Conservation Commission Will Get Great Attention This Session.

SENATE BLOCKS REFORMS

Radical Legislation Requires Time for Consideration—President's Commission Starts Work violent, and still others impractical, is generally admitted. But all this was brought out by a previous commission appointed by the President—the Public Lands Commission, now defunct. That commission devoted two years to a study of the public land system, and made a most exhaustive report, in which it recommended radical changes in the public land laws. That report was sent to Congress, strongly indorsed by the President. But it failed to influence legislation. None of the important recommendations of the commission were carried out. The question naturally arises, Will the recommendations of the National Conservation Commission have greater weight with Congress?

So far as the public land question is concerned the situation is just this: The Senate committee on public lands is about evenly divided on questions of reform, but since Senator Hansbrough has been the chief obstacle in favor of reform, the chances for favorable reports have improved, for he has been succeeded by Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, a believer in certain land law reforms and a man who fights for what he wants. The danger lies in the open Senate, where there are a number of Senators determined to resist the recommendations of the commission. A short session is probably the best chance for the commission to get its work done. Half a dozen such Senators could defeat legislation in the short session.

Way Blocked in House.

In the House land reform could be passed if it could get through the public lands committee. But that committee is led by its chairman, Mr. Mondell, of Wyoming, is dead set against the more important changes urged by the President and likely to be recommended by the commission, and unless White House pressure is brought to bear that committee could and would probably prevent reform legislation going before the House next winter. For several years the President has urged recommended modification of the land laws, and the House committee on public lands has been the chief obstacle in his path. Up to the present time the President's recommendations have been ignored. As Mr. Roosevelt is about to retire from office, he will have less influence with Congress next session than he has had in the past. Unless the President should go to the extent of summoning absent Senators and Representatives to the White House, showing them the "big stick" and talking to them "like a Dutch uncle," it is extremely doubtful if there will be any action on the report of the commission next session—the public lands feature at least. The probabilities are that the findings of this commission will be very similar to the findings of the old Public Lands Commission, for the same ground is being covered, and much the same data being used.

Forests and Minerals.

As far as the forestry question is concerned, radical changes in policy are not likely to be recommended. In the main the policy as now in force meets the approval of those designated to pass upon this subject, and any forestry legislation that may be recommended will probably be of unimportant character.

On the other hand the question of control and disposal of mineral lands will be important, and what has been said of the land question generally will apply to mineral lands as well. If any important mineral legislation is enacted next session as a result of the commission's report, it will probably be the final passage of the bill passed by the House last session, creating a Bureau of Mines.

The question of control and use of the public range comes under the general head of land, and there is no likelihood of the enactment of a National leasing law or the revival of the 640-acre dry homestead proposition.

The time will come when Congress will pass a National drainage act, which will enable the General Government to reclaim swamp land on the same basis as it is now reclaiming arid land, though by different methods. A National drainage law will probably be recommended, but cannot be passed next session, even though the Commission favors it.

Water Power Monopoly.

It is the belief of the administration that something should be done by the National Government to prevent a monopoly of water powers throughout the country. Corporations have already gained control of many of these valuable concessions, but such as remain on the public domain have been held back through the application of the forest reservation law. Just how to control these water powers in the interest of the general public is one of the vital questions put up to the Commission. But whatever recommendation is made will be opposed in Congress, and the subject will probably

CREMATED IN HIS HOTEL

Prominent Business Man Burned to Death at Tesla, Cal.

TESLA, Cal., Aug. 25.—A fire which broke out in the Tesla Hotel late last night caused the death of one man and the destruction of much property before it was extinguished. Ernest Carl, of San Francisco, manager of the Tesla Coal Company's store, was asleep in the hotel at the time, and was burned to death before help reached him.

The hotel and several adjoining buildings, including the coal company's store, a saloon and a few small residences, were burned. The loss will not exceed $7500.

Very Attractive Linen.

A new and very attractive linen is used by art embroiderers. It is in basket weave, which presents the effect of big squares of loose thread. This material, when made up into cushions, is embroidered practically solid with French embroidery ribbon, and the result is more beautiful than words can express. Half the cushion, for instance, from corner to corner, is worked in solid pink, while on this daisies are arranged with artistic care.

On the other hand the background of the pillow is made in white, while pink primrose form the most attractive decoration.

There is no finish around the edge of these pillows save the seam, for the embroidery is so beautiful that it requires no further decoration. Formerly, when using embroidery ribbon, it was necessary to select some loosely-woven material which was very often ugly. Crin, for instance, was the easiest to use for the purpose, or linen canvas. Now, however, with this new linen for sale, there is no further need to use unattractive or rough materials.

is his duty as Governor to give the Republicans of Iowa a chance to make another choice of a candidate for United States Senator. No choice of the Republicans of Iowa has been more uniformly assented to than that made at the primary June 2. I believe amendments to the primary law which the special session of the Legislature undoubtedly will make will make possible the same universal assent as accompanied the nomination of the late Senator Allison.

Tub Baths for Hysteria.

Indianapolis News.

New York State will in October open a hospital at Poughkeepsie which will represent the latest departure in the treatment of mental "faults." Continuous bathing will be the remedy to be adopted for the reduction of hysteria. The bath tubs will be supplied with electrical apparatus, which will keep the water in the tub at the exact temperature desired. Within the tub will be a canvas hammock with a head-rest. The patient will lie down in the hammock and the water will be turned on. There they will lie and sleep and receive their meals for as many hours as the doctor in charge may prescribe.

IDENTIFIES STOLEN BILL

Marked in Fitzgerald's Handwriting, Says Government Expert.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Captain Thomas I. Porter, of the Government Secret Service, last night revealed that he had identified as the handwriting of George W. Fitzgerald the notation "173 M." on a $10,000 bank note that was sent to the Treasury by the Commercial National Bank. All trace of the note is lost, but the officials are certain it was the top bill of a package of $173,000, for the alleged theft of which Fitzgerald was arrested, and that it establishes that the stolen money is being circulated in Chicago.

Fitzgerald admits he may have written the notation, but says it was a common practice to do so on the top bill of large bundles of money, and it explains nothing as to who is circulating the stolen money.

DELIBERATELY RISKS LIFE

T. Burns, Alias J. Wilson, Breaks Away From Policeman in Attempt to Force Officer to Kill Him.

STOCKTON, Aug. 25.—T. Burns, alias J. Wilson, who has been causing the postal authorities and the police of several cities on the Pacific Coast no end of trouble recently, was captured here today after passing one of the postoffice orders that are alleged to have been stolen from station 15, at Seattle, some time ago.

This afternoon Burns entered the sales department of the Shaw Implement Company and presented an order for $44, making a purchase and receiving his change. The cashier became suspicious, notified the police department and the culprit was shortly located and landed behind the bars after a sensational but unsuccessfull break for liberty.

Burns made the statement after being taken that he did not make the attempt to get away with the hope of success, but was praying that the officer would kill him. Burns is said to be from San Francisco, is 39 years of age and was formerly a railroad brakeman.

In a short session little time is available, except for the consideration of appropriation bills, which must be passed. To give proper attention to the subjects covered by the report of the National Conservation Commission, Congress would have to remain in session at least until July 1, but the law decrees that the next session shall adjourn on March 4. Therefore the enactment of comprehensive laws for the conservation of all natural resources will have to be postponed until the next Congress.
