GOOD THINGS IN PORTLAND MARKET

BY LILIAN TINGLE. NOW is the time to eat greens and plenty of them, both raw and cooked. If you don't like cooked greens of the stringy, soggy, watery variety, I don't blame you, but that is no reason for not eating them as salads, in purees, with poached eggs or mince, in timbales and chateausse of vegetables, or as "hot salads," as well as the usual cool uncooked kind.

will be no mistake in the punctuation of the last sentence. A small schoolmate of mine once took her father severely to task because, she said, whenever the curate came to dinner her father always made too long a pause after "chicory" when asking his guest to partake of this dessert—a very particular favorite of his. "And you know, papa," she concluded, "it's really worse than saying 'Rach'." You just see what it says in the Bible, and don't forget you are the vicar of this parish." But rhubarb fool is a very good dish, all the same, and rhubarb is pretty good now and costs 15 cents a pound.

United States Government Inspected Meats

Should be eaten not only because they are wholesome and choice, but for

Safety

The price per pound of inspected and uninspected meats is the same—the difference is in soundness, of which the stamp of inspection is a guarantee. "Columbia" brand Hams, Bacon and Lard also carry the guarantee of soundness. Eat no other.
