

CORTELYOU WILL DECLARE POLICY

Will Not Answer Wall-Street Yells, but Will Prevent Upheavals.

CHANGED TACTICS NEEDED

West Has Plenty of Money to Lend Railroads, but Will Not Trust the Men Who Speculate With the Surplus.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 21.—(Special.)—Cortelyou, who returned to his desk today, declined to make any statement on the condition of the country financially, but in a speech, he declared that the West is not far in the future, he will tell what the Treasury Department has done and will do, under his direction, to prevent speculative business affairs whenever speculative banks are confronted with a crisis.

West Distrusts Magnates.

Interstate Commissioner Lane, who recently traversed the entire West, says the banks are crammed with money. He found that millions that might be loaned to the railroad companies to improve their systems are locked in banks. Mr. Lane says the West is anxious to help the railroads, but the people have lost faith in the great capitalists of the industry. There has been too much cold-blooded speculation and manipulation.

Cannot Fool the West.

The railroad magnates are committing a grievous error in trying to deceive the public. In the manipulation which has been in progress, Wall street has concealed a campaign, it is said, directed by the reactionaries, to weaken the President with the people. It does not deceive the people of the Far West. The agonizing cries of the railroads over destructive laws have been heard to some extent in European money markets, but they fall upon deaf ears in the Western United States.

PUTS DEAD CHILD IN CAVE

Destitute Father Tells Pitiful Tale of Poverty.

COLFAX, Wash., Oct. 21.—Deputy Sheriff Dickerson and Coroner D. B. Crawford were called to Elberton today to investigate a strange death that was called to their attention by the Elberton sexton, E. Zaim, a farmer of Western Whitman County, had driven to Elberton cemetery, a distance of 36 miles, and asked that the sexton bury a box containing the body of his 8-year-old son. Having no burial permit and knowing that there was scarlet fever at the Zaim home, the sexton at once notified the Colfax officers. Mr. Zaim related his pitiful story as follows: On September 24 the son, George, aged 8 years, died of spinal trouble, after two years' sickness. The child had been before Wallis Walla and Portland medical experts, and the case puzzled all. At time of death only a skeleton was left. After preparing the body for burial, Mr. Zaim obtained a dry goods box and, placing it as best he could, placed the child and box in a cave near the home. Having a child buried at Elberton, where he had once owned a harness shop, his next thought was to get there, but for some time he had been without money. Then the other children were taken ill with scarlet fever, and the home was quarantined, and no one knew of the death except the family. After the quarantine was raised the father left at once by team with the body for Elberton, and was soon in more distress because of his poverty, the county will be asked to help him, and he will be released from arrest.

SHIP CHRISTINA HITS ROCK IN FOG

British Freighter, 14 Miles Off Course, Will Be a Total Loss.

CREW OF 32 ALL SAVED

Bound From San Francisco to Portland in Ballast—Strikes Northwest Seal Rock Off Point St. George—Is in Four Fathoms.

CRESCENT CITY, Cal., Oct. 21.—The British freighter, Queen Christina, bound from San Francisco to Portland, struck the Northwest Seal rocks off Point St. George about 1:30 o'clock this morning, and according to Captain Harris, will be a total loss. There was a dense fog at the time the vessel struck and she was 14 inches off from her course. She now lies on an even keel in four fathoms of water about three miles from shore and is surrounded by rocks. A heavy sea is running. When the Queen Christina struck she settled rapidly, and the crew took to the rigging to save themselves. First Officer Monroe, with 16 of the crew put off in a small boat and reached Crescent City at 10:45 this morning. The remainder of the crew, 16 in number, remained on the vessel. At that time the pumps were going and the bulkhead was holding. The steamer Navarro at once put off for the scene of the wreck. On account of the fog, the heavy sea and the rocks she could not get close in, but managed to pick up the remainder of the crew in two small boats.

The Queen Christina is a steel-screw steamer of 288 gross tonnage, was built in 1901 by the Northumberland Steamship Company, Limited, and is owned by the Dunlop Steamship Company, Limited. Her dimensions are: Length 290 feet, breadth 48 feet, depth 20 feet. She left San Francisco in ballast, in charge of Captain Harris. The place where she went down is the identical spot where the wreck of the Brother Jonathan occurred several years ago when 200 were lost.

CHARTERED FOR WHEAT CARGO

Queen Christina Bound for Portland Flouring Mills Company.

The British steamship Queen Christina, sailed from San Francisco Saturday for the Columbia River. She was under charter to the Portland Flouring Mills Company to carry a full cargo of wheat to the United Kingdom. The circumstances which placed the ship near St. George's Reef are not known, but the master was well out of the course laid down for steamers. Taking a departure from a point 1 1/2 miles to the westward of Blunt's Reef whistling buoy and with Cape Mendocino bearing E. N. E. distant 5 1/2 miles, the course to Cape Blanco is N. N. W. (N. 2 1/2 W. true) for 43 miles. This course should bring the light abeam distant 7 miles. On this course a vessel would pass 1 1/2 miles to the westward of Northwest Seal Rock, which is the most westerly point of St. George's Reef. There is an inside channel, but this is used only by the most skillful of coastwise navigators and then only in clear weather. St. George's Reef is a group of sunken rocks and ledges, extending 6 1/2 miles northwest and westward from Point St. George. Northwest Seal Rock is about 10 miles to the northwest of Crescent City.

MAKE IT "CRYSTAL WATER"

Another Name in Substitution of Portland's Bull Run.

MEDFORD, Oct. 21.—(To the Editor.)—I note in Sunday's Oregonian that George H. Himes wants the name of the Bull Run River changed to "Tewalkum" or "Talbukum." What a jawbreaker either would make!

Why not adopt a name for the river that every man, woman and child can pronounce in a loud voice, without fear of being corrected by some one who has studied Indian names? Call it "Crystal" river and then we can refer to the water as "crystal" water. This name, I think, would quench the thirst of anyone who saw it in print, and would not leave a bad taste. Eastern visitors would tell their friends about Portland's "crystal" water. How they enjoyed bathing in Portland's crystal water. The name itself suggests cleanliness and purity.

Away with the Bull. Give it the Run. Steer it to the rear. HERMAN KOHRBE, Formerly of Portland.
