Broker Charges Accuser With Try-Get Preference Over Other Creditors and Denies Embezzlement of Stock.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 7.—Mrs.

Elizabeth M. Stewart, the noted temperance advocate, known all over the country as "Mother" Stewart, died at her home in Hicksville last night, aged 22 years. Mrs. Stewart established the first W. C. T. U. in Ohio in 1873, and in 1878 she organized the W. C. T. U. in England.

SAN FRANCISCO. Aug. 7.—Frederick Dorr, the stockbroker with offices in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Denver and other cities, who was arrested at Los Angeles yesterday upon a charge of embezzlement preferred by Capitaln H. H. Norwood, a client in this city, arrived here early this morning in custody of Detective Grant Roberds, of the Los Angeles Police Department. Dorr custody of Detective Grant Roberts, of the Los Angeles Police Department. Dorr persuaded the officer to permit him to leave the train at San Jose and the two came to San Francisco from there in an automobile, which enabled the stockbroker to arrange for ball before he came to police headquarters and was booked at

He was released upon $10,000 bond given y Harry N. Gray and W. F. Porter he latter did not arrive at police headquarters for some time, which forced Dorr to spend an hour behind the bars in the city prison. When Mr. Porter, in the city prison. who is connected with the Associated Oil Company, finally made his appearance and signed the bond, Dorr's attorneys and local manager hurried to the Hotel Imperial, where Police Judge Cabiness ordered the stockbroker's release.

Dorr Explains Charge.

In an interview in the city prison with a representative of the Associated Press Dorr declared that the case was properly civil and not a criminal matter, said:

"It is a vicious attack by a man who wishes preference over all other creditors. My liabilities are perhaps betwen $100,000 and $125,000. I have not yet had an op-portunity to go over the books. My seats upon the exchanges in New York and Chicago are alone worth $90,000. I promised to settle with my creditors upon an equal basis for all and favor none. This man Norwood wants his money re-gardless of what the others get.

There has been no embezzlement or hypothecation of stock. His stock was sold for his credit and transferred in the customary manner. I am satisfied that, when I get an opportunity to go over the books and find just how matters are, everything will be straightened out."

Quarrel Between Detectives.

When Dorr failed to arrive on the Los Angeles train at 11:45 o'clock and it was rumored that he got off at San Jose and was coming the rest of the way in an automobile, Captain of Detectives Kelly sharply criticised the Los Angeles police for not holding Dorr there until the arrival of an officer from this city, characterizing the action of the Southern "decidedly irregular." Kelly sent men to the county line with instructions to arrest Dorr immediately, if he appeared, regardless of the Los

OUTPUT ON GRAYS HARBOR IS GREATLY REDUCED.

Millmen Predict Activity in Lumber Trade and Early Advance in Prices.

ABERDEEN, Wash, Aug. 7.—(Special.)—A. L. Davenport, who is interested in the Paine-Davenport Logging predicts an advance in the price of logs. "Logs are scarce," he said this morn ing. "A good many of the camps have closed, others are running on short hours and with smaller crews; so the output has been reduced and there is already a scarcity. This will naturally increase the price and the increase will start up camps and make business

The price of logs is now $8 and $9 and lumber is beinb sold at a rather low rate. Mr. Davenport admits that if there are plenty of logs on Puget Sound the price of lumber cannot well be advanced here, but he thinks that lumber tocks have been greatly depleted and that logs on Puget Sound no more plentiful than on Grays

Even with an advance in the price of logs, Mr. Davenport believes that there will be a large demand for lum-ber this Fall, and with stocks short, the price mus tof necessity advance, so that altogether he figures that condi-tions are going to be brighter within the next 60 days.

LIVING EMBODIMENT OF DIC-TIONARY DEFINITION.

Other National Chairmen Occasionally Made Noises Like Words, but Hitchcock Never.

Brooklyn Eagle. WASHINGTON, July 30.—Hanna was conundrum, Quay an enigma, Gorman a sphinx, but Hitchcock-Frank H Hitchcock, chairman of the Republican National Committee—is a fair-haired broad-shouldered, six-foot-three animated tower of silence that makes the others, by comparison, seem like a lot of garrulous old men.

The silence of Hitchcock is deeper than the sea, it cunnot be sounded. Hanna, Quay or Gorman occasionally at long intervals, perhaps, but yet occasionally-made noises resembling word or two; not so the young man whom Taft has chosen as the master, in large part, of his destinies, The dictionary thus defines "silence":

"The condition prevailing when there is no noise; absence of sound; stillnes of forbearance of speech; a holding one's peace; taciturnity; a refraining from making known something; se creey; absence of mention; oblivion."

It was when the dictionary-maker penned the last-mentioned definition that he apparently had Hitchcock it mind. He may be all the other things enumerated above—that is, his slience may—but the one word "oblivion" is comprehensively accurate in his case.

You ask a question, it may be about the weather—"Do you think we'll have a shower this evening?" Hitchcock thinks deeply before he permits even his facial expression to indicate what may be his opinion on that particular subject. Is there a bidden meaning in the query, a trap? Having convinced himself that there is not, he is ready to give you his answer.—not an answer, but his answer. A smile, or rather the shadow of a smile, becomes dimly perceptible at the corners of his mouth, and spreads haltingly like a vessel dragging its anchor, half-way to his There it stops. It goes no far ther, nor does it die out or melt away, but "stays put" in all of its tantalizing persistency until the questioner, baffied and embarrassed, slinks out of the office through the nearest avenue of escape. If anyone ever won a more direct or satisfactory response to an appeal for information or an opinion should count himself favored of the gods.

No one takes offense at Hitchcock—that is, no one of the persons whose daily duty it is to "go up against" him. They recognize his right, or any man's right, to answer questions in his own way. In addition, Hitchcock is always polite, if coldly so. What they are wondering, though, is whether a National chairman can go through a cam-paign the tower of silence he is and keep everybody in good humor. Making everybody feel well-disposed toward each other is really a very important part of the chairman's work, and not. Women give us a great deal of tant part of the chairman's work, and trouble with their dolmans and furs. Hanna, Quay and Gorman, uncommunicative as they generally were, had the knack of doing this. Perhaps Hitchcock riage and tried to put up a set of sables on a loan of $10. I was 'wise' to her game. If she took the furs to any of the big shops, they would value headquarters,
