BY WILL G. MAC RAE. For fear that some of those misguided 8000 fans who visited the Vaughn-street playground yesterday afternoon may have a sneaking notion that they saw a ball game, here's the truth: It didn't even resemble one. It was just one of those athletic exhibitions with an odor strongly suggesting the stockyards, one that not suggesting the stockyards, one that not even if it were labeled "baseball," would be guilty of deceiving anyone.

His Umpness, Bull Perrine, did the very proper thing when he refused to make a policeman out of himself and drive the crowd back, and promptly declared the game forfeited to San Francisco, 9 to 0.

Ed Pinnance may be full of curves and deceptive shoots, but he was 10,000 miles shy on baseball noodle in yesterday's matinee. Undoubtedly, the brave was panic-stricken when he saw himself surrounded by 2000 howling fans that overflowed the inclosure, but even in his wildest panic he did two things that had yellow trimmings, which he shouldn't have done. One was when he threw Mohler's bunt to second to catch Hildebrand, and the other was his fallure to go to third in the fifth inning, which was responsible for Zieder's unassisted double play.

Pinnance is credited with saying that Pinnance is credited with saying that Captain Casey ordered the play. If Casey told him to throw the ball to second, then Pearl is guilty of a skull play. The beave to second, coupled with some slow thinking on the part of Portland's infield, helped the Seals to score their four runs. And when the brave remained glued to the second bag, it spoiled Portland's chances of at least scoring another run. While the Indian may be excused for his first dumb play, nothing can be said in extenuation of his failure to get off in the fifth.

Pinnance Repeats Bad Error.

In the opening inning, the Seals dupli-called the trick they pulled off when they faced the Indian the other day by scor-ing four runs in the first inning. Hilde-brand walked and Pinnance, just as ue did in the previous game, tried to nail Hildy at second on Mohler's sacrifice, and the ball to second instead of getting Mohler at first. Williams sent the pair along with a nicely-executed sacrifice.
Then someone cut the string. Melchoir singled and so did Zeider. Cooney took care of Piper on a hard chance. Two runs were registered and then came Me-storage. McCredie went into the game, because Raftery was on the sick list, and sent Ryan to center. McCredie signalized his return to the game by lining out a two-bagger into the crowd to left, and scored on a safe drive by Danzig. In the fifth, Pinnance scrambled our chances make of McConnell's delivery, while the failing to run bages like a hallplayer. by failing to run bases like a ballplayer, and was the means of doubling himself and Casey out at second.

and Casey out at second.

After the first inning Pinnance settled down, and until the first half of the ninth, when the balloon went up again. With McArdle dead and gone, Berry hit into the crowd for two bases and then Henley walked. Hildebrand hit into the crowd for two more bases. Mohler was safe when Johnson foozled Monier's bunt, and Nick Williams planted one into the crowd in center for two sacks.

By this time the spectators had crowded the outfleiders into the diamond. Williams the outfielders into the diamond. Williams took a big lead off second, and in the run-down game Melchoir was forced off the visitors could do with his delivery that and more under the plate. Melchoir the mound for Vancouver, and the best the run-down game Melchoir was forced off third and morgued at the plate. Melchoir made the last out, and then the crowd broke up things for fair. The squirming mass took possession of the field and the hoodlums and rowdies in the mob began throwing cushions. The demonstration was shameless, but there was no stopping it, and the even uniformed policemen in the crowd kept well out of sight. Several of them absolutely refused to stop the disgraceful scene on the field. stop the disgraceful scene on the field.

Record Crowd at Game.

The crowd that saw the game was larger than that of Tuesday, the opening game. Hundreds who had purchased grandstand tickets and arrived late could not get in the inclosure. Half that many did not even wait for the ceremony of having the gatekeepers take their tickets, but climbed over the fence. Near the use some philanthropic fan booster a ladder against the fence and fully 50 entered in this way. The score:

Don't Wink-But keep both eyes wide open

Many thousand people have winked at the grocer during the past ten days. In response they have received a generous sample of Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes. And they were delighted. It gave them an idea of how delicious a breakfast food could be.

Over 100 men were engaged to issue the invitations and see that all grocers were supplied with "wink ammunition."

The result was a most phenomenal demand for the new breakfast food. We venture to say that fully onehalf the people of the city had Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes for breakfast this morning. And most of them will continue to enjoy it for breakfast. But every great success has imitators.

The real purpose of this advertising campaign is to guard you against substitution; we want to impress upon your mind the name "Kelloggi", familiarize you with the package and signature of With Kellyg and thoroughly acquaint you with the delicious flavor of the genuine- Kellogg's Toasted Com Flakes.

For they may imitate the box—they may copy the name, but they cannot copy the Flavor.

It's the flavor that won its favor. It will win your favor and it will hold it. So when you want the real Toasted Corn Flakes, be sure and call for and Butte's best hitters hit for extra bases late in the game, when Califf seemed to weaken somewhat. In the ninth, with one gone and seemingly no chance for Butte to win, Kreitz hit one to right center. Both Van Buren and Doettiger went after it, and both quit just as they got to the ball, which dropped safe. Harkness struck out, but Bennett hit one against the right-field fence for two sacks, and Cartwright emulated his example. This right haven a light by sain from a tied the score.
