Treatment of Emigration Different Since Battleships Came to Pacific—Strong Hint From Britain About Canadian Affairs.

TOKIO, APRIL 5.—

A few days ago Count Okuma received a deputation from the Japanese residents of Sacramento, Calif., and from the Japanese newspapermen of San Francisco, who wished to solicit his views on the emigration problem. The Count is reported by the vernacular papers to have said that it was very difficult to find out wherein lay the object of the dispatch of the American battleship squadron to the Pacific at this time. A good deal has been made of the movement by the European press and it was looked upon there as an occurrence of unusual significance. Japan, however, had received the assurance of the United States Government that it was not intended as a menace to Japan, but was merely undertaken for the purpose of training officers and men.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 5.—

While the official relations between the United States and Mexico were never more cordial than now, and while there is nothing in the material interests or desires of either republic which conflicts in the slightest degree with the others, officials of the American State Department have become suddenly aware of the existence and rapid growth of a public sentiment in Mexico of distrust and suspicion of American policy and the American's intentions respecting Mexican territory. This condition is made more expasperating but none the less harmless and embarrassing from the fact that it is entirely groundless in fact, and the officials declare for its basis nothing but irresponsible newspaper gossip and criticism.
