HUGHES THROWS OFF ALL RESERVE

He Impressively Declares Belief in Party as Standing for Principles.

FAITH IN POPULAR RULE

Governor Admits Applause Cheers Man Lonely in Office—Folk Says Hughes Would Make Best Republican President.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Governor Hughes had a heart-to-heart talk with 300 members of the City Club, whose guest he was at dinner tonight. Breaking through his usual reserve, the Governor touched on his relation to the state, and his words, delivered with impressive solemnity, evoked cordial applause and responses on the part of the others that amounted to a personal tribute. Along with Governor Folk of Missouri, Mr. Hughes had accepted an invitation to take part in a discussion before the club on the subject "The City and State." When he arrived at the banquet hall he received an ovation that apparently touched him deeply. Responding to the reception, he said:

Man in Office Feels Lonely.

I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart for this token of your good will. A man in office feels lonely at times. He wonders whether after all what he is trying to do is appreciated. It is the hardest thing in the world to be a public official and not become a cynic, and I submit that enthusiasm, which must furnish the motive power for his endeavor is found in the unsolicited and general approval of those of his fellow-citizens who have nothing to ask and who desire nothing but the welfare of the people of the state.

Many Working for People.

I have been very much encouraged during my work in finding in every part of the state such organizations as this. You have no idea, even here where so many of you have been so long interested in public questions, of the numbers of men throughout this state who unselfishly are devoting themselves to the improvement of the Government and the betterment of social conditions. It is a time when any one who is acquainted with the facts must feel like taking heart and realizing that, while many are prostituting their opportunities to selfish advantages, there are hosts of good men and true who are endeavoring so far as in them lies to secure better conditions and a realization on the part of the representatives of the people of their true duties to their oaths of office.

Believes in Parties.

I am a party man and I am a party Governor and I have no sympathy with the idea that the parties depend for their success upon the blind following of any leadership. I believe in party organization, because it is an effective means of standing for certain commonly accepted principles. I believe in party merely because it is the only means through which an organization can express itself effectively, but I believe in making the party appeal to the people upon the basis of principles and putting up candidates who will stand the test of the closest scrutiny and I believe it to be best for the people, if every elector is required to give the consideration that is necessary to express his individual choice with regard to every candidate for office, and I also believe within the party in the utmost freedom.

Nothing can be more mistaken than to try to protect a party against itself. That is the mistake in trying to protect the people against themselves. That results logically in despotism somewhere, and we might as well give up our forms of government.

Good Government All Way Down.

Now, I believe most thoroughly in this: That in a country like ours, where everything depends upon the wisdom, the discrimination, the honesty of the electorate, you cannot have good government at the top unless generally you have good government at the bottom. You cannot expect that by some means you will have superiority in the government that is remote, while in the government that is close to your own home your interests are neglected; and the first consideration of American citizens should be to see that the government in his own district is right, that the government in his own city is right, not neglecting that the Government of his nation should be what he and his fellow citizens are entitled to have it.

Mr. Hughes during the evening was also for a short time a guest at the dinner given by the Hudson tunnel officials in celebration of the opening of the tunnel today and at the banquet of the Benevolent Association of the police department of New York City. At each place he spoke briefly.

Folk Booms Hughes.

Mr. Folk praised Mr. Hughes' stand on the question of racetrack gambling, and added:

I am not sure just what kind of a meeting this is. I do not know whether it is simply a gathering of citizens or whether it is a Republican caucus for the purpose of advancing the candidacy of some one for the Presidency. If it is to be the latter, why, I might be somewhat out of place, being a Democrat, and as such, of course, hope for Mr. Bryan for President. I could say this, if in the wisdom of this country they should see fit to elect another Republican President, I don't think a more honorable man could be found anywhere than Governor Hughes of New York State.

FOLK ON "ERA OF CONSCIENCE"

Discusses Moral Awakening in Regard to Public Affairs.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Attacking racetrack gambling as a prolific breeder of crime and supporting the efforts being made to end this form of gambling in this state, Governor Joseph W. Folk, of Missouri, aroused the Civic Forum at Carnegie Hall tonight. Mr. Folk's subject was "The Era of Conscience." He declared that within a short time the legalized vice of racetrack gambling would be a thing of the past from one end of the country to the other. In the era of conscience now beginning, he said, stock and grain gambling must go.

Mr. Folk began by calling attention to the new epoch in our National life, which opened six years ago, saying:

The ethical awakening shows signs of becoming universal and lasting, instead of local and transitory. From the yesterday of six years ago today is a revolution in the consciences of men.

He said that until a few years ago the public was considered "a stupid, ignorant creature, void of understanding and incapable of protecting itself"; "that the public has a conscience that can tell right from wrong is a thought of comparatively recent origin"; bribery "was generally regarded with indifference or despair." He painted a vivid picture of the unconcealed corruption in Legislatures and publics, dishonesty of insurance officials, giving and taking of rebates and passes on railroads.

War on Race Gambling.

Then he gave a word-picture of the "constant stream of young men passing through the criminal courts to the penitentiaries, made embezzlers and thieves by the alluring gambling of the racetrack." He told of the fight he made to have racetrack betting declared a crime in Missouri, and how he finally won. He answered the plea that this would destroy the breeding of fine horses by saying:

There have been more fine horses raised in our State without gambling than when gambling on horse-racing was licensed. However that may be, it is more important to breed men than horses; and all the blooded horses in the world are not worth the ruined life of one young man.

He predicted that the public conscience would end this form of gambling in New York and all other states, as the open gambling-house has disappeared. He then continued:

Stock Gamblers Must Go.

Stock and grain gambling are under the ban of this era of conscience. The transactions that amount to gambling on the rise or fall of the market should be prohibited, and severely punished wherever they may take place, and with them will go one of the greatest evils of our country. The bucket shop is already condemned, and if the stock exchanges do not clean themselves of gambling they will be cleaned out by the people, for conscience has written that the gamblers must go. The gambling mania is the outgrowth of inordinate desire for wealth, and with its abolition business, and the prosperity that comes from business, will be upon a more moral, and, therefore, a firmer foundation.

It has not been long since it was a common idea that directors of corporations were privileged to do lawless things that as individuals they would not think of doing. The people are beginning to know that contempt for law is no less reprehensible when plotted over a directors' table than when shouted under a red flag at an anarchists' meeting, and they frequently stand related as cause and effect. Corporations have been too often used as masks to conceal the crimes of individuals. The era of conscience demands the same standard of morality for corporations as is required of the individuals that compose them. The elimination of watered stocks and inflated values is not an unreasonable demand of the public conscience. Because they are unjust to the public and compel the public to pay dividends on fictitious values, the public protests against them, and this same conscience, with its sense of justice, would as readily assert itself to protest against unfairness toward the individual aggregated under the form and fiction of a corporation as it would to protest against injustice toward the individual citizen. It is not corporations the people complain of, but the abuses of power on the part of corporations.

Conscience in Politics.

He declared for the regulation of the changes of public utility corporations, saying this public right was now generally conceded. He continued in substance:

Under our system of government every citizen should be a politician in the sense that he expresses an opinion, in a proper way, on all public questions, but no man in this country should be a politician in the sense that he depends on politics for a living. Corrupt officials represent the people just as honest officials do. The corrupt official represents the activity of the lawless, and the aggressiveness of special interests.

The saloons are now learning that they must do business according to law, or they will not be allowed to do business at all. In places where they had no option but to obey the law they are professing a wholesome respect for the law.

This public conscience is teaching a respect for law on the part of all. If the law is not enforced then the liberty of a majority of the people to make law is taken away.

The corporation magnate should realize that he must give that respect to the law regulating the conduct of his corporation that he asks others to give to the law protecting the property of his corporation. The anarchy of capital breeding contempt for law should no more be tolerated than the anarchy of labor breeding riot and disorder. That lawlessness begets anarchy whether at the top of society or at the bottom of society, is becoming an accepted fact. That men, no matter how great their wealth, must be obedient to law, as well as the poorest of men, and that the greatest corporation in the land must be subject to the statutes, as well as the smallest business, is a demand of the new era.

Tariff a Moral Issue.

Conscience revolts against privilege, whether it be the privilege of lawlessness or the special privilege conferred by law. It matters not whether that privilege be in the form of a tariff, so arranged as to foster monopoly, or a trust to control the prices of the necessities of life, or rebates to favored shippers, or the running of saloons or gambling houses contrary to law. These things are prohibited by the moral law—the law of conscience. Behind every political question there is a moral question. Whenever a class of wrongdoers is attacked they always try to place themselves behind a community of some business interest. The prosperity that rests on wrong-doing is not the right kind of prosperity. If the country had to choose between great prosperity coupled with crookedness and less prosperity and more honesty, it would undoubtedly take the latter.

Let us assail not men, but the evil men do; not business, but the evildoers in business. The only way to stop evil, either public or private, is to turn on the light, and let the people know who the rascals are. Publicity is the best remedy for civic wrongs.

The republics that have tottered off the stage of the world into oblivion, did not die for lack of material wealth, but for want of moral health; they ceased to exist, not for lack of money, but for lack of morals.

In this era of conscience so important to the American people let us be conservative in charging wrongdoing, lest injustice be done in charging where it does not exist. But once sure of the evil, let us be radical in its extermination.

The exposures of wrong-doing in business and official life do not show a moral degeneration but a moral regeneration. Even now wealth, regardless of its source, is not worshipped with the same devotion it used to be. The question now is, not how much one has, but how honestly did he acquire what he has.

The President of the United States sent a remarkable message to the Congress a few weeks ago, devoted to moral ideas. Such a message from a President six years ago would have been received with derision. In this era of conscience it received applause, regardless of political faith, and the great leader of the opposition party gave it his hearty and sincere approval. We are now learning that a rascal is a rascal still, no matter with what party he affiliates, and a violator of law is a criminal, no matter what business he may be engaged in.

Beckham Three Votes Short.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 25.—The Senatorial ballot today was without result. The vote follows:

Beckham 56, Bradley 55, Blackburn 12, Campbell 3, Allen 1, Lorich 1. Necessary to elect, 59.

A telegram from Congressman Ollie James was read urging all Democrats to support Beckham as the Democratic nominee.

BUSY DAY IN LIMA

American Naval Officers Lavishly Entertained.

BASEBALL FOR JACKIES

Jolly Tars Enjoying Their Holidays Ashore—South Americans Extend Royal Welcome to Their Guests From the United States.

LIMA, Peru, Feb. 25.—The entertainments in honor of the American naval officers continue unabated, and Lima society is enjoying a series of brilliant functions, such as seldom has been witnessed in the capital. This afternoon there was a reception at the American Legation and a baseball match in the bull ring between nines from the warships, and this evening the National Club will give a ball. The gala performance at the Politeana Theater last night brought out a crowded house. Lima society was well represented, while among those present were 33 American officers, including three Admirals, Minister Combs, Lieutenant Cordier, the American military attache and several members of the Cabinet. The Presidential box was given over to the visitors. President Pardo himself was not present, as he was celebrating his birthday at his home.

In the final scene of the opera, the American and Peruvian flags were displayed on the stage. This brought out prolonged applause, in which the ladies present were conspicuous. Admiral Thomas stood up and bowed his acknowledgments to the audience. At the commencement of the performance the orchestra played "Hail, Columbia," and the Peruvian National Anthem. The audience stood. The conduct of the American sailors on shore continues to be excellent, and has won the praise of the Peruvian press.

ASSEMBLE 50 WAR VESSELS

Great Fleet Will Anchor in San Francisco Harbor.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25.—From present indications it is estimated that there will be about 50 United States warships of the various classes assembled in San Francisco Bay with the arrival of Rear-Admiral Evans' fleet early in May. In the battleship class, the fleet of Admiral Evans probably will be joined by the famous Oregon, now undergoing repairs in the Bremerton Navy-yard, and the Wisconsin, at present at Mare Island, will go into commission on April 1. This will make 18 battleships. Besides there will be four protected cruisers, eight armored cruisers, 10 topedo-boats and destroyers and a number of vessels of the auxiliary class, supply, repair and hospital ships and colliers.

The armored cruisers Washington and Tennessee, of Admiral Sebree's "pathfinder" squadron, at present in this harbor, will leave the latter part of this week for Puget Sound for an overhauling at the Bremerton yard.

The battleship Nebraska sailed this afternoon for the Bremerton Navy-yard.

FLEET EXPECTED AT HONOLULU

Coal Being Stored Up Sufficient for Use of Battleships.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25.—Advices from Honolulu of February 19 say plans are already beginning to be laid for the victualling and entertainment of Rear-Admiral Evans' fleet, should it come to Honolulu. The addition of the 20,000 men whom the fleet may be expected to bring to the population of Honolulu will quickly exhaust the normal supplies of fresh vegetables and island fruits grown here unless large additions are made to the area cultivated.

Although there has been no official announcement that the fleet is coming here, there is a feeling of certainty that it will. There is now here and on the way to arrive within a few weeks fully 60,300 tons of coal belonging to the Navy. This coal has all been brought here since the announcement was made of the sending of the fleet to Pacific waters. For the ordinary purposes of the Navy at this port, 4000 or 5000 tons a year is all that is needed. Hence the provision of 60,000 tons here now is looked on as practically conclusive that the fleet is coming.

GIVES NOTICE OF ARRIVAL

Secretary Metcalf to Notify Cities Ahead of Time.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Secretary of the Navy Metcalf today said that he expects to announce two weeks ahead of time the itinerary of the battleships up the California coast to San Francisco, which will give ample opportunity for the various cities at which the vessels are to stop to make arrangements to give the sailor boys a hearty welcome. He also stated that it was his intention to permit the newspapermen aboard the vessels to remain until they reach San Francisco.

When the fleet goes up to Puget Sound it is unlikely that more than a squadron of vessels will remain at Seattle for any length of time, because of a lack of anchorage facilities for the entire fleet in the waters there.

Heavy Requisition for Stores.

MARE ISLAND, Cal., Feb. 25.—Telegraphic orders have been received here from the Navy Department for all stores, provisions and coal for the cruisers Tennessee and Washington, to be delivered before Saturday next, in order that no delay will be necessary in the sailing of the ships for the South. The orders were a surprise to naval officers, as it was not understood that the cruisers were under rush orders. Large requisitions have been received here from each ship.

REFUTE CRITICS OF SHIPS

start on the voyage before the publication of his article.

Recurring to the subject of responsibility of the Naval officers for criticisms of the Navy, Tillman asked the Admiral if he knew of any officers other than Commanders Sims and Hill who had written reports or made criticisms which afterwards were made the basis of attacks upon the Navy.

"I do not," replied Admiral Converse.

"Was there any difference of opinion among members of the Board of Construction in regard to matters such as the position of the armor belt, turret construction and ammunition hoists?" was asked.

"The members of the Board were unanimous in approving the designs used."

Modifications in Turrets.

The Admiral stated that a change had been made in the turret construction of the Delaware type, which is now building, in that a two-stage ammunition hoist has been used. He said this change had not been made with any idea to additional safety, but because greater speed was possible. He declared that not a single accident that has happened on any of the American battleships had been due to the open turret; that all the accidents had originated at the breech of the gun and that the obvious remedy is additional screens between the breech and the ammunition charges prepared for reloading.

Tillman here suggested a responsibility which Admiral Converse was not willing to assume.

"You, as an expert, deny the charges that Reuterdahl brings. Are you willing to back up your position with your experience and the knowledge you possess of the construction of battleships in other navies and cross-examine Commander Simms and Lieutenant-Commander Hill, if they should come here and attempt to substantiate their views?" the Senator asked.

"No, sir, I prefer not to do that," replied Admiral Converse with emphasis. He made it clear that he did not care to be brought into controversy with fellow Naval officers in such a manner.

Apologize to the Admirals.

Tillman explained that what he intended was that the Admiral should give to the committee pointers on which to cross-examine witnesses who had attacked the Navy.

Admiral Capps will be heard tomorrow.

Just before adjournment Perkins said to the Naval officers:

"We ought to apologize to you for calling you to refute such articles as this."

"That's true," said Hale, "but it is written in such a vein that a layman could not understand how absurd the charges are. It attracted the attention of the whole country, and we had to investigate."

Martin, Perkins and Gallinger laughingly suggested that Mr. Reuterdahl should be set off the fleet, if a convenient barren island could be found in the Pacific Ocean.

CORPSE NONUNION; ROW

RIOT AT JUNEAU DURING FUNERAL OF MINER.

Union Men Lock Priest From Church and Try to Stop Progress of Hearse.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 25.—A cable special to the Post-Intelligencer from Juneau says:

Two Servians, miners, one union and the other nonunion, died yesterday and the burial of one almost precipitated a riot in which the police were called on to restore order.

The union man was buried peaceably, but when the priest in charge of the funeral services attempted to say mass for the nonunion miner, he found the church door locked. A mob of 200 union Slavonians requested the priest to refuse to bury the nonunionist. The priest declined to heed the demands of the Slavonians, who refused, in turn, by force, to permit the body of the nonunion miner to be taken into the church. The disturbers attempted to stop the hearse by holding at the horses' bridles and succeeded in dragging a number of men away from the funeral procession.

The marshal attempted to restore order, but for the time being he was powerless. The crowd followed the remains to the cemetery and made another disturbance there. Order was finally restored. No one was injured.

BENSON NOT A CANDIDATE

Refuses to Enter Senatorial Race Against Fulton.

"I will not consider it under any circumstances. Fulton is good enough for me."

The foregoing is substantially the response Judge H. L. Benson, of Klamath Falls, now on the Circuit Court bench, made yesterday in reply to a telegram sent from Portland requesting him to become a candidate for United States Senator. The telegram requesting Judge Benson to enter the Fulton-Cake-U'Ren contest was forwarded by two Democrats, G. Y. Harry, of this city, and John Robertson, of Madras, Crook County. Mr. Harry was for years prominently connected with the labor organizations in this state and was a member of the Lewis and Clark Exposition Commission by appointment of Governor Chamberlain. Mr. Robertson is "a merchant at Madras. Their message to Judge Benson was as follows:

"Recent political developments menace the interests of the people of this state. Will you consider nomination on Republican ticket as United States Senator? The signers of this wire, as you will recognize, are Democrats."

TRACKS LAID TO SIERRA

Western Pacific Built Beyond Oroville, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25.—With the completion today of the Western Pacific tracks up into the Sierras to a point on the north fork of the Feather River, 19 miles above Oroville, material began going forward from Marysville and Oroville for the erection of the Great Western Power Company's gigantic plant which will be rushed to completion so that it can begin furnishing electric current by October 1.

VOTES AGAINST FORAKER

showed that the discharged soldiers had a good record as soldiers and that it is the duty of Congress to pass legislation providing for their reinstatement in the Army. It was defeated by five yeas and eight nays.

Senator Dupont's substitute declared that the testimony showed that the shots were fired from Springfield rifles issued to Company B, Twenty-fifth Infantry. In effect it asserted the innocence of Companies C and D, both of which were discharged with Company B. Only the author of the resolution and one other Senator voted for its adoption.

Senator Scott's resolution declared the evidence insufficient to hold guilty any particular person or persons and the identity of the guilty parties unknown. It was defeated nine to four.

There being no further substitutes offered, the original resolution was adopted.

Senator Warner then offered the following resolution:

That the testimony fails to identify the particular soldier or soldiers who participated in the shooting affray.

It was agreed to by a vote of eight yeas, five Republican Senators opposed to the Lodge resolution not voting.
