CAPTAIN THOMAS BUNDY NO MORE

Picturesque and Well-Known Waterfront Character Dies at Advanced Age.

MANY YEARS A SAILOR

Established First Large Bath-House and Did Much to Make Swimming a Popular Summer Sport on the Willamette River.

Captain Thomas Bundy, an old-time resident of Portland and one of the most picturesque characters on the local wa-terfront, died at his home, 561 Grand aveterfront, died at his home, 561 Grand avenue, at 7 o'clock last night of cancer, complicated with diseases of old age. He was 57 years of age and this city had been his home for 15 years. He was the proprietor of the Neptune Bath-House at the foot of Cast Sherman street, which he established soon after he came here. Captain Bundy was been in England, but went to see when a youth and spent went to sea when a youth and spent nearly half his life in sailing the Great Lakez. His only blood relatives in this country so far as known, are two nieces, daughters of an only brother, who reside in Chicago, and a nephew living in Oklahoma. He was cared for during his de-clining years by his adopted son, Joseph Valentine, who survives him. Capialn Bundy was born in Brighton, England, May 12, 1820, and in the year 1844 he sailed as an apprentice seaman out of the port of London, landing at Quebec, Canada. Afterward he made his ma-tine headquarters at Buffalo, N. Y., and sailed the Great Lakes for 40 years.

Lived in San Francisco.

About 16 years ago Captain Bundy was smitten with the Western fever and landed at San Francisco, where he assumed a contract to build sail and rowboats, but the venture did not turn out a money success, and he left for Vancouver, Wash, where he did odd jobs in carpenter work. Next, he moved to Oregon City, where he built one float for a bathhouse, and at this period he first became acquainted he first became acquainted with his adopted son, Joseph Valentine, who has been his faithful companion ever since. The Oregon City specula-tion was too slow for the energetic tion was too slow for the energetic spirit of the old sea captain, and he moved to this city about 16 years ago, locating at the old stamping ground at the foot of Elisworth street. Here he built a small float, where he hoped to teach Portland people to swim, but he was not known and didn't advertise, and patronage was slim. To make financial ends meet, Joe Valertine—or Bundy, as many people call him—worked in a neighboring lumber mill and helped to support Captain Bundy, who was beginning to get infirm with the weight of his years. the weight of his years.

"I'll make a bathhouse pay here yet," confidently announced Captain Bundy in those early days to one or two intimate friends. But the matter hung fire. Just at this period a well-known member of the Multnomah Athletic Club happened to think that the bathhouse was in such a quiet spot that It was conveniently suited for young women assimmers who shunned the It was conveniently suited for young women swimmers who shunned the publicity of the club swimming pool. The result was that society people began to be interested, among them being Mrs. Helen Ladd Corbett, Mrs. Holt C. Wilson, the daughters of Mrs. J. B. Montgomery and others, who soon became proficient swimmers.

Resort Became Popular.

'Have a swim at Bundy's" soon be-"Have a swim at Bundy's" soon be-came a Summer salutation among Port-land's swelety folks, and old Captain Bundy and his adopted son, "Joe," prospered accordingly in this world's goods, and they gradually added to their bathhouse plant. Others than society people began to patronize Bundy's, and at times the place was so crowded that the captain was forced. so crowded that the captain was forced to reserve certain hours for particular patrons. Houseboats began to dot the river banks here and there, and the foot of Elisworth street became a live-

Her place.

His white silvery hair, pleasant smile, sociable ways and kindly welcome for 'all who came to see him made Captain Bundy a social favorite. He did not interest himself in boat rowing or yachts, and frequently said that he was "too old for such things." Neither is it recorded that he ever in a sensational manner reward any one sensational manner rescued any one a sensational manner rescued any one from a watery grave. "I just keep a bathhouse, that is my business," he often said, with a simple digpliy that was all his own. It is recalled that Captain Bundy rarely went into the swimming pool to give lessons, and that these were generally given by an assistant.

Oregonian tried to make Captain Bundy talk about his past life, but the veteran suddenly turned shy. With great difficulty he was induced to give his birthplace, age, etc., and then stopped.
"Ever married, captain?" was asked.

Story of Marital Devotion.

"My wife died at waverley, N. Y., about 40 years ago," was all that he could be laduced to say. But the captain didn't tell of his loving devotion to that wife, when they lived at Buffalo, N. Y., Mrs. Bundy's baby died suddenly and she began to be afflicted with mind trouble. She became a confirmed invalid and for 20 years her husband was her devoted nurse. She was unable to recognize him until about the last, when shortly before her death was unable to recognize him until about the last, when shortly before her death she opened her eyes, smiled in affection, and said: "Tom, you've been a good husband to me. I've been sick a long time, haven't I?"

Captain Bundy's intimate friends say that he once admitted having been married three times and that all his wives are dead. It is understood that one of his marriages was unhanny. one of his marriages was unhappy. Three years ago he suddenly started to tell the story about "that woman," but stopped. He also admitted serving but stopped. He also admitted serving in the British navy and helping to capture African slave dealers, but could not be induced to tell his experiences. His declining years have been made pleasant by the devotion and loving care of his adopted son, "Joe," and in speaking of this the old captain recently said: "Joe has been on the boat with ine all these years, and he could not have been fonder of me if he had been my own son. He never once spoke a cross word to me, and he's kinder than a woman." Joe possesses considerable inventive ability and is elever at mechanics. The captain has had many boy proteges whom he materially helped along in the battle of life.

Leaves Valuable Proberty.

He managed to earn and save money which, with good judgment, he in invested in Portland real estate when values were a good deal lower than they are now. Captain Bundy's only surviving brother, who then lived in Chicago, visited the old boathouse at the foot of Elisworth street two years ago, but he has died since then.

Old saits are generally inveterate ago, but he has died since then.

Old saits are generally inveterate story tellers about the ways of the sail and breeze, but Captain Bunay wasn't one of them. His life was a simple and religious one and he couldn't be induced to talk about himself.

The funeral will be held from the family residence tomorrow afternoon, but the hour has not been set.

ALBANY, Or., Jan. 19.—(Special.)—Rev. Father William McGbee, assistant rec-tor of the local Roman Cathelle Church. has been chosen rector of the Catholic Church at Roseburg. Father McGhee is a former Albany boy who was educated for the priesthood in California and recently took up his first work here. Besides assisting Father Lane in Albany he has preached at Lebanon, Scio, Jefferson and other surrounding towns. His work here has been uniformly successful and this leads to his selection for the work at Roseburg, which will be his first exclusive charge.

Boys Fined for Being Rowdies.

BAKER CITY, Or., Jan. 19.—(Special.)— John Clark, John Christiansen and Joe Church, of Haines, were arrested last Friday and on Saturday were brought be Friday and on Saturday were brought be-fore Alf. Curry, Justice of the Peace, to answer to the charge of criminal tres-passing. They pleaded guilty and were fined the sum of $5 each. Only the night before the boys had been in this city and John Clark was taken in by the police for tearing down a quarantine flag in Chinatown. They are mere lads but seem to be inclined to commit acts of rowdyism.

Little Snow in Mountains.

ALBANY, Or., Jan. 19.—(Special.)—Less snow is reported in the mountains of this part of the state this year than for a great many years. This Winter only the highest peaks and ridges are covered, while the valleys, even though far up in the mountains, are free from snow. Re-ports from the upper valley and head-waters of the South Santiam River are to the effect that there is no snow at all now on ridges and in canyons where the snow is usually seven or eight feet deep in January.

In tribute to his dead comrade, with whom he saw service while the Second Oregon was in the Islands, Colonel McDonell last night said:

"Frank B. Coyne was a faithful soldier. His services as a member of Company H, Second Gregon Volunteers, were honest and helpful in every respect, and I doubt if anything better could be said in his honor. During the campaign in the Philippines I sppointed him one of the relief committee to visit the sick and wounded members of Company H who were confined in the different hospitals. His noble efforts in ministering to his unfortunate comrades cannot be too highly commended, and his cheerful disposi-tion undoubtedly brought sunshine to many an unfortunate, beridden through

I. With expressions of deepest grief and sorrow the Department Commander announces to the order the bremature demise of our beloved comrade, Past Post Commander Frank B. Coyne, of Colonel John M. Stotsenburg Post No. 2, who departed this life at 4 P. M. December 10, 1907. after a brief but a severe illness.

Taken from the midst of a host of comrades and intimate friends, without natice or warning of any kind, the news of his untimely and sudden death whilst fin the prime of life, must be anguish and pain # to every member of this organization; and, aside from the sorrow caused by the loss of such a friend and comrade, the department commander must add the additional bereavement suffered by the order as a whole and his post in particular. His histor and record in the order has been a loss and relord in the order has been a loss and glorious one and cannot be surpassed unless it be by his sterling qualities as a man, a citizen and a soldier. Courageous and gallant, honest and brave, possessing a most remarkable faculty for making friends, his great personal magnetism made him a friend in need and a friend indeed to all, with never an evil thought for another, his name blazons on the roll of the many vetarans who have answered their last muster in these distant lies. The records of the desartment show past Post Commander Coyne to have been a charter member of his post and an indefatigable worker in the order from the time of its inception to the hour of his death. As a presiding officer of his post he won aurels for it, and gathed the admiration and esteem of all of its members; as a worker in the post and on department committees he has ever been found where his presence was most needed, and success of times was due only to his energy and real. HARRY H. BANDHOLTZ. The old saying that the world owes every man a living is true, but every man also owes the world a life. The man who is selfish in the name of religion, is not a religious man at all. Many men are parading under the garb of religion who are no more than miserable hypocrites. On the other hand, many people are essentially Christians, who, if asked the question, would say. "No, I am not a Christian."

It is very essential that we be ready for whatever life has in store for us. The majority of men who go into business make a fallure of it at some time in life. And yet, in spite of the loss of money, these men may he worth a great deal. They start in again, and in many cases succeed in finding building material in the mass." "No.

Every man should make a life, not merely a living. You may call it Socialism, Judalam. Christianity, or whatever you like, but anything that helps a man to rise higher, to give his life in its fullness, is religion. You haven't found it all, though, until you find the thing which appeals to the whole man. Christ does that. And that is just why I am in sympathy with the work of the Y. M. C. A. It is not for us to worry about the world to come. We want God now, to help us to live better. Every man should live the Christ-life because it is right, not because of the reward of the punishment he will receive. It is for each man to say, "I will do my level best in order that I may reach the level of my best."

Preceding the address, John Backly, a native of Switzerland, rendered a num-ber of selections on the zither, which were much appreciated by the men present. The Centenary Male Quartet also gave several numbers. The meeting opened with a stereopticon lecture by M. A. Kees, in which a number of the curiosities of the Oregon woods were shown.

Dr. A. A. Morrison Preaches Ser mon Especially to Athletes

The morning services of the Trinity Episcopal Church yesterday were attended by the members of the Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club in a body, as a mark of honor to the pastor, Dr. A. A. Morrison, who is a member of the A. A. Morrison, who is a member of the club. The sermon was addressed particularly to the members of the club, the text chosen being the words of John in the second chapter of his first epistle, in which he says: "I have written unto you young men because you are strong."

Dr. Morrison sa'd that the strength of Christian manhood is not merely physical prowess, but consists in the development of the whole man—body, soul and spirit. He appealed to the men present to strengthen not only their bodies, but their minds with their aggregative thinking and their clear, aggressive thinking, and their souls by accepting of the Christ life in its fullness.
