NEICKEN LOSES TO SPECK

Large Crowd Sees Opening Matches of Three-Night Tourney, Under Auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union.

It would have been a disgraced member of the sporting gent who left the Exposition building last night and did not declare that the wrestling and boxing matches given by the Multnomah Club, were not of the highest order.

When the first wrestling bout was called for, the crowd gathered around the ring and in the galleries. It was a well-behaved crowd and scattered through it were men prominent in the business and professional life of the city.

Those at the Ringside.

Among those at the ringside were President George G. Smith, the Multnomah Club Judge George H. Williams, Rev. A. Morrison, Sheriff H. L. Bivens, Harry Litt, Arthur O. Jones, Captain H. P. Baumgartner, Officer Jeffrey D. Hicks, C. F. Jones, Dan J. Mahoney, T. Booth Brooks, H. E. Jones, Colonel D. M. Dunne, George J. Dilla, Peter Grant, C. H. Beckenmeier, Charles Wright, J. M. Lewis, Lou Fowler, J. H. Wood, Chester G. Murphy, C. E. S. Wood, Claude Baker, H. D. Rigler, W. W. Moore, Harold Schmeer, Edgar M. Lander, M. H. Dickson, J. W. Hanks, John F. O'Neill, Joseph Wiley, M. R. Whitehead, Edward Jacobs, R. D. Inman, A. H. Diamond, Louis Deane, Judson George, J. Cameron, E. V. Walker, W. P. Brown, David Houseman, J. E. McCord, Robert Krohn, Tom Monks, E. H. Deery, Fred A. Frieberg, E. J. Dowling, William Thompson, H. H. Howard, J. W. Dick, Richard Holder, Alex Smith, L. Schubert, Fred T. Merrill, Frank Dunne, T. Morris Dunne, Irving Robb, Henry Metzger and J. C. Mueser.

The first wrestling bout on the card were wrestling matches, and while the bouts were a bit dry, as actual fights, there was just enough clever work shown by the contestants to keep the crowd interested. It was evident, however, that it was the boxing for which the spectators were most anxious, for when it was announced that there would be a contest in which clever youngsters would exchange blows and jabs, there was a burst of eager applause.

Neicken in Poor Form. The disappointment of the night for the local talent was the defeat of Neicken by Speck. Neicken, for little thing is lost, and in saying it, no credit is taken from Speck's victory. Neicken was not himself. He looked decidedly fatigued and did not fight with the vim and finish that has marked his other battles. He was wild and his judgment of distance was poor. Speck had a technical knock-out Neicken in the second round and once the Seattle lad found that he could use it, he kept Neicken's head rocking. In the second round, Speck's right hand, which he left waving, had landed over the right eye, making a wound that bled considerably. Several times Speck found this sore spot and landed his rounds there, the most effective blows.

Eddie Mills Wins Opener.

In the opener Eddie Mills won the first bout from Fred Hussey, of the Seattle Athletic Club, in the 135-pound grapple. Mills failed to let Hussey's strength come to the fore, but the local lad was the aggressor. Mills was after his man from the tap of the rope. Hussey began to work the last few minutes, but his effort came too late. Hussey will meet Donaldson of the Seattle Y. M. C. A. tonight.

In the second bout Y. Venables, of the Seattle Athletic Club, proved strong for Otto Ott, of Multnomah, and tossed the local boy with a rolling fall in one minute and 14 seconds. Venables displayed the more class and was clearly the more experienced of the two wrestlers. Venables will meet Adams of Spokane tonight.

Oakland Wrestler Loses. In the Pacific Coast championship of the middleweight division, James Johnson, of the Seattle Athletic Club, won over Jeff Anlof, of the Rembrand Athletic Club, of Oakland, Johnson was awarded the decision by Referee Greenland on a unanimous vote.

staff between H. Ritter, of Spokane, and H. Hewitt, unattached. When Announcer Bert Perrell said "Laten and I'll tell you something," and then said "There will be eight boxing bouts, three was a round of wrestling, the Olympic Club, in the 125-pound class, it took four rounds to decide the bout, and even then it was a halting decision. Grandfield had a stiff punch than the local boy, but because Edgar Frank earned five wrestling bouts and six boxing matches, and each of them, with the exception of one, was worth the price of admission. What added to the enjoyment of the night's sport was the splendid seating arrangements and the promptness in which all of the events were pulled off.

Speck Proves a Surprise. W. Speck, of Seattle, took the local talent by surprise when he beat H. Neicken, also among the 135-pounders. The Seattle lad put a right over on Neicken's jaw early in the opening round and, while the M. A. A. C. boy only went to one knee, the punch was so good that Neicken, who was wearing a headgear and a cool cap, and that in the second round, did he seem to be worried by Neicken's punches. He stalled long enough to get stilled and then cut loose.
