What are conditions now? Both domestic consumption and foreign experts of plaks and chums have increased steadily and rapidly. Annual requirements for these grades are now in excess of 1,000,000 cases. We cannot pack that quantily. We have this year, but we can't do it next year. The small carry-over (less than 200,000 cases) added to next year's pack sannot possibly reach 75 per cent of a normal demand.

In the United Kingdom conditions are again almost normal. The scare is over. November deliveries at Liverpool were 19,580 cases, the largest for that munth since 1902. Prices have advanced from the 6d gills in Jahuary, 1907 to 21s 22s 6d in January, 1908. Stocks at Liverpool are at the lowest point since 1901. The United Kingdom took but $7.517 cases red Alaskes from our 1906 pack, and have taken about 240,000 cases from our 1907 pack, and would take more if they were to be hind.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The short con tracts which were put out in yesterday's de-clining stock market made the source of the demand which carried prices toward recovery today. The bears were prompted to cover partly by the lack of verification of cover partly by the lack of verification of some of the rumors which helped to carry prices downward yesterday, but more decidedly by the fact of flie decline offering a small profit in the buying of stocks. The market dwindles to narrower proportions from day to day, and the professional traders are easer, therefore, to take a quick profit when it offers. The recovery today was sporty and interrupted and there were points of continued weakness in the list. As the recovery proceeded, the demand lessened and left the trading at times in a condition of stagmation.

The news of the day offered no evidence The news of the day offered no evidence of important changes in the conditions which have led up to the present dul and neglected market. Items from scattered sources, representing the resumption of factory operations which had been suspended on account of the financial depression, prompted a helief fin a gradual recuperation in the industrial conditions, but the contradiction of additional curtailment in other places or other lines of industry leaves the situation unsettled as to the progress of revival.

places or other lines of industry leaves the situation unsettled as to the progress of revival

The copper industry is a center of depression, and securities of companies involved in it are showing lower prices in some cases than prevailed during the panie episode of last Fall. That metal declined again today both in London and at the New York metal exchanges, and accumulating stocks in Europe threaten a discontinuance of the only demand that has been a factor of any importance in the trade for some time past. Discussion was kept alive also by the decision of the principal steel producers to hold prices. Reports persist in the manicial district of a possible reconsideration of this determination by the leading steel industrics. A reason given for holding prices at the present time is the unlikelihood of lower prices attracting effective demand from the railroads until conditions are propitious for the financing of the purchases of material. Securities of companies with large maturing obligations to meet, and which have shown at the same time heavy stronds in the rate of estraings, continue to sufer in the price showing in the market. low 34 today, touching a lower price than for many years past.

There was a common downward tendency in discount rates in London and on the continent, which was to the advantage of investment securities. Foreign exchange here, however, made a further strong rebound, bringing the advance from last week's figure for demand sterling to fully one cent in the pound. There is also a distinctly stronger tone in the local market for time money. The transfer of funds remitted from abread for subscriptions to the Wheat Depressed in American and European Exchanges.

SHARP DROP AT CHICAGO

World's Visible Supply Too Large for the Health of Values. Some Export Buying at New York.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—The wheat market was weak all day and prices declined nearly 2c from the close of resterday. At times there were moderate rallies on covering by shorts, but sentiment was exceedingly bearish throughout the day. The decline was caused by extreme weakness in nearly all the principal wheat markets or flurope and by liberal increases in the European and the world's visible supply, the gain at the latter being estimated at 4,100,000 bushels, compared with last week. The market closed weak, May opened % 51c to 1% $1 to lower at 91% 20%, sold off to 91c and closed at 91%.
