Finzer, of the Oregon National Guard, who is an enthusiast on the subject of rifle practice, has been striving to effect such an organization for some time past and his efforts will likely be brought to a head following the arrival in the city of the president of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice. General Drain will speak on the important subject of rifle practice during his stay in the city and will also join with General Finzer in establishing the state association. General Drain will be tendered a reception this night at the Armory by the officers of the guard.

"Under Southern Skies" at the Helix

Major Edward Crofton, Willard Perry, Lella Crofton, Elsie Beroid, Colonel Robert Mavor, F. E. Mortimer, Burleigh Mavor, Harry Neslo, Ambrose Mavor, Jessie Edinger, Colonel Paul Daubeny, W. J. Hurley, Estie Hampton, Beale Burnes, Miss Alice, Annie Mortimer, Miss Anna, Kate Morris, Mr. Tom, James J. Ryan, Uncle Joshua, Patrick Donohue, Aunt Danahy, Annie Mortimer, Phyllis, Jennetta Wolf, Anner Lizer, Browne DeMont, Lonzo, Alton Thomas, Bastard, Walter Howard, Edgar, Thomas Towanage, Little, Olive Brown, Susie, Etta Long.

THIS is a play that has succeeded in weathering the gales of several seasons and always turns up smiling each year with a new cast. It was on view for one night only at the Helix last night and in justice to all it must be said that the company this year is better than that we had last year. The play was originally produced in New York and actually had a Broadway run. If memory serves correctly Grace Crofton played the original Stella Crofton. That in itself is something, for although Grace George is no great shakes as an actress, she has qualified among those who belong and deserves some consideration. Her successor in the role this year is Viola Bancroft, evidently an acting school pupil just released, who gives a fairly acceptable performance. Willard Perry, who is cast for the part of Major Crofton, is really a good actor and his work shines by comparison with the other members of the company.

"Under Southern Skies" was written by Lottie Blair Parker, who is responsible for "Way Down East" and other plays that rank among the creditable efforts of American playwrights. It is a reasonably interesting play with some good points and the audience which saw it last night was apparently greatly pleased. Tonight the Helix will entertain Isabel Irving in "Clyde Fitch's" new play, "The Girl Who Has Everything."

J. M. ACHESON SPEAKS AGAIN. Your bank is temporarily closed, but we are open. It has come to my ears that we are heavy creditors of the bank, the Merchants National. The fact is, had every one dug up for their banks as much as J. M. Acheson did for his, there would have been no holidays. October 14 we paid our bank $40,000. We only owe them about $15,000 now, nearly all of which is not due until January 1. So that lie be nailed. The Merchants National is sound with securities, in my judgment. My sister has her money in there, and never even tried to pull it out. I start for the East tomorrow morning to arrange matters with our creditors—to pay 100 cents on the dollar, I'll do nothing else. I'll be no party to any 40 or 50-per cent settlements—mark that down. Simply, we are in the same position as a bank—we have the goods, the security, etc., and can pay 100 cents, but, like a bank, we must have time.
