LITTLE BOY KILLED BY RUNAWAY TEAM

Five-Year-Old Kenneth Palmer Trampled Under Hoofs of Maddened Horses.

DRIVER BUT LITTLE HURT

Olds, Wortman & King Team on Way to Barn Gets Beyond Control and at Grand Avenue and East Everett Runs Down Child.

Laughing, playing and cooling in the bright sunshine yesterday afternoon at 5:39 o'clock, little 5-year-old Kenneth Raines Palmer of 412 East Everett street, trundled his little "push wagon" down the sidewalk a few yards from the foor of his home, and there was stricken with instant death. He was knocked down and killed by a runaway team and delivery wagon be-longing to Olds, Wortman & King. The driver of the wagon, Richard Taylor, a young man 24 years of age, was thrown out and sustained but slight injuries to his arm and one leg, while Russell Tay-lor, the 15-year-old delivery boy who was in the wagon with him, escaped en-tirely without injury.

The little child who was killed was

The little child who was killed was the only son of Frank A. Palmer, who conducts a barber shop at 27½ North Second street and who has lived in the neighborhood where he now resides for the past ten years. Little Kenneth was always a dutiful child and when left alone by his mother for a short time yesterday afternoon while she went to do some necessary shopping for the household, he "minded" his mother's parting admonition not to go further away from home than the corner. Their house stands a few doors from the corner of Grand avenue North and East

Children Playing Happily.

There are two other children in the Palmer family. One is a girl ten years of age and the other is a little baby of seven months. The girl was allowed to play with others of her own age and to play with others of her own age and the baby the mother took with her. To the lot of Kenneth it remained to stay about the front door.

Other children played about on the streets and on the sidewalk and on their childish games the little fellow gazed with wistful eyes. But, obedient to his mother's words, his sturdy little figure never strayed beyond the appointed limit. As the others skipped and hopped As the others skipped and hopped in childish gles he smiled and clapped his hands and wished he were there, too. As the sun began to creep toward the horizon he was laughingly pushing him-self along the sidewalk on his little wagon when the end came.

Horses Come Suddenly.

Like a bolt of lightning out of a clear sky sounded the clatter and charge of the two thundering horses which madly out of their driver's control. Grand avenue they came. The lit-Down Grand avenue they came. The lit-tle curls on Kenneth's forehead bobbed as he shouted with gice. The driver tugged madly at the lines. The fleeleg horses swerved at the corner. Their stable is fwo blocks up this street and they evidently wanted to get there. Their furious pace was too swift to make the turn and without warning the horses and wagon crashed into the building on the corner. The wagon stopped, while the animals dashed full tilt up on the sideanimals dashed full tilt up on the side-laid low with a sickening thud and then without a quiver the sturdy little body lay still and stiff.

McKenzie Phillips, who works in the Oregon Creamery and who was passing at the time, tenderly picked up the little figure, and, not knowing that the little fellow's home was just a few doors away, carried him to the large boarding-house at the corner of East Davis street and Grand avenue, North. They laid him on a sofa and a physican who had sollowed in the crowd examined him and said that he had died instantly from either a frac-

Deputy Coroner Finley Called.

When Kenneth's 10-year-old sister came back from her play, his mother from her shopping and his father from his work, instead of the little curlyhead they loved so well they were met by Deputy Coroner A. L. Finley, to whose lot it fell to be the messenger of the sad tidings. He said afterward in all the varied experience which his po-sition as a public official had brought him there was not, within his memory case which pained him so much as did

Accompanying Phillips was Charles Thompson, also an employe of the Ore-Thompson, also an employe of the Ore-gon Creamery. Mrs. A. O. Horton, who lives next door to the Palmers, was within a few feet of the child when it was killed and narrowly escaped injury herself. She had just turned the corner of the street when the horses came upon them. She said last night that they turned so suddenly she was unaware of their presence until it was too late. It happened so suddenly that she did not have time to step back out of the way. Being so close to the scene of the accident, she saw how the little boy was killed. It was supposed that one of the horses trampled him, but Mrs. Hoton says that the horses swung clear of the child and that the rim or the hub of the wheel stuck him, felling him to the sidewalk, which he struck with his head with

Whole Neighborhood Grieved.

Grief at the shocking death which overtook the manly little fellow is not confined to his parents. The neighbors also feel his loss to a remarkable degree. In feel his loss to a remarkable degree. In more than one sympathetic eye big tears welled up as it learned that little Kenneth, who had been everybody's playfellow, had been killed. "He was the best child I ever saw," said one red-eyed mother, who lives nearby. "It did not make any difference what his mother told him to do, he did it." No arrangements have been made as yet for the funeral.

Fine Horses in Team.

The runaway team which caused the death, is as fine a pair as there is in the Olds, Wortman & Ring stable. It is a young, strong team of grays, In this stable they are known as Jack and Ned. In charge of the driver, Taylor, after the day's work, they were on their way to the stable, which is situated two blocks further east on East Everett street than the Palmer residence. When they came into sight of the stable Ned whinnled. Both horses gruck up a little faster gait. Jack, full of life and spirits, kicked up in a follows:

From all who saw the incident the opinion is given that the driver is in no way to blame and Deputy Coroner Finley said last night that although he would make a slight in-

Refusal by Mayor Lane and the mem-Refusal by Mayor Lane and the members of the Water Board to purchase fire hydrants has caused the ways and means committee of the City Council to take action. At its meeting yesterday afternoon the committee decided to hold a special session some time next week, when the matter of hydrants will be fully discussed and a way found to be fully discussed and a way found to buy the necessary hydrants. Some pruning of the yearly appropriations is predicted, and it is probable the fire department will be the first to feel the

At the first of the year the Council voted to appropriate $42,000 of funds from the water department for the pur-chase of fire hydrants, but Mayor Lane and the members of the Water Board have refused point blank to carry out the order. Three weeks ago he addressed a communication to the Council, calling upon the members for a readjustment of the 1998 appropriations, in which manner, he said, money could be se-cured from the general fund with which to purchase the hydrants. He asked that the $42,000, appropriated for hydrants out of the water fund, be turned back to be used for extension of turned back to be used for extension of

Mayor Lane's communication was referred to the ways and means commit-tee, of which Councilman Rushlight is chairman. Mr. Rushlight is known as a stanch supporter of the Mayor, and is identified with the minority faction of the Council, but he announced yesterday that he will not vote to turn the $42.000 back into the water fund. He said he will simply try to scale down the year's appropriations so that some funds can be had for the purchase of hydrants, but that he will not favor releasing the fund set aside by the Council for that purpose, and which the Water Board has so doggedly refused to do. In other words, he said, he wishes life and property protected, but he will not please the Board enough to turn back its funds for water main

Meeting With Criticisms.

SEATTLE, Wash, June 8.—(Special.)

— Bev. W. A. Major, pastor of Bethany

He asserted that they would fight desperately to maintain the fundamental creed of the church and everything written in the Westminster confession ately of faith, but would not take the tronble to save a soul from perdition which, he declared, was far more important than dry-as-dust theology. WANTS TO ADJUST DIFFER ENCES WITH LIGHTING CO.

Bills for Hluminating City in April and May Pruned and Held Up by the Executive Board.

Mayor Lane suggests arbitration as a means of arriving at an adjustment of the differences between the City Executive Board and the Portland Railway and April bills for electric lighting. two bills have been pruned about one-third their original amount, the lighting committee of the Board, after an investigation, reporting that the corporation is not furnishing the candle power called for in its contract with the municipality. President Josselyn, of the power com-pany, has intimated that he will carry the matter into the courts for a decision, but Mayor Lane desires to have the matter arbitrated. All the facts could be produced in that manner, he states, and he hopes the company officials will see their way to enter into such a plan of adjustment.

The Executive Board has as yet done nothing, so far as has been made public, with regard to awarding a contract for lighting the streets, public parks and docks in Portland for the term beginning docks in Portland for the term beginning January 1, 1893. The City Council, two months ago, passed an ordinance authorizing the Board to let a contract not to exceed five years. Mayor Lane, however, started a campaign for municipal ownership of lighting, and conducted it with such vigor that he forced the Council committee on street lighting to make an investigation. After going into the details, the committee found no way out of awarding at least one more contract to of awarding at least one more contract to the local power company. Officials of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company wished the contract awarded quickly, in order that, if they secured the work, they might install the necessary machinery to handle it with. It seems, however, from the inaction of the Executive Board, that the Mayor intends to hold up the award just as long as he can. What he will do next in his fight for municipal ownership remains to be seen. In the meantime, the term will soon expire, and, unless In the meantime, the present thing is done, no one will have a contract for furnishing lights.

STATUS OF LAW TO KEEP THE WOMEN OUT OF SALOONS.

was not brought up for consideration, but was left "in the box."

The proposed ordinance, however, is not dead; it is merely sleeping, it is said, and may some time be brought out and disposed of. It is said to have been the product of enthusiasm, as it appears to have been inspired by a spasm of virtue which swept over the Council at the time the members ordered the police to report on all disorderly saloons in Fortiand. It was gravely announced by the liquor-license committee that all "bad" saloons would be closed. The police furnished a long list, out of which the committee actually closed one. It was when this fit actually closed one. It was when this fit of righteousness was on that the measure was introduced.

When the alleged disorderly salconkeepers were heard before the liquorlicense committee, it was agreed by members of the committee that the presence of women in saloons caused nearly all of the trouble. The Councilmen were out-spoken at the time on this subject, and loudly proclaimed that some law must be put on the books whereby the police could keep women out of saloons. It could keep women out of sations. It looked at first as though the ordinance would surely pass, but when it was referred to the committee on judiciary, it never got back, and is still there. Councilman Vaughn. Democratic leader of the Council minority faction, is responsible for holding up the measure, insofar as the committee is concerned, as he said he wished to investigate before voting. Councilmen Benuett and Cellars, the other members, declared themselves willing to vote passage of the measure.
