At a meeting of the club held Sunday afternoon a resolution was passed, expressing the sorrow of the members because of the death of the GRAND THEATER—(Washington between Park and Seventh)—Continuous vaude-ville, 2:30, 7:30 and 9 P. M. ROBINSON CAPTURES THIEF, - An attempt to commit theft while drunk landed Charles Black, believed to be a professional sneakthief with a long record, in the City Jall at an early hour yesterday morning. The fellow had already looted the safe of the La Grande Creamery. 344 Yamhill street, and had secured 390. After spending a part of it for liquor, he returned about 3 A. M. to the place and sought to clean out the exhregister. J. D. Robinson, a Deputy Sheriff and watchman on the block, disovered him in the place and chazed him up on the roof, where he was unable to follow and capture the thief. Robinson called the police and, with their ald, effected his arrest. Black used to work in the creamery and used his knowledge of the premises to enter the place and open the safe. He had over $30 in his pockets when searched and admitted his

The play abounds in the spectacular and the realistic, for during the five acts a safe-cracking scene is produced and other thrilling, blood-stirring scenes are enacted in the most capable manner by this popular company.

Miss Felton enacts the role of a newsboy, and as such is always Johnny on the spot in trying situations. Her portraval of a mischievous but ambitious boy, and as such is always Johnny on the spot in trying situations. Her portrayal of a mischievous but ambitious youngster is one of the cieverest parts she has played in the last few weeks of difficult roles. While her part is seemingly a supernumerary one to the actual plot of the plece, it is nevertheless brought in touch with the real characters in the drams most cleverly.

The plot of the plece deals with the scheming designs of Charles Etherington, a villain, capably enacted by Charles Ayres, to secure a fortune by marrying the heroine. In this latter role Miss Marie Thompson is most charming and has an opportunity of displaying her talent to a marked degree. That she succeeds goes without saying, for any one who will witness her portrayal of Althea Dale will coincide immediately.

Forrest Seabury as Dickie Dials, the stowaway, handles the part in his usual finished manner, and Rupert Drum as the long-lost son and her is an ideal hero. DEATH OF MRS. J. M. GARRISON.—Mrs. J. M.
