

BURIAL SERVICE BRIEF AND SIMPLE

Distinguished Citizens Attend Funeral of Ex-President Grover Cleveland.

NO SERMON OR EULOGY

Dr. Henry Van Dyke Reads Instead Poem by Wordsworth—President Roosevelt and Four Governors Are Present.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 26.—Grover Cleveland's body was buried this evening in the Cleveland plot in Princeton Cemetery. At 6 o'clock, just as the sun was sinking in the west, a distinguished company silently watched as the body was lowered into the grave. Then the simple burial service of the Presbyterian Church was read and before the last carriage in the cortege had driven up to the path leading to the burial place, the benediction had been pronounced and the members of the family, President Roosevelt and others who had gathered about the grave, were leaving the cemetery.

Services Are Very Simple.

An invocation, Scriptural reading, a brief prayer and the reading of William Wordsworth's poem, "Character of the Happy Warrior," constituted the services at the house, while the reading of the burial service at the grave was a brief and impressive ceremony.

Although the funeral was of a strictly private nature, those in attendance numbered many distinguished citizens, including President Roosevelt, Governors Fort of New Jersey, Hughes, of New York, Hoke Smith, of Georgia, former members of ex-President Cleveland's Cabinet, officials of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, members of the Princeton University faculty and friends and neighbors.

Without Military Element.

Mr. Cleveland was buried with all the simplicity and privacy that he himself might have wished, as a private citizen rather than as the former chief Executive of the Nation. There was nothing official in the ceremony, and the military element was injected solely as a measure of protection for the passages from the residence to the cemetery.

The President arrived at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon and was met at the station by Governor Fort. The President, Governor Fort and Secretary Lobb were driven at once to Westland. Upon his arrival at the house the President went to Mrs. Cleveland, offering his sympathy and expressing keen regret at Mr. Cleveland's death.

Four Clergymen Officiate.

The President then returned to the reception-room, where the body had been removed in the afternoon from the room on the second floor, in which Mr. Cleveland died. A few minutes later the four clergymen who officiated came down the stairs to the hall leading to the reception-room, followed by Mrs. Cleveland and the children, Esther and Richard. As they appeared on the landing, accompanied by Dr. Joseph D. Bryant, the whole company rose and remained standing throughout the services.

Mrs. Cleveland was gowned in black, and wore a bonnet with a short drooping veil. Esther was also in black and Richard wore a white suit and black tie.

Old Friend Reads Scripture.

The services began with an invocation by Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, of the First Presbyterian Church of Princeton, which was followed by scriptural reading by Rev. Maitland V. Bartlett, of the West Farms Presbyterian Church of New York, a former pastor of Mr. Cleveland, who read from the 14th chapter of the Book of John, a number of passages from the Thessalonians, and from Revelation. "And they shall see his face," read Dr. Bartlett in closing, "and his name shall be in their foreheads; they shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light upon them, nor any heat; for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters and God shall wipe all tears from their eyes."

Dr. Van Dyke Reads Poem.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke then said that "according to the request of one whose slightest wish at this moment we all respect, there will be no address or sermon, but there was a poem written more than a hundred years ago by William Wordsworth which is expressive of his character." He then read the poem, "Character of the Happy Warrior."

"This was followed by a reading from the Presbyterian Book of Common Worship, the services at the house concluding with a prayer.

The services were concluded at 5:30 and five minutes later the casket had been tenderly carried to the hearse and the procession started on its way to the cemetery. Along the streets from the house to the cemetery National Guardsmen, mounted and on foot, policed the way. As President Roosevelt passed through the gate leading from the Westland grounds the militiamen presented arms and the President doffed his hat in recognition.

The pallbearers, six on either side of the hearse, marched with the procession as it wended its way slowly down Bayard Lane to Nassau street and on along the main thoroughfare of the town. The hearse had been suspended during the afternoon and curtains were drawn in many of the houses. The silent crowds stood with bare heads as the procession passed along into Vandeventer avenue, and the bell in the tower of Old Nassau Hall tolled mournfully.

Roses Strew Grave.

The route led over Wiggins street to the cemetery, which was reached a few minutes before 6 o'clock. The members of the family alighted from their carriages and, with the four clergymen in the lead, walked slowly down the gravelled path leading to the open grave and the rose-strewn grave of Ruth, both almost hidden in the profusion of green hedges and flowers.

Mrs. Cleveland stood with Esther and Richard and Dr. Bryant as the coffin was slowly lowered into the grave. Dr. William M. Richards, of the Brick Presbyterian Church, of New York, had started to read the committal services even before President Roosevelt and others had reached the scene. The President stood just back of Mrs. Cleveland as the impressive final words were spoken. The services lasted less than five minutes.

Several photographers in their eagerness to photograph Governor Hughes and other distinguished guests upon their arrival, refused to comply with the orders of the guardsmen to fall back into the lines. Shortly before his departure Governor Hughes good naturedly posed for a score of camera men who leveled their lenses at him.
