COUNCIL PRAISES POLICE

WORK IN MURDER CASE UNANIMOUSLY COMMENDED.

Mayor Says Action Is Absurd—Councilman Baker Says the Mayor Is Jealous.

The City Council, at a special meeting yesterday afternoon, passed unanimously a resolution, strongly commending the work of the local police, and especially the detective staff, in the Wolff murder case.

Mayor Lane heeded without much parley, the only question being as to the propriety of the action at this time.

It strikes me the resolution is entirely proper. No presumption of guilt is contained in it. I account for Mayor Lane's attitude on the ground that he must have contemplated similar action, and is sore because the Council beat him to it.

Whereas, On Friday evening, May 1, 1908, within the corporate limits of the City of Portland, a worthy citizen and merchant of the City of Portland was brutally murdered at his place of business within the business district of the City of Portland, about the hour of 6:30 P. M. on said day, and

Whereas, The crime was at that time and for some time past, one of the most mysterious that has occurred in the criminal annals of the Pacific Northwest, and

Whereas, The police force of the City of Portland look up the search and work toward the apprehension of the murderer, and pursued it with unceasing vigilance despite an almost total lack of clues, or any evidence pointing toward the perpetrator of the dastardly crime, and

Whereas, Through such untiring efforts and ceaseless vigilance the police force of the City of Portland, and particularly the detective department thereof, has brought to light the cause and murderer, and arrested the alleged murderer, and

Whereas, The small of the City of Portland is the official representative of the good citizens of the City of Portland, and that while recognizing the presumption of the innocence that surrounds all persons accused of crime, it is but just that the police force of the city, and particularly the detective department thereof, should receive commendation for the good work done.

Now therefore, The Council of the City of Portland, at a regular meeting assembled, representing the citizens of the City of Portland, does hereby, by this resolution, officially and publicly commend the police force of the city, and particularly the detective branch thereof, for their unceasing efforts and untiring vigilance which has been so conspicuously displayed in the efforts to clear up the mystery of the murder of the late Nathan Wolff, and to secure the apprehension and conviction of the alleged murderer.

It is further resolved that upon the passage of this resolution, a copy thereof shall be handed to the Chief of Police, who shall cause the same to be read before the three watches of the police upon their assembling, and particularly to the detective force of the City of Portland within one day from the passage of this resolution.

Resolved, That the Council of the City of Portland, at a regular meeting assembled, representing the citizens of the City of Portland, does hereby, by this resolution, officially and publicly commend the police force of the city, and particularly the detective branch thereof, for their unceasing efforts and untiring vigilance which has been so conspicuously displayed in the efforts to clear up the mystery of the murder of the late Nathan Wolff, and to secure the apprehension and conviction of the alleged murderer.

WOULD NOT KNOW MURDERER

DuBois Says He Could Not Identify Wolff's Slayer.

M. L. DuBois, night cook at the Bismarck Restaurant, 209 Morrison street, has made no endeavor to identify Edward H. Martin, accused of slaying Nathan Wolff, the first-street pawnbroker. Mr. DuBois last Saturday reported to the police that he saw Wolff's murderer in the jewelry store at 6:20 o'clock on the night the murder was committed. At that time he was confident he could identify the murderer on sight, but he has since experienced a change of mind.

BLOODY COAT AND RIFLE ARE FOUND

scious of his conduct," Martin explained last night. "I did not think for a minute that they would go to the length of applying that to me. I was not talking about myself and they weren't and they know it."

Offer Bait for Confession.

Early in the afternoon the officers made their last play for a confession and failed. It was not intended that this coup should become known but there was a leak. While Martin was in torment for want of morphine two of the detectives visited his cell and asked him if he wanted morphine. He told them he did.

There isn't anything I can tell you," Martin replied. He would not be shaken from this stand and the attempt to extort a confession was then dropped. Martin afterwards described this experience with the officers but displayed no animus.

Gets Morphine From City Physician.

At the instance of several lawyers and persons taking an interest in Martin's family, City Physician Ziegler was called in late in the day to examine the sufferer. Martin told the doctor that he was accustomed to ten grains of morphine daily and felt the need of the opiate strongly. Ziegler prescribed small doses of the drug as necessary, and these doses were administered at intervals during the night by Jailer Endicott. The doses were too small to produce an immediate effect and Martin had not recovered from the physical and mental depression of abstinence at a late hour.

Mrs. Martin called at the city jail to visit her husband at 5:30 P. M. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Sarah Griffin, and by City Attorney Kavanagh, who had been asked to investigate the case on behalf of Mrs. Martin.

The party was ushered at once to the third floor of the jail, where Martin is confined in a double cell. Mrs. Martin seemed self-possessed even when taken into the dark corridor leading to the grimy cell.

Prisoner Cheered by Wife.

Martin was lying down when his wife walked up to the bars, but on seeing her he got up at once, his face brightened, and he hurried to greet her. She reached through the bars, their hands met and she leaned forward as if to kiss him, when the jailer informed her that the rules required she should stand away from the cell.

They held a whispered conversation for several minutes, and then Mrs. Martin turned and walked away at once. Little of what they said was overheard. "You must not talk too much. We will provide counsel for you," she said.

Martin seemed in a more cheerful mood following that visit. He said his wife's visit had made him feel better, although he was suffering great physical pain. He attempted to eat, but could not retain food because of the lack of drugs.

In addition, the revolver with which Wolff was shot must be located. Could that be found and positively identified as the one loaned Martin the afternoon of the tragedy, it would be a strong point for conviction. Finding of all the apparel Martin is alleged to have worn Friday night is also more or less necessary to complete the evidence. The circumstances are already sufficient for ready indictment, but it is intended to take no chances of a possible lapse at the trial.

Work of furthering identification of the overcoat will be taken up by the police the first thing this morning. It will be shown to Mrs. Martin and to various ones of Martin's friends and other means of identification will be taken. The ownership of the rifle will likewise be talked any further, as I have been advised not to talk of the case."

Wife's Course Is a Mystery.

That the police had hoped to use Mrs. Martin in gaining a confession from her husband became known yesterday afternoon. She was urged to advise Martin to confess the truth if he really killed Wolff. On Tuesday the woman told freely of her suspicions that her husband was the murderer, and it was not believed she intended standing by him. What caused her to change her mind, if she really has suffered a change of view on the case, is not known. It is certain that instead of telling him to confess she advised him not to talk too much—advice which was plainly overheard.

With the man suspected of the crime safely in jail, the authorities admitted last night that their work on the case has little more than begun. Despairing of a confession, the evidence must be completed. Martin's relations with Wolff must be more clearly established. It must be learned as to the exact status of his financial condition at the time of the murder. More must be learned as to his past habits and the previous offenses of which he has been suspected.

He Says She Believes Him Innocent.

"She believes I am innocent and says she will stand by me," Martin said afterward to a representative of The Oregonian. "She said to me, 'You are innocent and everyone that knows you knows that you are innocent.' She said that counsel would be provided and told me I mustn't talk too much. I hope you will not think me discourteous if I decline to say anything further about the case."

"It is said that you borrowed a revolver from a friend the afternoon of the Wolff murder," he suggested.

"No, that is not true," Martin replied. "I know nothing of any revolver. I didn't borrow one Friday, or at any other time."

"As to that shirt," the suspected man admitted, when asked to account for the gory apparel said to belong to him, "I do not mind saying that is of no consequence as evidence against me. It was not my shirt. They say I bought three shirts and that the original owner of the shirt had three others just like it which he sold to a peddler. I bought three shirts, but not four. I can account for the ones I bought. Further than that I cannot be held responsible."

"I didn't kill that man Wolff," he continued earnestly. "I haven't a drop of that man's blood on my hands. I couldn't do such a thing. No, I shall not confess. They tried to get me to confess today something I did not do. They asked me a lot of questions about what might have been done, but I did not in any way say I possibly could have been involved in this thing. I hope you will excuse me from gone into more fully than was possible last night.

ABANDONED SURGERY COURSE

Loss of Money in Bank Failure

Aided Martin's Downfall.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 6.—On October 19, 1906, Edward Hugh Martin married Miss Theresa A. Griffin in this city. They left at once for Portland, where it was said Martin was to take a course in surgery at a hospital. His parents supplied the couple with money, which he deposited in a bank which failed, and he abandoned the surgery course.

His wife's relatives in this city say that in the Spanish-American war Martin received wounds in the head and the injury affected his mind last year.

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lena V. Henry, of Norristown, Ga., writes to Mrs. Pinkham.

"I suffered untold misery from female troubles. My doctor said an operation was the only chance I had, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. One day I read how other women had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it. Before I had taken the first bottle I was better, and now I am entirely cured."

Every woman suffering with any female trouble should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LAWYERS CHARGED WITH VIOLATING POSTAL LAWS.

Inspector Reported to Be Investigating Cases in Which Fees Were Gained by Misrepresentation.

O. C. Riches, postal inspector, returned yesterday from Southern Oregon. While he would not confirm it, Mr. Riches is believed to have been investigating charges of fraudulent use of the mails preferred against several lawyers in Douglas and Jackson counties. The lawyers complained against have been charged with offering unreasonable inducements to individuals to file on quarter-sections of land included in the Oregon & California Railroad grant.

Most of the dealers in these lands have avoided flagrant violation of the postal laws in their operations, but it is believed by the postal inspectors that in view of Representative Hawley's telegram, the postal laws of the country have been violated. While Mr. Riches would not discuss the subject yesterday, he did admit that he had some matters to present for the consideration of United States Attorney McCourt. Unquestionably these complaints consist of charges against land grant operators who are accused of fleeing unsuspecting citizens of a preliminary filing fee for presenting their applications for the purchase of parcels of the land included in the railroad land grant.

In a telegram this week Representative Hawley declared that citizens should not be persuaded to make payments in seeking to acquire any of the lands included in the land grant until the pending litigation between the Government and the railroad company should be settled and the Government had secured absolute control of the disputed property. Until then, Representative Hawley contends, efforts on the part of individual citizens to purchase these lands can only prove futile.
