PART TAKEN BY FATHER Administered the Chloroform That Killed Albert Clarke.

In the death of Albert Clarke, the 8-year-old son of F. J. Clarke, on Wednesday morning, while under the influence of chloroform, the pathologic fact developed that the anesthetic was administered by the boy's father. The operation was performed by Dr. A. K. Higgs, a specialist, but Dr. George H. Stovall, the family physician was present. It was undertaken for the purpose of removing the boy's tonsils, which had become enlarged and threatened permanently to affect his hearing. Before the second tonsil had been removed the boy's heart ceased to beat. Dr. Hicks C. Fenton, a well-known specialist, who was reported by The Oregonian to have performed the operation, had no connection with the case in any way.

Dr. Stovall permitted the father to administer the chloroform as he is a druggist, and for the additional reason that Mr. Clarke had asked to be allowed to do so. Dr. Stovall took no active part in the operation other than to examine the boy before the drug was given him.
