He showed the folly of the Democratic argument that a member of the Democratic minority could accomplish results in a Republican senate. He ad-mitted that in voting the people should consider the men and he urged the closest scruliny of the two candidates. Mr. Cake was vociferously applauded when he referred to the efforts that are being made to discredit his position with reference to Statement No. 1. "Without an issue and unable to find a thing against the Republican nominee that might be used the Democrats were forced to resort to efforts to discredit my position and my views, but have failed completely.
