

APPOLOGY FOR THE STUDENT PARADE

But Stanford Men Still Insist on Reinstatement of Those Suspended.

WOMEN STAND BY THEM

Faculty Committee Delays Action and Walkout of Entire Student Body Is Certain If More Are Dropped.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., March 19.—At a largely attended meeting here tonight the student-body passed a resolution apologizing to the faculty committee for any breach of discipline which occurred during the student parade here last Thursday night. The matter is now in the hands of the committee on student affairs. Professor Farrand and Coach Lanagan addressed the meeting, advising the action taken.

Strike Is Still Probable.
Aside from this action, the situation at the university remains practically unchanged. There is still a deadlock between the student affairs committee and the undergraduates over the reinstatement of the 12 students who were suspended as a result of Thursday's demonstration. The student affairs committee, after a two-hour session this noon, refused to take action on the petition presented yesterday, in which 36 men identified themselves as members of the parade and asked for the same treatment as given those dismissed.

In their fight for the reinstatement of their fellows, the men of the university are being heartily supported by the coeds and it is understood that certain members of the faculty are taking the side of the students. The Pan-Hellenic Society, made up of all the societies in the college, held a special meeting today and adopted resolutions declaring their confidence in the men, students and pledging themselves to act in concert with the men. The young women said they will go on a strike if the men do.

Faculty Gains Delay.
The student affairs committee issued a statement today saying that each of the 36 men signing the petition that admitted participation in Thursday's parade would be given an individual hearing to determine whether or not he really participated in the parade. This action is considered a mere evasion of the issue as those who have gone before the committee have merely reiterated the statement that they were participants and identified their signatures. The committee refuses to give its decision until its investigation is completed. But from the statement of Mr. Clark, it is expected that all who admit participation will be dismissed.

The committee of students proposed several plans to the faculty committee this morning in an attempt to settle the dispute, but all were refused on the ground that they could not restrain in a matter of student body discipline. A last attempt was made to reconsider the decision of the dismissal of the 12 students by suggesting a guarantee of co-operation in maintaining order to be made by prominent upper classmen. But this also met with refusal.

Will Cripple Athletics.
In the list of the 12 suspended students is the captain of the varsity track team and the captain of the varsity crew, two men on whom the cardinal places great hopes for intercollegiate victories in the Spring athletic contests. No more popular men can be found on the Stanford campus today than Frederic R. Lannagan, brother of the football coach and champion pole-vaulter of the Pacific Coast, and Leslie R. Gay, the big, genial oarsman. Both men were seniors and stood ready to graduate this summer.

Another prominent senior whose hopes for a diploma this year have been spoiled by the faculty edict is John E. Cushing, former editor of the Daily Palo Alto. Still another is Harry S. Ross, one of the cleverest amateur actors in college. Two prominent junior athletes are also on the list. Gorham L. Goodell is on the varsity baseball team, and Frank E. Mayers was forward wing on the varsity football team last fall. Frank J. Macomber is another junior who has been suspended. William P. Fuller, Jr., one of the sophomores who has been disciplined, is the son of the founder of W. P. Fuller & Co. Kenneth M. Green and Sheldon M. Batterson, both prominent athletes, and Harry W. Smith, one of the best of sophomores who are in trouble, the only freshman in the list is Arthur Taylor, of Los Angeles.

No further action will be taken by the student body until the effect of the apology presented to the student affairs committee is known. The majority of the students tonight seem to believe the apology will pave the way to the reinstatement of the suspended students, and that such action by the committee will virtually close the incident.
