PROTESTS STAR SESSIONS

MALARKEY AGAINST "FORTHWITH" SUBPENAS.

Says Government Has No Right to Examine Land-Fraud Witnesses Privately.

Attorney Dan J. Malarkey went before United States Judge Wolverton Monday and protested against the practice of the Government in serving "forthwith" subpoenas on witnesses and requiring them to report on such subpoenas and testify privately in the District Attorney's office several days in advance of the trial of the case in which the subpoenas are issued. He said that several persons had already been brought to Portland under such subpoenas issued in the Booth conspiracy trial, which is not to be called for trial until Thursday, and that such persons were brought here only to be questioned by representatives of the Government and then placed under the surveillance of Secret Service men.

Mr. Malarkey questioned the right of the Government to exercise the subpoena power so freely. He charged that under the subpoena, both those for the prosecution and those for the defense, were compelled to report immediately in Portland, where they were met by Deputy Marshals and escorted, not to the courtroom, but to the offices of the Government prosecutor, and there questioned at length by the agents of the prosecution. Mr. Malarkey demanded of District Attorney McCourt the privilege of being present when the latter was examining the different witnesses prior to their testifying in court. Mr. McCourt would not consent to all witnesses in advance of the trial and that neither the prosecution nor the defense should put any obstacles in the way of the other side making proper preparation for the trial of the case. Judge Wolverton held, however, that under these subpoenas witnesses were not required to appear and be examined in the District Attorney's office unless they were willing to do so and could not be compelled to testify elsewhere than in open court upon the trial of the case.

"What I object to," said Mr. Malarkey, "is that the Government under these subpoenas undertakes to force any person it serves one to come before its representatives and submit to private examination and cross-examination at great length. After being served with such an order, the average witness thinks he is obliged to respond.

"The representatives of the Government learn who the defendant's witnesses are and bring them to the District Attorney's office and interrogate them and learn all about the defendant's case. I was in Roseburg last week looking up evidence for and interviewing prospective witnesses for the defense in this Booth case, and it seemed that as soon as I had finished talking to a man he was met by a Deputy United States Marshal, two of whom were there during all the time I was, and served with a subpoena requiring him to report in Portland immediately. Persons served on Saturday were not even allowed to defer their departure until Sunday night, but were compelled to leave Roseburg on the first train and put in Sunday in Portland, though they were not to be taken before the prosecuting officers for examination until Monday."

Several of the witnesses for the prosecution in the Booth case, which will be called for trial Thursday, arrived in the city yesterday. During the day they were questioned in the hallway and rooms adjoining the United States Attorney's office on the third floor of the Federal building when they were not being questioned by District Attorney McCourt and F. B. Neuhausen, who is in charge of the evidence that is offered by the Government in the so-called land-fraud cases. The Government will have over 20 witnesses in the Booth trial, which may last two weeks, depending largely on the volume of documentary evidence on which the prosecution is relying.

Replying to the objection of Mr. Malarkey, Mr. Neuhausen said last night that the Government is only pursuing the same course in the Booth case that has been followed in all previous land-fraud cases. He explained that where between 20 and 30 witnesses are to testify in a case, it expedites the introduction of testimony when the case is called by having a preliminary examination of the witnesses when it can be learned what they will testify. He denied emphatically that any attempt was being made on the part of the Government to intimidate or to influence in the slightest degree any of the witnesses. It is the purpose of the Government, he declared, to give all of the accused land-fraud defendants a fair and impartial hearing, based on the facts in their respective cases.

MRS. GOULD IN ACCIDENT

Racing Automobile Crashes Into Her Motor-Car.

NEW YORK, July 14.—While returning from the railway station to her Summer home in the Tyler cottage at Greenwich, Conn., last night, Mrs. Frank Gould narrowly escaped serious injury when her automobile collided with a racing machine speeding around a curve into the main thoroughfare. Her chauffeur locked the car wheels and the oncoming car impaled itself on the forward part of the Gould machine. Both cars were badly wrecked. Mrs. Gould was tumbled from her seat but remained in the car and beyond suffering slightly from the shock was not injured.

CASE THOUGHT TO BE WEAK

HORTON MAY NOT BE CONNECTED WITH ROBBERIES.

Night Clerk of Merchants Hotel Is Given Good Character—Witnesses Are Held on Bonds.

The latest developments in the case of the robberies in the Merchants Hotel show that there is not quite so strong a case against W. S. Horton, the night clerk, as was at first supposed. Horton was admitted to bail Monday by Judge Van Zante in the sum of $500. E. M. Baker, a wealthy owner of the Opera House in Astoria, and Fred Fritz, a liquor dealer in this city, were the sureties on his bond.

Patrick Joyce, the witness on whom the prosecution is mainly relying to establish the identity of the person or persons who entered his room, was held in $100 bond in the Municipal Court yesterday morning for his appearance in the trial. While Horton is charged with complicity in the robbery of Joyce, the testimony against him is considered to be very weak and it is doubted if his connection with the robbery will be definitely established. Lloyd C. Ross, the bellboy, who confessed to being "in on" the deed, whose statements were corroborated by his wife, pointed to Horton, Will Coffey, the dishwasher, and the man Turner, as being all equally guilty. The reason the story against Horton is weak is believed to be because it was claimed he received but $20 as his share of the booty in the Joyce robbery. From the evidence the police have been able to gather it is thought that Coffey and Turner will be the ringleaders of the robbery in the hotel were in no manner connected with these affairs but they are criticised for their apathy in not investigating the many rumors of thefts committed in their house. No effort has yet been made to cancel their license. Turner and Coffey were removed to the County Jail yesterday afternoon while Ross and his wife,
