, of Benton County, finally gained possession of the writing by pleading:

"Let me see it, I don't want your home fellows to think we have been flirting. We have simply been having a good time."

Miss Stella Parkins, of Whitman County, daughter of James A. Parkins, president and principal owner of the Bank of Colfax, and who has a big ranch in her own right, expressed her feeling in the following manner:

"We are considerably short of them out in our country," she said, "not for matrimonial purposes, but for business reasons. People in the East think that our way there are nothing but cowboys and Reubens and women who are always clad in wrappers."

"They would be surprised to know we have our interior decorator," she said, "the same as Chicago. There are no duds in our section, but a few cigarette fiends are in evidence. Don't you know that they use the better element of manhood? The Western man may be a bit uncouth and rough and ready, but he is more gallant and has a far greater admiration and respect for woman than the Eastern man."

Frank M. Woodruff, assistant curator at the Academy of Science, was trying to interest the girls in the huge mammoth in the Academy of Science. They were there for perhaps two minutes when Miss Lillian Clark, of Walla Walla County, blurted out impatiently:

"Oh, show us the live ones, the dead ones are not interesting."

"Oh, the dear little squirrel," shouted Miss Lillian Ausman, of Asotin County, as she fed the animal a handful of peanuts. "We have these, but they are wild, and we have live deer and porcupine, and not dead ones like those inside."

"Oh, you sweet thing," said Miss Kincaid to a girl who was frowning and shaking her hand against the wire netting, "you remind me of a bucking broncho."

"The interest in animals became exhausted, man again became the topic of conversation."

"Say, you Chicagoans have New Yorkers skinned a mile," said Miss Kincaid to the Chicago girls, "and you fellows barely touch the fingers of your hand in sissy fashion as they say 'How do' you men here take a good grab and put feeling into it. Those Easterners are better than you are."

"I never stood in a streetcar until I came East," said Miss Grace Crooks. "But I am not complaining about Chicago. Your city is a whole lot like my home town."

Miss Level is small and looks like an ordinary Eastern society girl in evening attire. In her street costume she shows the features of an athlete. Miss Dunford owns a big ranch, is a first-class stenographer and earns $6 a day keeping the court records of Benton County. She is the champion larrikin of the party and yesterday afternoon issued a challenge to one Rodgers, doing stunts at a local theater, to beat him in a roping contest. Mr. Rodgers stands ready to back her in the sum of $100.

TEST WESTERN HEMLOCK

Trials of Strength of Green and Dried Timbers Being Made.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Oct. 3.—For some time the forest service has been making an important series of tests at Seattle to determine the strength of Western hemlock. The work has been done at the Washington State University, and the material used was obtained through the cooperation of a number of lumber manufacturers. The most of it was cut upon the western slopes of the Cascade Mountains in Oregon.

The beams selected for the tests are 16 feet long, and 8 by 18 inches in section. Forty-five of them were tested in the green state, and an equal number will be air-dried and then submitted to the tests to see what loss they carry. The results of these tests will show the comparative strength of the two classes of material.

The introduction of western hemlock as a building material has met with considerable opposition. The prejudice against it is chiefly on account of its name. It has been looked upon as being in the same class with eastern hemlock, although the two species differ considerably in their mechanical and physical properties. So far as the tests have been completed the western hemlock has proved to be a first-class structural timber, suitable for all construction purposes except the heaviest kinds of buildings. At the same time the regular and even texture of the wood makes it suitable for flooring, millwork, paneling and inside finish.

BREAKWATER BRINGS COAL

First Cargo of Fuel to Come to Portland by This Route.

The steamship Breakwater, with a cargo of 350 tons of Coos Bay coal for the Portland market, sailed from Marshfield at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The Breakwater is a day late and will not reach Portland until early in the morning. She was no doubt delayed on account of fog.

The coal on the Breakwater is the first shipment of fuel that this steamer has received from Coos Bay. An effort has been made for some time to get the stuff to Portland, but delay in erecting suitable bunkers has prevented the steamer from loading.

We Cure Varicocele

Varicocele causes congestion of the blood in some of the most vital blood vessels of man. It causes a dull, heavy, listless feeling, which is often mistaken for nervous debility or general decline. Varicocele results from partial paralysis of the delicate nerve fibers that control local circulation of the blood. The muscular coating of the veins is deprived of nervous control and becomes inert and relaxed. The blood vessels expand from the pressure within. The circulation becomes sluggish and clots form in little nooks and pockets that constantly enlarge as the relaxation continues.

MEN ONLY

"I claim to know a great deal about a few ailments, rather than a little of all human ills."

THE WORK OF A SPECIALIST IS THE DOING OF A FEW THINGS BEST.

There is not a physician living who can claim to be proficient in the treatment of all ailments. A specialist is one who has attained the highest possible degree of proficiency in all departments of medical science would require half a dozen lifetimes of study and as many more of practical experience. The regular practitioner is proficient in a large number of ailments, but he cannot be an expert in all. He cannot be a specialist in all. The specialist must first become proficient for general practice, and must then go on to proficiency in a few of those conditions and diseases more difficult to understand and more difficult to cure.

What Weakness Is and HOW I CURE IT

VARICOCELE

A thorough cure without pain or cutting. Every case of varicocele I treat proves the efficacy of my method. I do not use any medicine, and the folly of resorting to surgery. In most instances it is even unnecessary to remove the patient from the office. My treatment is simple, and the patient is able to return to his office only. Do not submit to the knife and hospital expenses, when a complete and permanent cure can be had without the loss of time, and without pain or cutting.

SPECIFIC BLOOD POISON

Others dose the system with mineral medicines scarcely less dangerous than the disease itself. The best they hope to do by this treatment is to keep the disease from manifesting its presence upon the surface of the body. Under my treatment the entire system is cleansed. The stagnant of blood is destroyed. Every symptom vanishes to appear no more. I employ harmless blood-cleansing remedies. They are remedies heretofore unknown in the treatment of this disease. They cure by neutralizing, and absolutely destroying, the poison in the system. Such cures cannot be other than complete and permanent.
