TALKS TO BUSINESS MEN

OFFICIAL OF DES MOINES BEFORE COMMERCIAL CLUB.

John MacVicar Tells of System of Municipal Government in Effect at His Home.

John MacVicar, Superintendent of Streets and Public Improvements of Des Moines, Ia., delivered a short address yesterday at noon at the Portland Commercial Club, on methods employed by the City of Des Moines in the administration of municipal affairs. Mr. MacVicar is thoroughly qualified to speak on such subjects, having been formerly Mayor of Des Moines and also secretary of the League of American Municipalities. The speaker characterized the three elements necessary to success in municipal management as exceptional leadership, a public opinion back of that leadership and expert service. The importance of the latter was especially emphasized. Mr. MacVicar declaring that only experts should be employed in the city departments. The business man in the city administration he believed to be a

INTEREST IN HORSE SHOW

HEAVY MAIL RECEIVED AT LOCAL HEADQUARTERS.

People Make Inquiry as to Identity of Judge—Entries to Eclipse Last Year's.

As much interest centers around the Judge of a horse show as in the entries themselves, and the identity of the man who will officiate at Portland's second annual show is much sought after by devotees to the sport. Society is also eagerly seeking information on this point as many members of Portland's smart set are preparing to show new turnouts and pairs. The recent announcement that the cup collection is extraordinarily handsome is enhancing the prospective exhibitors, and the determination to keep the majority of these handsome trophies at home is growing. The Hunt Club headquarters in the Lumber Exchange building is now the scene of marked activity. A corps of stenographers has been engaged and the big mail is being promptly handled.

TO THE PUBLIC:

A few days ago in the Beef Trust's ad you will notice they say their meats are 100 per cent pure. The paraphrase, 100 per cent pure, was coined in a Smith ad, and the Beef Trust, with its well-known tactics, has stolen it. But the comic part of the story is for the Beef Trust to claim its meats are pure. Of course, it all depends on one's idea of pureness. Most people will be surprised to know that right under the eyes of the United States Government Meat Inspectors, and with the full permission of the Bureau of Animal Industry, the big firms are adulterating much of their lard with tallow. They don't label the buckets pure lard. They call it "Lard," "Standard Quality Lard," "Pure Mixed Lard," or some other misnomer. There is not a lot of tallow in Smith's pure lard, the only kind he makes. The packers who are making such a sing-song of Government Inspection are using potato flour, wheat flour and other cereals in their sausages. Smith has never found it necessary to use flour, bran or any other adulteration in sausages. Smith's sausages are absolutely pure. Within the past few months tons upon tons of dressed meats have been brought to Portland from other states. It was all Government inspected every ounce of it. This meat, after its lengthy trip to ice-cars and its following stay in cold storage, and from there in sometimes uncovered wagons through our dusty streets to the retail butcher shop—this meat may be awful pure, but who would eat it when you can get Smith's fresh Oregon meats? We have no quarrel with United States Government inspectors, but we are fighting forever and a day the ranting, hypocritical Beef Trust.
