WOULD SLAY THE TRUSTS

BRYAN SAYS INCREASED BUSI-NESS WOULD RESULT.

Contests Taft's Statement That Extinguishing the Trusts Would Kill Business.

OMAHA, Neb., June 3.—In Mr. Bryan's speech at Lexington he eulogized Senator La Follette for his fight on the emergency currency bill, saying:

"Senator La Follette is in sympathy with the masses and has made a fight against great odds. They put him out of the last Republican convention. I cannot predict what they will do to him in the next one.

"Taft says to extinguish trusts means to extinguish industry. Farmers and aborers, however, know better than that. Take, for instance, the harvester trust. It doesn't care whether the farmer buys or not. It is indifferent. It doesn't have a corner on everything the farmer buys, but it soon will have, if left alone. If you were to extinguish that concern, would it destroy every other concern that manufactures farm implements? Congress is vested with power over in-terstate commerce and could control hese trusts.

"If the business of the harvester trust was reduced 50 per cent, there would be competition which would result in cheaper implements for the farmer. Business would be increased by the sale of more implements and more men would be employed. Thus competition would help every element of society. When ou exterminate trusts, you revive business instead of destroying it."
He started from Kimball, Neb., at 1

He assailed the railroad for coercing employes into mak-ing petitions to legislative bodies oppos-ing proposed anti-railroad legislation. The largest meeting of the day, which really wound up his trip, was at Lex-ington, where business was suspended during his stay in the town. All the principal bulldings were decorated in honor of his visit and the schools were dismissed at noon. KEEPS HEAD WHEN CANOE CAP-SIZES_SWIMS TO SAFETY.

Miss Alma Hollingsworth Not Only Saves Herself by Presence of Mind, but Helps Her Escort.

Amid the excitement of the passing pageant on the river last night a canoe capsized at the draw of the Morrison capsized at the draw of the Morrisonstreet bridge and the spectators were treated to an exhibition of presence of mind, courage and strength on the part of a girl still in her teens which brought spontaneous cheers. The occupants of the canoe were Miss Alma Hollingsworth, of 463 Rodney avenue, daughter of Deputy Sheriff Hollingsworth, 19 years old, and her escort, Bert Cohn, of about the same age, of 309 Eleventh street. Miss Hollingsworth was sent to her home in a carriage with cheers ringing in her ears.

The accident occurred just after the water parade had passed through the draw of the bridge. Miss Hollingsworth and her escort had fireworks in their little cockle-shell of a craft and in some unaccountable way these exploded. A broad filmy silken sash about the girl's waist caught fire from the sizzling sparks and with a quick movement she rose from her seat to shake loose the burning brand from her clothing. Her sudden action caused the little boat to dlp, suck in a quantity of water and roll completely over, precipitating both young people into the river. Cohn tried to save himself by clinging to the upturned canoe, which at best was unsteady.

With rare presence of mind, Miss Hol-lingsworth saw that their best haven of safety lay at the abutment of the draw where they could secure a firm hold and where they could secure a first nod and be out of the way of other boats which might run them down. Calling to her companion to follow her, she boldly struck out for the draw head. Cohn followed. The crowd on the bridge had seen the accident and was holding its breath and expecting every moment to see the pair sink beneath the surface. When they saw and guessed the purpose When they saw and guessed the purpose of the girl as she bravely struck out, they voiced their approval in cheers. Instead of requiring assistance or losing her head. Miss Hollingsworth behaved like a little heroine. She swam the 150 feet to the objective point with confidence and a dash which eased the sense of fear that ran through the crowd.

She was the first to reach the draw head and getting a good hold with any
