DEMOCRATS FORM POLITICAL PLOT

Keep Out Legislative Race in Order to Elect Chamberlain Senator.

REGISTER AS REPUBLICANS

Minority Faction, However, Opposes the Plan of Electing Statement No. 1 Candidates of the Opposing Party.

What appears a concerted purpose of Democrats throughout Oregon to abstain from making nominations for the Legislature and instead to combine with Republican Statement No. 1 forces, wherever they shall be defeated, in the general scarcity of Democratic candidates for their party's nominations for the lawmaking body. It is openly admitted by all Democrats that they want Legislators elected who are pledged to support for United States Senator the "people's choice" and to disregard the Republican party's choice.

There are six State Senate districts made up of two or more counties and ten State Representative districts. In only two of the Senate districts have Democrats appeared for nomination and in only two of the Representative districts. The entries by petition for the nominations in these joint districts closed last Friday. Those in single counties will close next Wednesday. It is certain that in the counties, the Democratic candidates will be correspondingly scarce. In Multnomah, for example, only one Democrat has filed a petition for nomination for the Legislature—W. C. Farnham. On the Republican side nearly 50 will have announced themselves.

Statement No. 1 binds the legislator who has "taken" it to disregard the choice of his party for United States Senator. Democrats have fond hopes that Mr. Chamberlain, twice elected Governor as a "non-partisan" Democrat, will be the "people's choice" for United States Senator. It is impossible, however, for Democrats to elect a majority of the next Legislature. They realize this fully and are making no effort to capture the Legislature. But by pledging Republican candidates to overlook their party's choice for United States Senator and to vote for the people's choice, they think they have a good chance of placing their popular Governor first in line for the Senatorship. Therefore they are making few legislative nominations. They plan, evidently, to await the outcome of the Republican primaries, meanwhile lending all their influence to nomination of Statement No. 1 Republican candidates, and then to unite with the Republican Statement No. 1 forces, wherever defeated, for election of fusion Statement No. 1 candidates.

This is a logical inference from the existing order of things political. Democrats prefer no legislative ticket of their own, and but few candidates have appeared for their nominations. It is well known that many Democrats are registering as Republicans in order to participate in the nomination of Republican candidates. This fact is plain on the records of the County Clerk. Leaders of the Democratic party, including George H. Thomas, county chairman, admit it.

It should be added, however, that a rebellious element of Democrats in Multnomah, demands that its party put up a full ticket, and refuse to consort with Republicans. The Kentucky Klick, an organization controlled by Democrats, has put forth a complete ticket, and demands the nomination of the men named thereon. It is likely that this demand will be accomplished.

The faction boosting this ticket, however, is the minority that fought Mayor Lane's nomination last year, and Sheriff Word's nomination two years ago, on the ground that they were not straight Democrats. The non-partisan element of the Democratic party was both times ascendant and it is doing what it can to hold down the "straights." The non-partisans are led by L. T. Peery and John Van Zante, and the straights by Mark O'Neil, M. J. Malley, S. C. Armitage and other dyed-in-the-wool patriots.

The few Democratic candidates for the Legislature are Statement No. 1 men. The two seeking their party's nomination for the Senate in joint districts are G. Springer, in Crook, Grant, Klamath and Lake Counties, and Turner Oliver, in Union and Wallowa. The two seeking joint nomination for the House are William Morfitt, in Harney and Malheur, and W. F. Jackson, in Gilliam, Sherman and Wheeler. That the crop of Democratic candidates for nomination in the individual counties will be just as scant, there is every reason to believe. Of course, dissatisfied elements in the Democratic party, just like the action of "straights" in Multnomah, could nominate Legislative candidates by writing their names on the primary ballots. It remains to be seen whether this will be done.

With but three days left for filing county primary nominations, nearly all the candidates in the two leading parties have been beaten out of the bushes. There will be a number of county filings before the last hour allowed by law for filing petitions, 5 P. M. Wednesday, especially for precinct memberships on the central committees of the two parties. But matters have proceeded so far as to show most of the contents of the political pot-pie.

Candidates for offices in the state at large and in judicial districts and in joint districts of more than one county were required to file their petitions with the Secretary of State prior to last Friday night. The only way for candidates to be voted on in the primaries, who failed to present their petitions to the Secretary of State last Friday, or who shall fail to present them to the county clerks before the last hour Wednesday, is to have their names "written in" on the ballots; that is, written by the voters on the blank spaces which the law requires on the ballot for that purpose. The names presented by petition will be printed on the ballot.

By this method of "writing in" Democrats will nominate Governor Chamberlain for United States Senator and perhaps J. J. Whitney for Representative in Congress for the First District and J. N. Teal for Railroad Commissioner in the Second District. Should Mr. Teal decline to run, Oglesby Young, of Portland, will seek the Democratic nomination in this manner.

While interest centers in the election of members of the Legislature, on account of the choice of United States Senator that will be made by that body next January, there are sharp rivalries in other directions. There will be hard primary fights in the Second Congressional District for Representative in Congress, between W. R. Ellis, T. T. Geer and George S. Shepherd, and for Railroad Commissioner, between C. B. Aitchison, C. C. Loucks, W. H. Hurlburt, Joseph Gaston, Howard Whiting and A. N. Hamilton. Should Aitchison be nominated by the Republicans, Democrats will make a fight for the office. Oglesby Young has announced his intention of seeking the place as a Democrat, in that event, and if J. N. Teal, named by the Kentucky Klick of Portland for the party nomination, should decline to run.

In the First Congressional District, W. C. Hawley will have no opposition for re-election. No Republican will go against him and a Democrat will make only a perfunctory run, in order to provide his party with a basis of votes on which to establish the party's recognition by the direct primary law. That law says a party shall participate in the primaries which cast 25 per cent of the total vote for Congressman in the preceding election.

In this same district there will be a contest for Railroad Commissioner between T. K. Campbell, incumbent, and W. A. Carter and R. Robertson, all Republicans. Campbell's nomination seems likely, however. In that event he will be elected, since Democrats have no hope of defeating the Republican nominee. The third member of the Railroad Commission, Oswald West, will not run for election until 1910. He is a Democrat and represents the state at large, while his two associates each represent a district.

Other state offices will not be contested with much vigor. J. W. Bailey, State Dairy and Food Commissioner, will probably be renominated and re-elected, at least such is the universal opinion. He has a rival for the Republican nomination, however, in Dr. Alexander Reid. Judge Bean, of the Supreme Court, has no opposition for Republican renomination and will probably have no Democratic opponent. Democrats seem satisfied with the presence on the Supreme Court, of the two Democratic Commissioners, who are serving as associates of the members of that tribunal.

Next to the fights for seats in the Legislature and for the offices of Railroad Commissioner and Representative in Congress in the Second District, are the contests for county and judicial offices. There are a number of such contests, both in the Republican primaries and in the general election. In Multnomah County the biggest fight is that for District Attorney. The Republican nomination for this office is sought by seven men and the Democratic nomination will be received by John Manning, now possessor of the office. There is keen rivalry also for the office of Coroner between several candidates. B. D. Sigler and A. G. Rushlight are competing sharply for the office of assessor.

One of the Circuit Judgeships for Multnomah County will be hotly contested for by three Republicans—E. C. Bronaugh, now holding the office; L. A. McNary, ex-City Attorney, and W. H. McGarry. This is department No. 1. Democrats will make no effort to win the office, although they may nominate a candidate, G. W. Allen having been named by the Kentucky Klick. But for the Judgeship of department No. 2, Thomas O'Day, Democratic incumbent of the office, will make a strong run. His opponent will be R. W. Morrow, who has no opposition for the Republican nomination.

For the District Attorneyship, seven Republican candidates are competing with vigor—George J. Cameron, now Police Judge; G. C. Moser, ex-deputy under Manning; James Cole, ex-deputy United States Attorney under W. C. Bristol; R. B. Sinnott, J. N. Davis, Henry Westbrook and E. T. Taggart. Considerable opposition has developed against Cameron's nomination among Republicans who object to Mayor Lane's appointing a Democrat Police Judge to succeed him, in case he should be elected. His successor would hold office a year and would strengthen the Democratic hold on the city's politics. This argument is used by all of Cameron's rivals.

A big fight is in progress for control of the county central committees of each party. Two factions in each are striving for mastery.

The county central committees are composed of one member for each of the 116 county precincts. These members are elected in the primaries by the voters of the respective parties. The county committees, thus formed, constitute the county "organization." The committees possess influence in the direction of controlling party utterances and electing delegates to county conventions. The county conventions are important for their selection of delegates to state conventions, which, within two months, will choose delegates to the National conventions and nominate candidates for Presidential electors for Oregon.

Two years ago there was no fight for control of either the Democratic or the Republican central committee. Now the Idleman-Cake-Cohen-Davis element wants to continue in control of the Republican county committee and the Thomas-Malley element in control of the Democratic committee. F. E. Reed is leading a fight for mastery of the Republican committee and John Van Zante for mastery of the Democratic committee. The two factions in each party are naming their candidates for precinct committeemen and organizing the precincts for their election in the primaries.

C. M. Idleman, chairman of the Republican County Committee, contemplates resigning, on account of his attachment to Statement No. 1, and his dislike of the county convention platform that turned down Statement No. 1 a month ago. Idleman fought the anti-Statement resolution until he perceived that it could not be defeated. Then he offered a successful amendment to the resolution, as it was presented by G. W. Stapleton and S. C. Beach, calling on candidates for the Legislature to pledge themselves to support the party's nominee for United States Senator.

Idleman, while desiring to support Statement No. 1 after the convention adjourned, persuaded himself to stand on the convention platform, and there has stood ever since. He succeeded in bringing the members of the Hodson legislative ticket to do the same, after they had announced themselves in favor of the "people's choice if a Republican." This the Idleman forces showed was repudiation of the county platform, and the Hodson candidates quickly changed their pledge on their primary petitions to read, "Will vote for Republican voters' choice for United States Senator."

But now that a Statement No. 1 ticket has come forth, Idleman desires to give it support. To do this, he will have to resign the county chairmanship and get off the convention platform. One of the men who has done this is Ben Selling, candidate for State Senator, who was permanent chairman of the convention. Another is C. W. Nottingham, also candidate for State Senator, who fought Statement No. 1 in the convention. The presence of these men in the statement camp is said to be sufficient precedent for entrance of Idleman into the same camp. The Statement No. 1 forces have a complete Legislative ticket, consisting of Ben Selling, C. W. Nottingham, H. R. Albee, Dan Kellaher and A. H. Willett, for the Senate; and B. C. Altman, L. D. Mahone, James Abbott, W. J. Clemens, Fred J. Brady, J. C. Bryant, K. C. Couch, J. F. Cassidy, L. M. Davis, E. J. Jaeger, A. W. Orton, C. J. McDonald, W. C. Belt, for the House.

About one-third of the Republican Legislative candidates who have appeared in Multnomah County and in the joint districts are pledged to Statement No. 1, while the others are pledged to the Republican party choice or are unpledged. This encourages the statement forces to believe that by uniting the statement vote they can defeat the divided opposition.

TURIN, Italy, March 29.—The Duke d'Abruzzi arrived here today, stopping at the ducal palace. He will leave for Rome late tonight.

ORDER O. R. & N. TO CUT TARIFFS

$7235; passenger, mail, express earnings from $1,029,650 to $3,576,583, or an increase per mile from $715.59 to $2742. During the same period the number of tons per freight train mile increased from 183.37 to 443.5. At the same time the percentage of operating expenses to earnings decreased from 54.37 per cent to 49.66 per cent.

At the hearing of the complaint Mr. Teal, for the Chamber of Commerce, declared that the above figures had been juggled in the interest of the railroad. He contended that in addition to the surplus there had been expended between 1897 and 1906 and charged to operating expenses direct, the following items: For maintenance of road and construction, $12,210,523; for maintenance of equipment, $6,266,789. Allowing expenditures for insurance, a depreciation fund and other items that were charged to profit and loss, Mr. Teal declared that the company still had on hand enough money to wipe out all of its bonds and nearly all of its preferred stock.

The strong point sought to be established by the Chamber of Commerce at the hearing of the complaint which was held November 4 to 8 last, was, notwithstanding the great increase in the company's surplus and the decreased cost of operation, the charges exacted for transportation of merchandise and commodities of all kinds under the distributive rates in effect from Portland to points within the state reached by the defendant company's system had been reduced only slightly and remained substantially the same as they had been for years. It was contended that the company's object in maintaining its excessive charges was to return to the corporation an unreasonable and unjust profit upon the capital actually invested.

Test Ruling in Courts.

Should the Commission order the O. R. & N. to readjust its tariffs in accordance with the prayer of the Chamber of Commerce, it is probable the corporation will test in the courts the constitutionality of the act creating the Commission and the extent of its powers in prescribing and regulating rates. This is considered practically certain, in view of the recent decisions in Montana and North Carolina, where legislative acts, establishing reduced tariffs and imposing heavy penalties for violations, were held to be unconstitutional. But the members of the Oregon Commission maintain that the Montana and North Carolina cases were essentially different from that pending in this state. In those states the defendant corporations were required to carry their cases to the Supreme Court, while in this state the proceedings of the Commission are subject to review in a suit for equity that can be brought in the State Circuit Court for Marion County.

"In the Minnesota case," said Mr. Aitchison, a member of the Commission, yesterday, "special commodity rates were put into effect by the State Legislature reducing the rates on grain, lumber and its products, sheep cattle and hogs, and soft coal. The law took effect June 1 last, and proceedings were brought in the United States Court before Judge Lochren, to enjoin Attorney-General Young from enforcing the penalties provided in the act for violations of the rates established by the Legislature. A temporary injunction was granted, but Young disregarded the order of the court for the purpose of testing the validity of the law. Young was adjudged guilty of contempt.

Question of State Rights.

"Before the Supreme Court the point involved was whether an action brought against an executive officer of a state to prohibit him from enforcing a state statute was against the state, or if it was not in the power of the judicial department of the United States, as limited by the Eleventh Amendment to the Constitution. It was held by the Supreme Court that such a case is not in prohibition of the amendment, and that the Attorney-General was in contempt for seeking to enforce the statute.

"The result will be that wherever, by reason of diversity of citizenship, the Federal Court takes jurisdiction and enjoins state officers from enforcing state statutes, then state laws must remain unenforced until the Federal Court passes on the constitutional question. It will be incumbent on state officers to desist from enforcing state statutes when the United States Courts order a writ of injunction to issue for that purpose. But it does not follow that an injunction always will issue. In Missouri, Judge McPherson refused to enjoin the 2-cent rate until after it had been given a test.

"The North Carolina statute was declared invalid because the penalties provided were so severe that they were practically confiscatory. The penalties for a single day's violation of the statutes, in view of the innumerable violations an ordinary road would make, were sufficient to absorb all of the assets of the road and send the officers and employes of the road to jail indefinitely.

Decisions Do Not Apply.

"Neither of these cases affects us in Oregon, where we have always conceded that when proper jurisdictional facts are presented the action of the Commission in fixing either the service or rates of a transportation company, are subject to review unless it is apparent that the decision of the Commission is reasonable and should stand. The Commission of this state would hardly put itself in the position of acting in defiance of an injunction of the United States Court under any circumstances, and the civil war which was almost entailed in the Southern States would be an impossibility here.

"I don't think the penalties imposed by the Oregon statutes are so unconscionable as to be considered in the same class with those in the North Carolina case. We have no provision for jail sentences. Besides, the only means for judicial review afforded in the North Carolina case was by criminal proceeding against some officer or agent of the company. The Oregon law provides a simple and speedy means of reviewing the Commission's orders by a suit in equity in the State Circuit Court for Marion County.

"The act creating the Oregon Railroad Commission is very similar to that of the State of Wisconsin. The Wisconsin act has been copied, with slight modifications, by Ohio, Montana and Oregon, and has been pronounced by the Louisiana Commission as being, without doubt, the latest and best type of a Commission law."

ROBBER CAUGHT IN ACT

Man Arrested by Sheriff Also Admits Hold-up.

Through information furnished by Motorman Charles Holmes and Conductor James McGowan, of a Mount Scott car, Sheriff Stevens and Deputies Leonard, Bulger and Woods, captured Jack Funkhauser, a dangerous highwayman, Saturday night. The car crew reported to the Sheriff that two suspicious characters had ridden to the city from Mount Scott, and hastily summoning his deputies, Sheriff Stevens started for the car terminals, where the men were found taking a Fulton car.

The officers shadowed the men to Fulton and there caught them attempting to enter the home of Ed Coffin. Failing to break into the residence, the men returned to the street, where they were arrested by the Sheriff's party.

One of the robbers was a mere youth and he was allowed to go after explaining that he had been forced to accompany the older man, whom he did not know. The other prisoner, who gave his name as Jack Funkhauser was later identified by G. M. Williams, of Clackamas Station, as the highwayman that held him up Friday night. Funkhauser confessed and also admitted that he intended to hold up the Sellwood bank today and then leave the country. The officers expect that more crimes will be fixed on Funkhauser.

RIGHT FOOD

How the Baby Was Saved.

"When our first baby came it was soon apparent that his mother could not nurse him and it became necessary to feed him artificial food. We tried everything recommended by our family doctor, then consulted several other physicians in succession.

"We experimented with nearly every artificial food but could barely keep the baby alive, and at the age of five months he weighed no more than at birth. When eight months old he had gained very little, and his stomach and bowels were in such a condition that we despaired of raising him.

"A chance acquaintance recommended Grape-Nuts, and we commenced feeding him on it, soaking it until soft in warm water, as milk would not stay on his stomach.

"From the very first we saw that we had found the right food at last and he began to improve immediately. We fed him on Grape-Nuts in this way and absolutely nothing else for several months, and he grew so fast and became so fat and strong that our friends were surprised and could scarcely believe that it was the same child.

"He did not even begin to crawl or cut his teeth until after we put him on Grape-Nuts. Until that time he was weak and helpless and cried nearly all the time. Now he is a strong, bright, rosy-cheeked child of 3½ years."
