Rose Eytinge at Three Score and Ten

Interesting Chat With Rare Woman, at One Time America's Foremost Emotional Actress—Appeared With All the Great Stars of the Old Days

ROSE EYTINGE AS SHE APPEARED WHEN THE TOOL OF AMERICAN THEATERGOERS

ROSE EYTINGE TODAY

BY NANCY LEE

At three score and ten, Rose Eytinge, at one time America's foremost emotional actress, still retains all the enthusiasm and vivacity of a girl in her teens, tempered by the unusual experiences of longevity that befall but few. I was fortunate enough this week to take tea with Lady Rose, as she is familiarly called, and was at once impressed with her charming and electrical personality. In manner and pose she suggests the old school and this impression is made more forcible by her temperamental hands and wonderfully expressive eyes. Particularly were the "windows of the soul" noticeable while reminiscing, showing lights and shadows, paths and tenderness, and a fascinating and keen sense of humor, the latter attribute asserting itself in an undeniable spontaneous combustion of the orbs or in modern parlance, executing an irresistible double tattoo or ragtime movement.

Rose Eytinge was born in Philadelphia in 1838 and made her debut in Gotham at the age of 14 as Melanie in the "Old Guard." After ten years in stock, she appeared in 1868 with Edwin Booth, and immediately became a reigning favorite. Following several years' residence in Europe, she again acted in London in 1880, supporting Barry Sullivan and other English celebrities. In late years her appearances have been infrequent, as she has devoted much time to teaching dramatic art, and to her literary efforts, the most recent being her interesting memoirs. In 1870 Rose Eytinge's husband, George H. Butler, was appointed Consul-General to Egypt, where they resided for some years, when the distinguished actress immediately became the center of an admiring group of the contemporary artistic and literary lights.

Interweaving her experiences with delightful anecdotes, she tells of her life in the Far East. She relates that shortly after the Civil War, the Viceroy of Egypt negotiated with a number of the brilliant ex-officers of the Confederate Army, who had been left worse than penniless, offering them flattering positions. Learning that these overtures had been made, Sir Henry Bulwer, the secret plenipotentiary extraordinary of England, conveyed the information to the Home Office, and as a consequence the plans of the Viceroy were at once frustrated by the Sultan of Turkey's veto. Unfortunately at this juncture the flower of Confederate military officers were then en route. Their presence, however, was at once made the motif for elaborate feting, and while the Winter of their discontent proved a veritable Summer of Calneze Ezyty.

Later among the American arrivals was General Sherman, for whom a friendship began that terminated only with his death. He being a constant visitor at their attractive dahabiah on the Nile, where he spent many hours caressing their small son for whom he cherished a sincere affection. Rose Eytinge during her residence in France was presented at Napoleon's court. Napoleon, she declares, was delightfully democratic, while Eugenie assumed an air of frigid hauteur, owing possibly to the consciousness of her great beauty and her plebeian extraction. "Her beauty of face and figure was widely commented on," said Lady Rose. "Her features were perfect, though they were characterized by decidedly oblique lines that suggested discontent."

Eugenie, I am informed was the original peroxide queen, having created the vogue for golden tresses, a fashion which is still unfortunately subject to spasmodic and intermittent outbursts.

During a Winter in London, the popular actress numbered among her friends Charles Dickens, Edmund Yates, Wil-

Collins, H. J. Byron, Gladstone, Lord Rosebery and Charles Reade. Dickens, she declares she found at all times unrefined, that his complexion irritated her, but his comedy was exquisite. He loved to read aloud from his own works, and this, Lady Rose adds, was invariably disappointing, the serious situations which she had so admired falling at his interpretation to attain pathos, in fact, assumed bathos.

"Charles Reade," said Miss Eytinge, "was charming, inconsistent and eccentric—the qualities, however, of all men" (the latter added with the forementioned syncretized movement of the eyes). "He cherished a great fondness for Americans and prized highly all tokens sent from this country. On one occasion, knowing of the rarity of iceboxes in England, I sent him a chest from New York, about the time that he received from an admirer 12 bottles of bay rum."

The author, it appears, was more familiar with the word "rum" than "bay," and at once invited all his boon companions to a tea at his apartments, himself mixing the punch, consisting of ice, lemons, fruit and 12 large, juicy bottles of bay rum. Needless to say, the result almost proved fatal and no doubt had repeated doses been imbibed, Charles Reade would, in addition, have been an inventor who would eventually have put the seven Sutherland sisters out of business.

Rose Eytinge is now summing in Portland, and recalls in her inimitable way her first trip up the Columbia river 30 years ago.

"We were most fortunate," said she, "twas one of God's most glorious days, and I was reverently impressed with the towering pines piercing the clouds, a deer swimming in the purple waters, his antlers boldly cresting his lordly head, while a splendid eagle soared through the azure skies." Adding, "Is it not an inexplicable truth, that immediately when the hand of man touches nature its beauty is irretrievably lost?"

Upon bidding adieu, Lady Rose avowed that she had no intention of abandoning the stage, and added with a voice full of minor chords, "For the stage I revere as an art, and love as a profession."

BOYS MUST FACE COURT

Trio That Assaulted Adams to Be Examined Today.

Roy Antonisen, Bruce Strange and Oil Martin, boys arrested Wednesday on a charge of assaulting Thomas Adams at Montavilla Saturday night, were yesterday turned over to the Juvenile Court, and at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon will be examined by Judge Gantenbein.

Adams, who incurred the displeasure of the youthful trio by escorting a young woman home from a dance on the night mentioned, has been under the care of a physician for the past three days owing to the severe wounds inflicted by the jealous youths. At first it was feared that Adams was seriously, if not fatally injured, but yesterday the attending physician, Dr. A. W. Moore, announced that the injuries were not as severe as at first believed. It is now expected that he will recover and be able to return to his duties as a student operator of the Western Union Telegraph Company. Adams will probably be able to appear before Judge Gantenbein this afternoon and relate his story of the assault. The three boys arrested admitted their guilt but did not believe that they had seriously injured Adams.

BLAST WRECKS KITCHEN

Farmer Demolishes Wall and Knocks Cat Through Roof.

J. W. Parker, while blasting stumps on his farm near Pleasant Home, on the Mount Hood road, Monday, aimed a big blast in the wrong direction and part of the stump went through the rear wall of his kitchen. He was some distance away and thought it was safe to fire the blast, but the stump divided and one part crashed through the kitchen. The cook stove was wrecked and the building looked like it had been struck by a cyclone. A cat that had been sleeping in the woodbox was knocked through the roof of the room and landed some distance away, minus half its tail. Mr. Parker found that there was not enough of his kitchen left to repair and has decided to build a new one.

LANE INVITES THE GROCERS

WOULD ENTERTAIN NATIONAL CONVENTION IN 1909.

Mayor Calls Attention to Attractions of This City, Including Women of Unequaled Beauty.

Mayor Lane, while in his most cheerful mood yesterday, wrote a letter to John A. Greene, president of the National Retail Grocers' Association, formally inviting that organization to hold its next annual session in Portland. The beauties of this city, as outlined by the chief executive, are numerous, not the least item of which, as he sets forth, is that "it has a larger number of beautiful women in proportion to its population, than any city in the world."

The Mayor explained in his letter that a number of these beautiful women "are still unmarried, and they are worth a trip around the world to see." He also displayed his poetic nature by a vivid description of the scenic charms of this city. "Its location," he says, "is one of the most beautiful in the world. The climate is balmy and invigorating and has no equal. It offers the most beautiful scenery, with its green hills, snow-capped mountains and beautiful rivers."

The letter ends with a most cordial invitation to the grocers to meet here next year.

The letter was forwarded to Boston, Mass., where, this month, the retail grocers will hold their annual session. It follows:

Mr. John A. Greene, President, National Retail Grocers' Association, Boston, Mass.—My Dear Sir: On behalf of the people of this city I wish to extend to the members of the National Retail Grocers' Association, in session in your city at this time, a cordial invitation to hold their annual convention in this city in 1909.

No doubt the members of the National Retail Grocers' Association will receive many invitations from many different cities which wish to be honored with their presence during the time that they are in your city. In no other city will they receive so cordial a welcome, nor has any other city so many attractions to offer to them.

The City of Portland is rapidly growing and is prosperous. Its location is one of the most beautiful in the world. The climate is balmy and invigorating and has no equal. It offers the most beautiful scenery, with its green hills, snow-capped mountains and beautiful rivers. It has also a larger number of beautiful women in proportion to its population than any city in the world; a number of whom are still unmarried, and they are worth a trip around the world to see. It is a city noted for its open and generous-hearted hospitality, and it has the facilities and the means with which to show its good feeling to its visitors.

In every way this city is easily the first and proper choice for a place in which to hold your next annual convention, and in the name of the city I extend you a cordial welcome to do so, at the same time assuring you that if you accept the invitation your visit here will linger in your memories with a loving tenderness, growing greater with age, until every other pleasant recollection has faded from your mental vision.

With best wishes for a pleasant and profitable meeting during your present session, and earnestly hoping to meet you all in person in 1909, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
HARRY LANE,
Mayor.

TEN REBELS ARRESTED

LIMA, Peru, May 7.—As an outcome of its investigation of the recent futile revolutionary movement in Peru, the Government yesterday caused to be arrested 10 of the leading men in the Democratic and Liberal parties. ## LANE WILL NOT APOLOGIZE

REFUSES DEMAND OF KAVANAUGH FOR RETRACTION.

Said to Have Confirmed Statement That City Attorney Advised the Council to Violate Charter.

Mayor Lane will not apologize to City Attorney Kavanaugh during a special session of the Judiciary Committee of the Council, held last Friday night. At that meeting Mr. Kavanaugh acted in the capacity of inquisitor, and Mayor Lane felt that the manner of the legal advisor of the municipality was insulting. The Mayor, therefore, when pressed hard to answer what he regarded as a question intended to lead him into a trap, resented it, and asked the members of the Committee and Council to be seated. When the Council met in special session last Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Kavanaugh reviewed the entire history of the case, detailing the manner in which the Mayor's charge occurred, and then went into a lengthy explanation of the whole affair, from last November to date. He again denied ever having advised or connived a charter violation, and demanded from Mayor Lane proof of the accusation or an apology.

Mayor Lane replied that he felt he had correctly quoted Mr. Kavanaugh, and held to the statement made previously, that Mr. Kavanaugh had stated in an open Council meeting last November, that inasmuch as the charter provision relative to the loaning of public funds had been violated, it would not be harmful should the violation continue.

What Mr. Kavanaugh intends doing, in case Mayor Lane refuses to apologize, is unknown, but he stated during the special session of the Council last Wednesday, that he would "bring to book" anyone who unjustly charged him with such a grave offense.

HONOR THE SOLDIER DEAD

Posts and Relief Corps Will Observe Memorial Day.

The general committee from all the G. A. R. posts in the city has practically completed arrangements for the observance of Memorial Day. Members will visit the public schools Friday before Memorial and address the children. On the East Side, Summer Post and Summer Relief Corps will attend services, Sunday night, May 24, at Centenary Church, where they will listen to a sermon by Rev. Clarence True Wilson. West Side Posts and Relief Corps will attend services at the First Congregational Church, where Dr. Luther M. Dyott will preach.

It has been decided to hold general Memorial exercises in Lone Fir Cemetery, Saturday, May 30, at 11 A. M., when all the Posts and Relief Corps in the city will participate. G. C. Calkins will be the commander in charge. There will be ritualistic services and an oration. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock there will be a parade on the West Side and services on the Plaza blocks by the Spanish-American veterans.

The Council has appropriated $250 to defray the expenses of the day. The speaker at Lone Fir Cemetery has not yet been announced. M. J. Morse is chairman of the committee of arrangements; A. J. Haines, secretary; and A. C. Edmunds, treasurer.
