Cruisers and Torpedo-Boats to Be Present at Rose Festival.

EVANS WILL MAKE CHOICE

Distribution of Fleet to Be Arranged on Arrival at San Francisco. Battleships Will Not Come Up River.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, March 10.—Senator Fulton today conferred with the Secretary of the Navy and Chief of the Bureau of Navigation relative to the desire of the people of Portland to have warships sent to Portland during the Rose Festival in June. Navy officials told him they believed it would be possible to send several cruisers and torpedo craft to Portland at that time, but at this early day they could not tell what ships or how many could be detailed. The department is awaiting the arrival of Admiral Evans at San Francisco before completing plans for the distribution of the fleet, and at that time Portland will be taken care of. The officials informed the Senator they would not be justified in sending battleships to Portland, because those ships are difficult to navigate in river channels. Cruisers are most easily controlled, and no risk would be incurred in sending them to Portland. Senator Bourne took this matter up with the President, and told him he would like to see Portland properly recognized. The President explained that this was a matter for the Navy Department to settle.

SURVEY ALL NORTHWEST LAND

Heyburn Gets Bill Through Senate, Removing Obstacles.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, March 10.—Senator Heyburn today secured the passage through the Senate of his bill providing for the survey of all public land, reserved and unreserved, in Idaho, Oregon, Montana and California. Under the present system, the Government only surveys land upon request of actual settlers. Mr. Heyburn says this system tends to retard development, and also retards surveys, as settlers don't like to go on unsurveyed land. He will confer with the Oregon, Montana and California Senators and have an amendment made to the sundry civil bill appropriating sufficient money to begin these surveys. He wants $200,000 for Idaho.

GREAT BRITAIN ENTERS CASE

Advancing Arbitration of China-Japan Difficulties.

TOKIO, March 10.—According to a well-authenticated report, the center of interest in the Tokio Maru affair has been removed to London. When the British government was informed of Japan's announcement that in the event of a refusal by China to entertain her demands that Japan proposed to take independent action, the British foreign office asked Count Komura, the Japanese Ambassador in London, what steps Japan proposed to take, calling his attention to the clause in the treaty with Great Britain covering the question of war between Japan and any other nation. Great Britain's interest therein being understood here. Ambassador Komura, being unable to give a definite answer, asked the foreign office in Tokio for information, which found the attitude of the British government an unexpected phase in the situation. It is stated here that the British government is taking a strong position on the question of the restoration of the arms seized and has pointed out the advisability of Japan admitting the moral side of the question, while doubtless technicalities will be a consideration of events has created a deadlock here, and the foreign office is now awaiting advice from Ambassador Komura.

KEEP DOWN TO $900,000,000

Tawney Says Appropriations Will Be Less Than Last Session.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—At the White House Representative Tawney, of the House committee on appropriations, who had called on the President at the latter's request to discuss legislative proposals, expressed the opinion that the appropriations of Congress at this session would be kept within $900,000,000, exclusive of appropriations for warships. The total appropriations in the last Congress he pointed out, were about $900,000,000 and it was hoped to reduce the appropriation this year about $50,000,000.

YOUR OWN BLACK SHEEP

Common Sense in Taking Care of a Backward Child.

Do you number among your brood that most tragic of all created beings—a "backward child"? If you do, does that child seem, as backward children generally do, prompt to mischief but slow to all else? Is he, though apparently impervious to reproof, abnormally swift in resentment? You may say that, although the other children could read long before they had reached his age, he is still stumbling over his letters in a kindergarten; that he cannot lace his shoes or wash his hands or take a message; and finally that you are in despair. But you need not despair unless you are certain that you have met this state of affairs with its proper remedial.

Always the Rookie.

Arms and the Man. Captain Washington Bowie, Jr., Major and National Guard, the well-known military fireman, relates the following occurrence, which took place last Summer: A certain militia organization was organized in a neighborhood, and the exposition was closed Sunday in order for dress parade was issued. Two "rookies," or recruits, took it for granted that the presence would not be required during the day, and were very first birthday that fact has been the most important thing that has happened to mark the anniversary of her entrance into the joys of this life.

Rider Left to Die in Road.

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn., March 10.—Near Woodford, 15 miles from Clarksville, Brown Bennett, the son of an association tobacco raiser, was found early this morning in the public road in a dying condition with a bullet hole through his head. Near Bennett were two dead horses and three empty shotguns. It is believed that young Bennett was a night rider and was shot down by persons whom he and his gang had attacked, and that his comrades in their haste to get away had left him dying on the scene of the fight.

whose life-work is to recognize them and put them right.

A child who habitually breathes with one mouth, will probably be both deaf and inattentive, and will certainly be below par physically, but the removal of the choking growths in nose or throat is a comparatively simple matter, while the after-effects may seem like some blessed miracle.

If your child has a defect of vision, he will naturally lag behind in the classroom and suffer from nervous strain through all his waking hours. It makes the heart ache to think how much original sin would vanish at the snap of the small scissors or the putting of properly fitted glasses in the case of hundreds of poor, harassed, bewildered little children.

There is an old ad saying about "the black sheep in every flock." It is a medieval verdict that modern science happily tends more and more to overthrow.

UNCLE REMUS' DOG STORY

This Canine Lived in Eatonton, Ga., and Knew Money's Value.

Uncle Remus Magazine. It is certain that Flash took particular note of the round metal tokens which the meat market in the place—the meat market which Flash frequented—procured their beef, but just how, or at what particular time, the dog was watching the market, he never knew, but one day some one who knew him well, saw that instead of attending the meat market, as usual, he was watching intently a group of men who were talking about something entirely foreign to the subject that engrossed Flash's thoughts—if he had any. Anyhow, a gentleman observed that the dog was not in his usual place, and he remarked, in a jovial way: "Flash, you should be at the market; the beef has run. Here, take this penny, and buy you some dinner." Now, this was a penny in the man's part, but he held a penny in his hand and, to his surprise, the dog came forward, took the copper piece in his mouth, and went running to the market. The meat-seller was serving some one, and so Flash had to wait with what patience he could. When his opportunity came, he placed on the meat counter a penny, and deposited the penny who the man could not fail to see it. The seller expressed considerable surprise, and gave the dog much more than a penny's worth.

When Flash had disposed of his marketing, he returned to the group in front of the hotel, secured another penny, and repeated his performance. After that, he was the wonder of the town, and he thrived and fattened on his reputation for several weeks. But one day a drummer came him a dime, and when the dog perceived that for a dime he could purchase ever so much more meat than a copper piece would command, he refused to accept any more pennies. He would take a penny in his mouth, by way of being polite, but he would immediately eject it and gaze so earnestly at the dime, and gazing his tail while, that it was almost impossible to resist his mute appeals. He would take nickels and dimes, but sometimes when he was not hungry, he would fall to go through his favorite performance. Instead, he would take the dime or the nickel in his mouth, and disappear around the corner. For a long time this movement was a mystery, but after awhile it was discovered that he buried the money, but no one ever found his place of deposit. Another dog would have buried the meat, but Flash had gentle tastes and refined habits when compared to all other dogs; and it is only to compare Flash with ordinary dogs that this brief history of his self-education is given.

Professor Copeland, of Wesleyan university, this factory is to be educational as well as productive, and the working unit is not the day laborer, but the family. The factory forms an industrial settlement where the women live and work with their children, who help around the shop, and in that way gain their industrial training. Aside from this, regular play and school hours are assigned, so that the little apprentices are in no way neglected, overworked victims pictured in child labor literature. The men in the establishment are no hands, who through age or illness can no longer do the full day's work required by the trades unions. They come to the bread table and put in as much time as they are able, and are paid accordingly.

CO-OPERATIVE BAKE SHOP

Arts and Crafts Bakery Workers Divide Profits.

New York Times. An arts-and-crafts bakery has been added to the list of hand-made furniture, hand-woven rugs and hand-waxed metal put out by the various craftsmen's settlements. The bakeshop has been opened at Alpine, N. J., and sends out its wares in dust-proof packages. But the object of the new bakery is not so much to provide crust-free bread and cookies as to illustrate a new theory of industrial life.

According to the plans of its founder, Professor Copeland, of Wesleyan university, this factory is to be educational as well as productive, and the working unit is not the day laborer, but the family. The factory forms an industrial settlement where the women live and work with their children, who help around the shop, and in that way gain their industrial training. ## TRAINING RICH CHILDREN

Suffered to Grow Up in Ignorance That They Own Wealth.

Denver Republican. An amateur investigator has discovered the following instances of the way in which some New York children are made ready to struggle with life. "Think of a girl of 12," she said, "who has been taught to believe that all her birthday means is the gift of a beautiful pearl from her grandmother. From her very first birthday that fact has been the most important thing that has happened to mark the anniversary of her entrance into the joys of this life. Her grandmother was, like all her family, very rich. It occurs to her that she would like her granddaughter to have a pearl necklace that should be as fine as any that money could buy. So she hit on the idea of presenting the child with a superb pearl every year. "In the meantime all the childish joy on the child's birthday celebration has been made to lie in the acquisition of this pearl. It has for 12 birthdays been the engrossing event of the celebration. "Just what has been or will be the effect of making the most important part of her birthday the most important part of her life is not possible to say. To me, as a person interested in the proper training of the young, the idea seems grossly and grossly inappropriate. "It appears to me that its effect can only be to turn the child's mind to most frivolous and ignoble thoughts. But she may survive it.

Almost as singular in its exhibition of a parent's idea of the right sort of influence for a child is the occupation of a 14-year-old boy that I know. He has been entrusted by his family with the care of all the social duties of his mother and the other members of the family. He takes charge of all the cards received at the house, sees to it that cards are sent in return and acts as a sort of social secretary for his sisters as well as for the other older members of the family. They are very much amused by the enthusiasm and cleverness with which he relieves them of all social responsibility.

WARRIORS MAKE BEST CITIZENS

President Roosevelt Addresses Delegates of Mothers' Congress.

CONDEMNS CHILD LABOR

Says Schools Should Have the Right Kind of Playgrounds, and That Children Should Be Taught the Practical Things.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The White House was the scene today of the formal opening of the first International Congress on the Welfare of the Child, which is being held under the auspices of the National Mothers' Congress. The 200 delegates represented all the states and territories, and a dozen or more of the leading countries of the world, and were received at the White House, when President Roosevelt delivered an address to them, in which he said: "I receive many societies in the White House, many organizations of good men and good women, striving to do all that in them lies for the betterment of our social and civic conditions, but there is no other society which I am quite so glad to receive as this. This is the one body that I put even ahead of the veterans of the Civil War—because, when all is said, it is the mother, and the mother only, who is a better citizen even than the soldier who fights for his own country. The successful mother, the mother who does her part in rearing and training aright the boys and girls who are to be the men and women of the next generation, is of greater value to the community and occupies, if she only would realize it, a more honorable as well as a more important position than any successful man in it."

"I want to ask your assistance for two or three matters that are not immediately connected with the life in the family itself, but that are of vital consequence to the children. In the first place, in the schools see that the successful work is made practical as possible. As regards the public schools especially, I would like to put in a special word in behalf of the right kind of playgrounds. No school is a good school if it has not a good playground. Help the children to play, and remember that you can often help them most by letting them entirely alone. It is the gravest kind of wrong, not only to the children, but to the whole community, to turn out the boys and girls, especially in the congested part of the city, with no place to play in but the street."

ELOPING COUPLE ARRESTED

Seaside Youth Deserts Girl He Wrong—Runs Away With Sister.

SEASIDE, Or., March 10.—(Special.)—Deserting the young woman he had promised to marry and eloping with her 18-year-old sister, Henry Blunk, once respected, stands now disgraced and in the shadow of a penitentiary charge unless he makes immediate amends. Excitement was aroused yesterday noon when it was reported that Miss Millard was missing from school, having left her books and wraps behind. Henry Blunk, could not be located. Telephone wires were set humming and it was learned that the two had boarded the train at different points and were bound for Portland. The conductor suspected something wrong and turned the girl over to the marion at the Union depot. Blunk arrived in a few minutes to claim the girl. He was arrested and both were returned to Seaside. It now develops that Blunk was engaged to marry Miss Millard's sister, and that he will likely be arrested if he fails to keep his promise.

WANTED DRAWING MADE

JAPANESE MAKES TREASONABLE PROPOSAL.

Draughtsman Promptly Seizes Him for Police and Has Two Fingers Chewed Off in Struggle.

ELY, Nev., March 10.—A Japanese, who refused to divulge his name, was arrested at Elytown, a few miles from this city, last night, after a hard struggle, in which he succeeded in almost completely chewing off two fingers of Draughtsman Clinton, who was trying to hold him until officers arrived. Clinton, who is an expert draughtsman, was in a saloon when approached by the Japanese, who, after talking on various subjects, finally asked Clinton if he would give him to San Francisco and get drawing of the fortifications there, assuring Clinton he would pay him well. Clinton indignantly refused and held on to the Japanese until officers arrived, hoping to find incriminating evidence.

"He is now 14, and that is an age at which seriousness may, without too much emphasis, be allowed to play some part in a boy's life. Yet his parents apparently think that what he is doing is important enough to be allowed to occupy much of the time that should in fact be spent at his books or in some more serious way. "What he will think about when he is 21 it is not possible to say. Perhaps he will outgrow his obsession with cardboard and stationery. But what will be the future of the 15-year-old girl who was taken to Europe last Summer for her first educational tour? "She went with her father and mother, and there was scarcely a corner of Europe they did not visit. They traveled indeed more than 12,000 miles. They are quite sure about that, for they went in a motor and they have the record of the trip. "Those 12,000 miles were so divided that the usual speed during all their journey was 40 miles an hour. What a comprehensive idea of Europe that girl must have got on her first educational trip to Europe! How must her youthful imagination have been stirred by the sight of the strange and quaint sights she saw in those strange lands, traveling at the rate of 40 miles an hour! "With all there is in European travel to stimulate a child's mind if there be the opportunity to enjoy what she sees, think of chasing her across foreign countries at such a breakneck speed! No wonder she is not able to this day to recall a single scene outside of her experiences on the steamer, which are all she remembers. "There is one case, the educator continues, which is a case of a child who is optimistic, which is such a contrast to what has gone before in this narrative that it almost compensates for the discouraging conditions of the other cases. "Far up on Fifth Avenue in a palatial house dwell two orphan children. They are heirs to great wealth. One of the girls, the younger of the two, is divided between them. Yet they are growing up in complete ignorance of what will come to them. "They are surrounded by every luxury. They have horses and servants, and the older boy owns a motor. There are no near relatives, and the fortune is administered by trustees. It is in accordance with the wishes of the mother, who carried out by the trustees, that their education is being conducted as it is. "They are in absolute ignorance of the fact that all they have belongs to them. They think that they are receiving all from the lady who makes her home in the house with them. They think that she gives them everything and that their possessions are the dependent in a measure on their good behavior. "When they are good she rewards them. When they have not studied or behaved as they should they get none of the good things really bought with their wealth. "By this method of education they are growing up to believe that they are like all the other children in this world, who get only what they deserve and work for. When the time comes for them to possess and administer their own money they will know how to do it. Isn't such a case as this encouraging in the face of so much false education?"
