caused a revision of sentiment in the minds of speculators who had assumed a period of exemption for corporations. This feeling was responsible in part for the sharp reaction in prices. There was perceptible also some revision of opinion of the effects to be looked for from the operation of the new currency law.

On the other hand, the financial district was somewhat concerned over the assumption that a form of taxed currency might be issued to meet the ordinary needs of expansion in the crop moving period and not reserved for such exigencies as those which developed last fall.

CLEVER ENTRIES IN BIG PORTLAND MEET.

Saturday's Performances on Poor Course Show High Class of Athletics on Pacific Coast.

General satisfaction is the result of the Pacific Northwest amateur athletic field and track meet held in Portland Saturday under the auspices of the Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club.

The mile run was the closest contest in the distance events, for Davost won out over Clark, of Seattle, by the smallest of margins.

The 100-yard dash was a source of great delight to the many ex-U.S. Olympians who were present at the meet.

Work on the foundations for the Burkhardt-Cadwell building on Second street, near Alder, is about finished and will be ready for the bricklayers this week.

Three lots in Irvington were reported sold last Friday by C. B. Fields & Company to buyers who are to build at once.

The Danneberg building on Fourth street, running from Everett to Flanders, is under roof and work is being rushed on the interior.

W. E. Grace, of Baker City, has purchased from Fletcher Linn the full lot and three-story brick building on First street, between Taylor and Salmon, for $45,000.

Tomorrow and Wednesday will positively be the last days for discount on West Side gas bills, Portland Gas Company.

David S. Stearns Returns From Trip Satisfied This City Is Best on the Coast.

David S. Stearns returned last week from a trip through Southern and Eastern States, having been absent several weeks. He was summoned to Washington as a witness in the Hyde-Benson land suits and embraced the opportunity to take his family on a jaunt through the South en route.

After passing through California, he visited points of interest in New Mexico and Arizona, going on to El Paso, Texas, and from there to New Orleans. In referring to his trip Saturday, Mr. Stearns said:

"When my trip to I was first impressed with how well Portland is known in the different parts of the country I visited. On the trains, when I would inform chance acquaintances that I lived in Portland, the inevitable response was, 'Well, sir, you are to be congratulated; I consider Portland the best city on the Pacific Coast.'"

"People everywhere appeared to be well-informed concerning our city and its advantages, and my boy one day came running to me with a pamphlet he picked up in the reading-room of a hotel, saying in great glee, 'Oh, see here; they have books telling all about Portland.' That indicates how well the city is being advertised. Down in the South, from New Orleans over to Atlanta, Ga., I found the people not so well-informed about Oregon, but from there on to Washington I was surprised at how well we are known."

"I find considerable improvement in the East in financial circles over the time of my last trip, about a year ago. At that time men of means talked and acted as though they felt impending troubles. Now the troubles have come and gone and financiers begin to talk hopefully of a complete restoration of confidence."

"I return home more firmly convinced than ever that Portland is in better shape in a business and financial way than the cities of the East, and offers more opportunities for the safe and profitable investment of capital. We are tarry in pushing forward our street improvements, but that will come in good time."

Some months ago he erected a four-story brick building on Fourth and Yamhill in evidence of his confidence in the early advancement of the city in that district.

Having more confidence in Governor Chamberlain than in the choice of the Republican party, Mr. C. B. Fields & Company decided that Oregon voters should elect the United States Senator. Nevertheless, he has had the disagreeable spectacle that some Legislatures, on account of political corruption or ring rule, have failed to exercise their high privilege—their duty to their state—or worse than this, have like a lawyer's pleading tried to defeat justice in defending a guilty criminal.

It is true that the Constitution of the United States commands the State Legislatures to elect the United States Senators. NEW YORK, June 7.—The early strength and the latter unsettlement in the market last week were attributed to the culmination of some of the influences related on to advance the price and the development of some doubtful factors in the situation. The conclusion of the session of Congress with the enactment of the emergency currency law created made the occasion for quite a demonstration in the stock market. Such a movement had become almost a fixed tradition in the stock market with the professional element since the era when control and regulation of corporation affairs has become a permanent subject of legislative attention.

The adjournment of Congress was regarded from the point of view of that element as a promise of surcease from threatened activities which are viewed with more or less nervous apprehension by security holders.

The reports later in the week of further prosecution in contemplation against the Standard Oil Company and of possible fines running to a maximum even greater than those in the former suits,
