Sun Hides Its Face.

"It was midday, and there was dark-ness over all the land for three hours. Nature was sympathizing with her dying Lord. The sun seemed to refuse to look upon such a deed of shame and nature shuddered when its King was dying. It may be supposed that during this time the noises around the cross were in some degree hushed, but at length the silence was broken by a cry of agony and despair from the lips of Christ. As Dr. Stalker has said. 'It was the most appealing sound that ever plerced the atmosphere of the earth.'

great Augele, going into the gallery in his cloud days, would ask to be brought to the Torso or the great Greek, and feeling the masterpleces, would exclaim. "I still learn?" The head alone is not the object of education. The heart, too, must be cultivated. Not share wits is the sole aim of culture, but strong, well rounded character.

The first leason we shall note is one from the life of the Magter. The impressions that come to us on the first day of school abide during all the years that follow. Every gesture is watched and studied. From Christ we may learn the lesson of optimism. There is not one note in all the music of his coul that Jars or makes a discord. We must also learn the lesson of optimism, come with me to school and we will study a lesson in resignation. Sorrow comes to all, The ancients said the beat way to meet it is with set teeth and a clenched list, crying defiance to the fates that sent it.

Thieves Do Work Deliberately and Overlook Nothing in Search of East Side House-Police Have No Clew.

Burglars entered the home of Joseph O'Connor at 50 East Twenty-second street between 11 A. M. and 11:20 P. M. Saturday night, and carried off virtually everything of value to be found. The crime was reported to the police, who so far have obtained no tangible clue to the perpetrators. The discovery of the robbery was The discovery of the robbery was made at 11:20 o'clock Saturday night, when Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor returned home. As they attempted to enter the front door they were unable to open it with the key, and were compelled to attempt an entrance from the rear door, which was wide oven. Articles of every description were tossed here and there in every spart-ment. Clothes closets were stripped of their contents and the various articles of wearing apparel scattered over the floors; sideboards had been ransacked and every article of any value was missing. Even the bedding had been torn from the beds and dresser drawers

Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor made an inventory of the missing articles. The work occupied them well into the night.

They found that burgiar or burgiars had taken more than 1921. taken more than 225 pieces of jewelry, sliverware and various trinkets, souve-nirs and keepsakes, some of which are treasured highly by the victims, for they cannot be replaced.

Entrance to the house was gained by prying open a window. The burglars immaged the lock of the front door, probably in an effort to open it to permit of exit should they be interrupted. It is believed by the police that two more men participated in the burardly have ransacked the place so ther oughly. It is believed that two men performed the actual work, while a third stood guard on the outside, to give warn

Mr. O'Connor is so auxious to recover a part of the robber's booty that he is thinking of hiring a private detective to search for some of the booty which may be pawned in this city. Captain of De-tectives Broin has assigned Detective Tichenor and Acting Detective Sergeant Jones to the case
