Portland's Biggest and Best Style Store

Invites the more discerning shoppers to inspect the enormous showing of Women's Fall Suits. Only the most authentic styles are here; the kind purchased by smart dressers; and four times as many good suits as any other local store can show you. Prices are surprisingly moderate. The richness and style worthiness of the suits we sell entitle us to a much larger price than we ask; but the immense garment business done here enables us to sell at a smaller profit than ordinary suit departments find practical. Of course, you know that this is the only store in the Northwest doing a large enough garment business to send an exclusive buyer to the European style centers every year. Women who seek distinctive and different styles fairly revel in the beauty and originality of the models we show. Priced up from $15.00 to $350.00

DAVIS FULLY IDENTIFIED

LORD RECOGNIZES HIM AS SEEN NEAR RUSTIN HOME.

Strong Link in Chain of Evidence. Davis' Room-mate Offers Evidence of Alibi.

OMAHA, Sept. 11.—That looks like the man I saw coming from the Rustin home the night of the murder," said Dr. J. P. Lord to the police, when Charles F. Davis, under arrest charged with the murder of Dr. Frederick T. Rustin, was brought before the court this morning for arraignment. This was the first time Dr. Lord had been confronted with Davis, and his identification of him as the man he saw staggering down Farum street, coming in the direction of the Rustin home, and only four blocks from that point, within a quarter of an hour of the time the shot was fired, is one of the strongest links connecting Davis with the murder.

This morning Davis went to the police station, accompanied by his millionaire brother, to plead to the charge of being a suspicious character, which was filed against him some days ago. As soon as he entered the building he was reassured on a charge of murder in the first degree,

IDAHO YIELDS RICH ORES

J. FRANK WATSON DESCRIBES MINING TOUR.

Portland Men Interested in Many Properties From Which Excellent Results Are Obtained.

Loud in his praise of the wealth and future possibilities of the Oro Fino mining region in Idaho, J. Frank Watson, president of the Merchants National Bank, returned to Portland yesterday after spending a week among the many rich properties of this district. He has come home thoroughly convinced that the gold output from the Idaho mines that he visited is to be enormous, and that it will be especially beneficial to Lewiston, to which city the district is tributary.

Mr. Watson was accompanied by his 15-year-old son and E. M. Corbus, of Spokane, and made the trip for the two-fold purpose of inspecting the mining properties and enjoying an outing. In both he was successful and declares that he has never done a rougher bit of mountaineering in his life than the trip from Sitka, the railway terminus to the Oregon Plain, on which is located the Oregon mine of which Mr. Corbus is the largest individual owner, and in which several Portland citizens are interested.

From Sitka, Mr. Watson and his companions drove 60 miles over a rough mountain road and then traveled 15 miles on horseback over trails that a wagon cannot take. The trail in many places wound up such steep inclines that it was with difficulty the riders clung to their horses, and they were thankful when their destination was reached.

"But what we learned of the Idaho gold mines was well worth the trip," said Mr. Watson yesterday. "The Oregon mine and the Oro Grande, which is only four miles distant, are among the best properties I have ever seen and there are many other fine mines in the same district, which covers a large area. After the wild country traversed, the Oregon plain seemed as level as a floor. It is 600 feet in elevation and a richer mineral region it would be hard to imagine.

"The Oregon mine, in which several Portlanders are interested, was a revelation to me. I have visited many gold districts, but have never before seen anything to equal it. There are several ledges, one of them 70 feet wide, and a large amount of the ore is of exceedingly high grade. One vein has averaged $9 to the ton and in certain places the assays have run even into the thousands.

"They have been working on the Oregon mine for five years and are only now in a position to go ahead and install a mill to handle the ore. The reason for this is that the mine has been exceedingly hard to work. The veins do not crop up and it has been difficult to follow them. Now, however, the property is ready to develop. A tunnel has been driven for 1000 feet at a depth of 290 feet. A mill will be put in next year and there is ore in sight for 100 stamps.

"This great district is just coming into its own, although it has been worked for many years by placer mining. The reason that claims have not been worked before by mills is the extreme inaccessibility of the region. Freight must be carried in from Sitka on pack horses at a cost of about four cents a pound. The Buster Smith mine, near Elk City, 15 miles from the Oregon, is reported to be taking out $30,000 a month, and all the properties that are being worked are paying well. I also visited the Oro Grande mine, where 150 tons of ore are being taken out each day, averaging about $5 a ton."

Mr. Watson is of the opinion that the development of this great mining region will result in the rapid growth of Lewiston. This city, he reports, is now gaining quickly in business and is receiving the grain crop of the surrounding agricultural district.

Studies Whales of Pacific.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Roy C. Andrews, of the department of mammals and birds, of the American Museum of Natural History, has returned from a five months' trip to Vascoover Island, where he remained until July, and then went to Tyee, Alaska, on the south end of Admiralty Island. His work was getting measurements, notes and photographs of the Pacific whales, to discover whether they are the same as in the Atlantic. He saw more than 200 whales of different species killed with a harpoon gun.
