

KEEP LIQUOR OUT OF DRY TERRITORY

Tillman Wants Government to Respect State Prohibition Laws.

KNOX FINDS THE METHOD

Would Make Liquor Subject to State Law as Soon as It Enters State. Culberson Speaks on the Money Stringency.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—In the Senate today resolutions were introduced by Tillman, asking the Interstate Commerce Commission to report whether any corporation engaged in interstate commerce is the owner of the stock of any other corporation carrying passengers and freight, and calling on the Interstate Commerce Commission to define the Federal law and the laws of the states in respect to control of the liquor traffic under the interstate commerce law.

These resolutions provoked considerable debate and were finally referred to committee, though one of them was transformed into a bill. Culberson spoke on his resolution calling on the committee on finance to investigate and report upon the cause of the present financial stringency and to recommend measures for the prevention of a recurrence. The resolution was referred to the committee on finance.

Tillman on Prohibition. Tillman's resolution was as follows: "That the committee on interstate commerce be instructed to consider and report by bill or otherwise what legislation is desirable or necessary to enable the states in the exercise of their police powers to control the commerce of liquors and all alcoholic beverages within their borders so as to avoid the cause of temperance and to prevent the encouragement by the United States Government of illicit dealing in the same."

Knox Supplies the Remedy. Knox suggested that the whole difficulty could be reached through a bill. "Draw one," suggested Tillman, whereupon Knox prepared an amendment to the Wilson law.

Culberson on Money Crisis. Culberson, in discussing his resolutions on the financial stringency, referred to the messages of the President in which he suggested the necessity of legislation in the near future and said that either the President had changed his mind or that Congress was loath to carry out the recommendations.

LUMBER CONTRACTS AWARDED San Francisco to Furnish Large Amount to Canal. WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Contracts for furnishing approximately six million feet of lumber of certain specified size for delivery at La Brea, in the Canal Zone, were made by the Canal Commission today.

JEALOUS HUSBAND KILLS (Continued From First Page.) The killing seems to have been the result of Bradley's jealousy for his wife, directed against almost every man of her acquaintance. His cruel treatment of her because of his belief, that the attentions of others were being accepted by her, and interference of the relatives and friends of Mrs. Bradley's family, of whom Gittings was one, was well known.

he wanted the afternoon off, as there was some — he wanted to see. I knew that it would do no good to refuse him; that he would go any way, so I told him to go. That is the last I saw of him." Mrs. Bradley's Story. Mrs. Bradley tells the following story: "I took occasion to go down town today after dinner and remained away until time to get supper. After I had started to get supper my husband came in. 'What are you doing?' he demanded. I replied that I was getting supper. He went and got his gun and coming back to me in the kitchen and said, 'G—d— you, you need get no supper for me. I hear that — has come around here again.' With that he began to beat me, throwing me to the floor and raining blows on my head and body. My little boy, seeing what was happening, ran to the nearest telephone and called up my father's house, saying that he was afraid his daddy would kill me, and to come up right away or to send a policeman. Bradley left me after beating me black and blue and when my son came back he ran down to my father's house to tell them about it. After a while, it must have been about a quarter to 7, Bradley came in again in an awful hurry. He grabbed me and said: 'Where is my hat?' I replied that he had gone out with his hat on. 'Where is my hat, you tell me or I'll beat you again,' he said. I told him his hat was in the trunk. He went and got it. 'Now,' said he, 'I've got on of the — good-bye,' and with that he rushed out.

Discription of Murderer. Perhaps a description of Bradley had been sent out to patrolmen on their beats earlier in the night, but from the nature of the inquiries over the telephone and from the mere announcement of the shooting, as they called over the telephone, asked of the police operator whether there was anything doing, and whether Captain Bruin had anything for them. The laconic answer was, 'Tell him to look out for that fellow.'

had about $50 with him. Bradley is said to be a member of the Woodmen of the World. Mrs. Bradley spent last night with her neighbors for fear that Bradley might come back and kill her.

Police Neglect Case. At midnight, more than five hours after Policeman Gittings had been killed, Police Captain Bruin began to take active interest in the murder of one of his patrolmen. When the news of the murder reached police headquarters detectives were detailed on the case, but neither Captain Bruin nor Captain Slover took enough interest in the murder apparently to visit the scene of the crime. It was cold outside and word had reached the station that Bradley, after beating his wife a second time, had reloaded his revolver and was looking for trouble. Just before 12 o'clock Captain Bruin betrouthed himself of Andy Vaughn's bloodhounds and telephoned Detective Vaughn, asking him to bring out his dogs, and in an automobile, with several detectives, the first real search for the murderer was then begun.

Between the time that Officer Gittings met his death and the calling out of Detective Vaughn and his bloodhounds, Captain Bruin and Captain Slover contented themselves with attending strictly to the station duties. A casual visit to police headquarters would never have discovered that a member of the force had been slain. No one was busy—yes, there was one busy person about the station—that was Lawyer J. H. Hitchings. He was there for a whispered conversation with Slover and Bruin. Several times during the night of Friday, as they called over the telephone, asked of the police operator whether there was anything doing, and whether Captain Bruin had anything for them. The laconic answer was, 'Tell him to look out for that fellow.'
