TWO DEMOCRATIC BOOMS LAUNCHED

Gray and Johnson Both Put Into the Field in Race for Presidential Stakes.

GRAY REMAINS PASSIVE

Lets Friends Do All the Work for Him — Johnson's Entry Made With Originality by Means of Special-Delivery Letters.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Supporters of George Gray, of Delaware, for the Democratic nomination for President have completed arrangements for establishing headquarters in Washington, and tomorrow they will actively enter upon a campaign for the Delaware statesman. R. J. Beamish, of Philadelphia, will be in charge of the bureau. He states that the movement is being made without the aid or encouragement of Judge Gray, who, it is added, has not said a word or done anything that could be construed as seeking the nomination. The fund that is to finance the Washington headquarters has been subscribed, it is said, by a few Delawareans and Pennsylvanians.

The work to be done will be supplemented by that of a similar bureau in Judge Gray's home town—Wilmington. A league of Gray Clubs is also in progress of formation. The work of this organization, according to Mr. Beamish, will be done largely in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, the New England States and the South.

The Presidential boom of John A. Johnson was today launched at the Capital and in Congress with true Western originality. To every Washington correspondent and Democratic Congressman was handed a special delivery letter, mailed directly from the established headquarters of the new Minnesota Governor in Chicago.

The letter was signed by Frederick R. Lynch, treasurer of the Minnesota Democratic committee, and transmitted a pamphlet setting forth concisely the points of availability of Governor Johnson as the Democratic Presidential candidate, and giving a terse review of his public services.

NOT GOING TO CONVENTION

Bryan Addresses Two Meetings at Colorado Springs.

COLORADO SPRINGS, April 5.—William J. Bryan addressed two meetings in Colorado Springs tonight. In an interview he expressed confidence in a Democratic victory at the coming National election, but refused to discuss the action of the Populist convention in St. Louis. Mr. Bryan will not attend the Democratic convention at Denver. He stated that this would be his last visit to Colorado this year. He will go from here to Denver tomorrow.

Bryan Lectures at Pueblo.

PUEBLO, Col., April 5.—After making an address in the opera house at La Junta this morning William J. Bryan arrived here at noon and at 2:30 gave his lecture, "The Prince of Peace," at the Mineral Palace before 5000 people. He left at 5 P. M. for Colorado Springs.

COLLECT MONEY BY AUTO

San Francisco Working for $70,000 Fleet Fund.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 5.—With a "flying squadron" of ten big automobiles pressed into service for the occasion and a corps of volunteer collectors, extraordinary efforts will be made by the fleet committee to bring the total of the fleet fund to $70,000, and to cease work in that connection by Wednesday.

Before the collectors wind up their efforts Tuesday night they will visit 2300 saloons and 600 restaurants within the boundary of the city and expect to secure pledges of between $15,000 and $20,000.

FASTS AND CLIMBS MOUNT

Elmore Abstains 39 Days and Performs Pedestrian Feat.

LOS ANGELES, April 5.—Day H. Elmore, of this city, today observed the 39th day of a continuous fast by a journey on foot from Sierra Madre to the summit of Mount Wilson and return without exhibiting any injurious effects.

Mr. Elmore has reduced his weight from 205 to less than 170 pounds and expects to continue fasting a few days longer. He has refrained entirely from the use of tobacco, which he formerly consumed freely, and has partaken of nothing more nourishing than orange juice and an occasional cup of black coffee.

FLEET ASSURES PEACE

experience but declared himself wonderfully benefited by the treatment.

The Admiral felt so strong and was in such good spirits that he called for a drive through the hills. Accompanied by his son, Lieutenant F. Taylor Evans, and Surgeon P. E. McDonald, of the Admiral's staff, Dr. L. E. Phillips, the resident physician, and George V. Torney of the Presidio at San Francisco, the Admiral left the springs at 2 o'clock and returned at 4. He was taken to the ranch of James Horsburg, Jr., at Santa Ysabel, where a short stop was made and the Admiral given a glass of milk. He returned somewhat fatigued, but greatly pleased with the outing and strong enough to receive General J. B. Lauck, Adjutant-General of the California National Guard, who brought Governor Gillett's greetings and welcome to the state.

Overloaded With Gifts.

Although he has been at the springs but four days, the sunshine, baths and inland air have made a wonderful change in the Admiral's condition. He now can get around his room on crutches and was able to stand on his feet when getting in and out of the carriage today. The following bulletin was issued by Drs. McDonald and Phillips tonight:

"Admiral Evans shows steady improvement. He was out for a two hours' drive today and thoroughly enjoyed the sunshine and fresh air."

The Admiral is almost overwhelmed by the kindness and thoughtfulness of the people of California. His room in the southeast tower of the hotel is constantly banked with the choicest flowers, which arrive on every train from all parts of the state. Boxes of fruit addressed to him and hundreds of letters are received daily. Not a few of the letters contain requests for autographs; some make suggestions how to cure his rheumatism, but the majority express the writer's hope that the Admiral's health may be speedily restored.

According to Dr. McDonald, Admiral Evans is enjoying a better appetite and sleeps from eight to ten hours a night. His daily routine is bath and treatment in the Kurhaus for two hours in the morning, followed by a nap, luncheon and an hour's sunning in the Solarium or watching a game of croquet on the lawn in front of the hotel, in which he expects to participate in a day or two.

Not Shedding Blood for Trophies.

Admiral Evans this afternoon vehemently denounced a dispatch in a San Francisco paper written by a former war correspondent, now on board the United States ship Kansas at Magdalena Bay, quoting an ordnance officer as having said:

"I would rather have killed 10 men if our ship could have gotten the trophy."

Turning to the Associated Press correspondent he said:

I do not believe that any officer of the fleet ever made any such expression or said anything like that. If some officer did say that or make any such expression and I knew who it was, I would have him court-martialed. No feeling of such intense rivalry exists between ships as to be willing to sacrifice life for the sake of a target trophy. I think too much of my men for that. That is not the feeling in the Navy and I don't want the public to think that it is, because it is not true.

CHANCE OF CADETS COMING

CORVALLIS MAY SEND BATTALION TO ROSE FESTIVAL.

Agricultural College Has Corps of More Than 600, All Fully Armed Like the Regular Army.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvalis, Or., April 5.—(Special.)—A possible appearance of the O. A. C. cadet regiment in the parade at the Portland rose festival, is the subject of correspondence between President Kerr and the Festival authorities. President Kerr and all connected with the college are extremely anxious to do all possible to aid in the success of the Festival. The cadet regiment is over 600 strong, is fully uniformed, is highly drilled by an officer of the United States army, and has a uniformed band of 35 pieces. The men are armed with Krag-Jorgensen rifles, the officers are fully provided with side arms, and they present in marching order or military evolution, a superb spectacle.

A chief difficulty that seems to stand in the way is the question of transportation. The rates offered by the railroad company have not been such as to encourage the plan. The students at the institution are largely from the industrial classes of the state, and are not wealthy in this world's goods. Hundreds of them are working their way through college. The festival comes within a few days of the end of the college year, which is the time at which student finances are at low ebb. As planned, the regiment and band would leave here on an early morning special, reach Portland at 10 A. M. or thereabouts, be under arms most of the day, and in the evening return to Corvallis. It is a trip involving considerable hardship, but even in spite of this, there is no doubt if a satisfactory railroad rate could be secured, the whole body of more than 600 cadets would make the trip. The regiment consists of 12 companies, involving three battalions, all officered and conducted as is the regular army.

ELEVEN WILL HAVE TO LOSE

Clackamas Has 23 Republican Aspirants for Only 12 Offices.

OREGON CITY, Or., April 5.—(Special.)—Twelve men to succeed; 11 men to fall. This is the position of the Republican candidates for nomination for Clackamas County offices, and those who have opposition are striving mightily to win. This is true only for the offices of Representative, Assessor and Commissioner. For the two latter offices there are eight candidates, four for each place and it is altogether too early to pick the winners. The fight for Assessor is hard, and the contestants are James F. Nelson, the incumbent; Harry S. Moody, George F. Horton and W. H. Holder. In the race for Commissioner are Enos Cahill, W. H. Mattoon, E. E. Judd and R. S. Coe.

The legislative fight is of particular interest. Every one of the seven candidates for the nomination is running on practically the same platform; all of them are for Statement No. 1, and the men who have a large personal following and who can best demonstrate their ability to get votes will win out in April. There are three to nominate.

The primary law gives a certain advantage to candidates from the towns. In the primaries two years ago every candidate on the Republican ticket, except Treasurer Paddock, was from Oregon City, and he was successful over J. A. Tufts by only a few votes. If conditions do not change, the fight for Representative will be between Linn E. Jones, J. U. Campbell, Walter A. Dimick and Charles H. Dye. In the race for Assessor Mr. Moody is from Oregon City, and Mr. Nelson, while claiming Mulino as his home precinct, has been a resident of this city six years. George F. Horton is in West Oregon City, but lived here many years. There are no candidates from Oregon City for Commissioner, and for Coroner both candidates, Roswell L. Holman and Dr. C. A. Stuart, have their homes at the county seat. For six offices there is no contest and the nominations will be divided as follows: Sheriff, Richard L. Greaves; Clerk, F. W. Greenman; Recorder, Chauncey E. Ramsby; Treasurer, J. C. Paddock; School Superintendent, T. J. Gary; Surveyor, S. A. D. Hungate.

CHEHALIS HAS A HORSE SHOW

Successful Affair, Although No Prizes Are Offered.

CHEHALIS, Wash., April 5.—(Special.)—Hundreds of people were attracted to Chehalis yesterday by the horse show. About a hundred splendid animals were in the parade, including the finest draft and coach stallions to be found in Southwestern Washington. Visitors were present from Portland, Tacoma and Seattle and from all parts of the county. No prizes were offered at yesterday's exhibit, but it is proposed to have a big horse and colt show in the Fall, at which prizes will be given. The proposal to organize a county fair association here received a great impetus as a result of the parade yesterday and the proposition will be pushed to success.

JAPANESE SPIES IN ALL COUNTRIES

All Manner of Disguises Are Adopted to Secure Information.

AGENTS IN PHILIPPINES

High-Born, Educated Japanese Obtain Menial Employment There and in Hawaii to Learn All About the Country.

(Copyright, 1908, by Frederic J. Haskin.)

TOKIO, March 24.—(Special Correspondence.)—The Japanese government maintains a secret service system which for thorough organization and effectiveness is a marvel. Every few days the newspaper dispatches give accounts of some new exploit of the members of this corps. Even if all of these reports cannot be substantiated, their frequency and the wide territory covered would make it seem that the activities of these spies extend to the furthermost ends of the earth. One day they are heard from in some remote province of China, and the next in far off Chile. American Army officers assert that the system of espionage in the Philippines has been so extensive that the officials in Tokio know more about the Islands than the War Department in Washington. It has even been stated that agents of the Japanese war office, in the guise of railroad section laborers or servants in families residing in the locality, are stationed at every large railroad bridge on the Pacific Coast. While this may be mere rumor, the damage such an organized force could do to transportation in the event of hostilities breaking out, is easy to comprehend.

C. S. IRWIN.

Retiring Exalted Ruler Vancouver Elks' Lodge.

VANCOUVER, Wash., April 5.—(Special.)—The close of the administration of C. S. Irwin, exalted ruler of Vancouver Lodge, 823, B. P. O. Elks, finds the lodge in a prosperous condition, both financially as well as numerically. About 100 members were initiated and under his judicious management the debt on their property has been greatly decreased. His term has been noted for the many social functions given to the enjoyment of Vancouver public, making the Elks Lodge one of the most popular in the city.

Get Dying Spy's Information.

That the Japanese are not new at this game was shown by an incident which occurred recently in China. An American physician attached to one of the missionary hospitals located in an inaccessible province was aroused late one night by two Japanese men who requested that he accompany them to the bedside of a man who was dangerously ill. The doctor rapidly donned his clothes and hurried away with them. The patient proved to be a Japanese dressed in Chinese clothing, and at first glance the professional man saw that the sufferer was beyond recovery. The Japanese requested the physician to revive the dying man if possible, and they immediately set about taking a long statement from him. The physician could not understand anything that was said, except the names of towns, rivers and of prominent Chinese citizens. The reiteration of these Chinese names, as well as the anxiety of the Japanese to secure a complete statement, made it plain to the American that the doomed man was a spy. The remarkable part of the affair was that the dying Japanese had a full-grown queue and, when speaking to the doctor or servants, spoke perfect Chinese. The fact that this man had been a spy long enough to grow a queue indicates that the Japanese secret service is not a new branch of government work.

Innumerable incidents have occurred which show that high-class Japanese willingly do the most menial work in order to secure information their government desires. The foreigners have a fine club in Yokohama to which no native can belong. During the war with Russia this place was the rendezvous for business men of various nationalities, many of whom had important transactions with one or both of the belligerent powers. There was naturally a good deal of interesting gossip exchanged there, and later it was found that none of this had been lost on the ears of the Japanese authorities. The manager of the club had a number of Japanese boys about the place as servants, and during the progress of the war several of these were drafted for service at the front.

As they left for Manchuria, where the climate is cold, the manager presented each of them with a heavy, warm sweater. Toward the end of the campaign, a servant to whom he was particularly attached on account of his aptness and reliability, served notice that he had been summoned to the front. Whereupon the manager purchased a particularly fine sweater as a present for his favorite. Imagine the consternation around the club next morning when the servant appeared in the uniform of a Japanese naval officer. In order to hear what was being said around the place, he had worked there for months in the capacity of a menial. He thanked the manager for his kindness in presenting the nice sweater, left his compliments for various club members who had been generous with tips, and went down to sea in his ship.

A similar incident happened in Honolulu. A prominent native lady employed a good-looking young Japanese as a servant. He claimed to be a cook, but it was soon apparent that he had little or no experience in that line of work. Although he was a failure as a cook he seemed so agreeable and anxious to please that the lady determined to keep him in her employ, and give him something to do. One day while the lady was in Honolulu she had occasion to go into a large Japanese bank. As she entered one door her servant, who did not know she was there, came in from another entrance. He was instantly surrounded by the bank officials, who treated him with such fulsome respect and deference that it did not take the surprised woman long to understand why her servant could not cook. She was harboring a high-class spy under her roof. As soon as the make-believe servant saw his mistress he curtly dismissed those who surrounded him and left the bank. Being curious to know what the fellow's mission was, the lady did not dismiss him immediately. He seemed anxious to cultivate the good graces of the natives, and it was suspected that he might have been commissioned to sound local feeling on the prospect of Japanese rule in Hawaii. The fact that he turned the conversation to this subject many times gave ground for this opinion.

Secret Agents in Philippines.

An American hemphuyer in the Philippines began to get reports from his assistants in various parts of the islands, first in one locality and then in another, of two Japanese candy-peddlers who acted in a suspicious manner. One was a man of advanced years and the other a youth. Upon entering a town they immediately opened a shop and attracted many customers by offering good candy at a lower price than it could be sold at a profit. Only one of them stayed in the store at a time, the other mixing with the people on the outside. Finally they came to the place where the hempbuyer had his headquarters. He watched them closely and found that they could each speak several languages, and that they systematically followed the windings of all the roads leading to the town. Their movements caused him to conclude that they were map-makers.

About the same time two Japanese men who were fishing in the bay at Manila attracted attention. There was nothing about their appearance to indicate that they were other than what they pretended to be. They lived in poor quarters and sold their catch regularly in the market, but the manner in which they shifted about from one place to another finally caused them to be brought under surveillance. It was then discovered that when no one was near they were engaged in making soundings, evidently for the purpose of accurately charting the harbor for the war office in Tokio.

Knew All About Him.

A newspaper correspondent in Yokohama had an experience which illustrated the perfect system of keeping a check on the whereabouts of foreigners in the country. He was invited to the police station to see an expert instructing the raw recruits for the police force in the science of jiu jitsu. The chief of police told the correspondent that he would have some facts typewritten in English and would send them around to the hotel next day. The correspondent had moved that morning from one hotel to another, and as he was leaving the police station he happened to think of this and returned to leave his new address. The chief smiled and turned to the register, showing the foreigner the corrected address after his name. The system was so complete that the removal had been entered at headquarters almost before the luggage had arrived at the new place.

A recent exposure revealed the clever manner in which the Japanese war office had been keeping in touch with military matters in Germany. One of the trusted agents of the Mikado's bureau of secret information learned the barber's trade and in some manner secured a place in a large military club in Berlin. Here he came into personal contact with the leading military lights of the Kaiser's realm. By listening to the confidential gossip around him he learned many military secrets and found that the real opinion of many prominent German officials in regard to Japanese matters was quite the contrary to what had been expressed through diplomatic channels. When the real character of this clever little Oriental was disclosed there was a great commotion in German military circles. No more Japanese barbers need apply in Berlin.

Just to Keep Posted.

While the activity of the Japanese secret service representatives in many latitudes is unquestioned, it does not necessarily follow that Japan intends to declare war with every nation upon which it is found spying, or upon any of them for that matter. It is a good thing for every government to be as well posted about its neighbors as possible, and as a matter of fact it is most difficult to keep military secrets nowadays. However, other nations do not go quite as far in espionage as the Japanese, nor do they assign citizens of high standing to such ordinary tasks. If the American Government should determine to pattern after the Japanese, and to go them one better on their system, we might one day hear of the Honorable William H. Taft taking observations in Tokyo in the guise of a fat wrestler, or of General J. Franklin Bell impersonating a jinrickisha man in the streets of Kobe.

COREAN REVOLT REVIVED

SEVERAL FIGHTS WITH JAPANESE NEAR SEOUL.

Corean Officials Encourage Rebels, Who Demand Expulsion of Japanese From Empire.

TOKIO, April 5.—Advices from Seoul say that insurgents are showing increased activity in the neighborhood of Seoul, several minor fights having occurred lately. The insurgent element has been encouraged by the attitude of certain members of the Corean court.

Privy Councilior Yun has demanded the suppression of the insurgents by Corean troops instead of Japanese. He has objected to the employment of foreigners. Viscount Sone has requested him to explain his demand. The insurgents have issued a violent circular demanding the expulsion of the Japanese from Corean territory.

Marquis Ito, Japanese Resident-General, is expected to arrive in Seoul from Japan next Tuesday.

Marshfield Wants to Clean Up.

MARSHFIELD, Or., April 5.—(Special.)—The Marshfield Chamber of Commerce is forming a Civic Improvement League to beautify the city. It is proposed to fix upon a "clean-up day" and to call upon the women of Marshfield to assist in the accomplishment of the cleaning work.

The Chamber of Commerce will also take action in regard to the improvement of the water front of Marshfield. An effort will be made to induce the property-owners to repair water front buildings and clean trash from the wharf so that side of the city will present a better appearance.

CONTEST HOT IN NEBRASKA

PROHIBITIONISTS PUTTING UP HARD FIGHT.

Expect to Cut Down Number of Saloons Materially on Tuesday. Special Election in Lincoln.

OMAHA, April 5.—The contest over the liquor question in nearly all the towns of Nebraska outside of Omaha has been waged with more energy than ever before. In probably three-fifths of the towns of the state, including all the larger places, saloons are now allowed to run, but as a result of next Tuesday's municipal elections the prohibition element is sanguine of a sweeping reduction in the traffic. At Lincoln, the state capital, a special election will be held Tuesday, at which the question of prohibition only will be voted on.

KALAMAZOO SURE TO GO WET

Fourteen Michigan Counties Vote on Local Option.

DETROIT, April 5.—Fourteen counties in Michigan will vote on the question of local option tomorrow. They are as follows: Cass, St Joseph, Kalamazoo, Oakland, Clinton, Barry, Gratiot, Gladwin, Osceola, Wexford, Missaukee, Grand-traverse and Oceana. Kalamazoo in Kalamazoo County and Pontiac in Oakland County are the largest cities in the 14 counties. In Kalamazoo betting is strongly in favor of the "wets" and "wet" sentiment is said to be responsible for the heaviest registration in years at Pontiac.

CAMP OUT ON THE ROOF

Freshmen Hit on Plan to Avoid Being Kidnaped.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., April 5.—Twenty University of Michigan freshmen, scheduled to make speeches at the annual freshmen banquet tomorrow, tonight are camped on the roof of the National Guard Armory to protect themselves against kidnaping by the sophomores. The 20 men climbed to their lofty refuge yesterday afternoon prepared to stay there until the banquet hour Monday evening. The sophomores discovered them today and tried to mount to the camp with ladders. The freshmen, however, had armed themselves with iron hooks attached to long poles and drew up the ladders as fast as they were placed.

Warrant for Absconding Cashier.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 5.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Edwin Cramer, paying teller of the Bank of Los Angeles, who is alleged to have stolen $2750 from the vaults of that institution. Cramer is believed to have gone to Mexico, or to be on his way to Canada.
