Probably the Most Interesting Pages of This Morning's Oregonian Are the Classified Pages

You will find there many little stories of human interest. Some one of your friends may want a servant. One of your husband's best friends may be advertising for a new boarding-house. Your neighbor may have lost her watch or her pet cat. The man who formerly lived across the street advises through the "Notice" column, not to trust his wife, as he will not be responsible for her debts. Your milkman may want to. sell one of his cows, or that pretty bungalow down the street you admired so much is now advertised for sale, and so on through the hundred and one needs and desires of the human family.

A few lines of type will bring changes, untangle tangles and solve riddles in the daily life.

You really have no idea how interesting (and profitable, too) the classified pages are until you have read them a few times.
