HEARST AIDS TAFT

Attacks on Bryan Cost Latter Votes in New York.

AFFECT LABOR ELEMENT

Divert Strength From Democratic Ticket to One Which Cannot Win.

Minnesota Safe for Republican Candidate.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Sept. 16.—William R. Hearst may have a great deal to do with holding New York in the Republican column this Fall, not that Hearst is working for the Republican ticket, but because he is using his money and his influence with the labor vote in New York state is admittedly great.

In his attack upon Bryan, Hearst has not minced words; he has called a spade a spade, and he has brought forward formidable looking indorsement of what he has said. But even at that, Hearst's attacks would amount to little, but for the fact that he has a habit of iterating and reiterating, almost daily, through his newspapers, the various charges he is using with such effect against the Democratic nominee, and by driving home his accusations, and keeping them constantly before the eyes of the readers of his papers, he is making headway.

Hearst, by all manner of catering to the labor element, has gained the confidence of many, and what he says is about right with them. If Hearst says Bryan is not labor's friend, and brings forward affidavits to support his declaration, and repeats that charge boldly and plainly day after day, for two full months there will be thousands of laborers satisfied that Hearst's estimate of Bryan is the correct one.

It is in this way that Hearst is aiding the Republicans, particularly in New York, for while he is not making votes for Taft, he is taking votes from Bryan, and diverting them to a third ticket that cannot win.

Notwithstanding the alliance between Mr. Bryan and Governor Johnson of Minnesota, there is no fear among the Republicans that Minnesota will creep into the Democratic column. Had Johnson, instead of Bryan, been nominated at Denver, Minnesota would have been a very doubtful state. But it is recalled that four years ago, when Johnson was elected by a small plurality, Roosevelt was hailed as Bryan's enemy, and the prosperity that has been felt by Minnesota farmers during the past four years is counted on to insure Taft a good big majority this Fall. His majority may not reach 161,000; it would be surprising if it did, but Republican leaders are looking for about 100,000, and will be well satisfied if they get it.

Governor Johnson will probably run stronger this year than he did in 1904, not alone because of the popularity of his administration, but because he is regarded, in Minnesota, as a very likely man to nominate for President in the coming year.

Spread belief that Bryan is in return for Johnson's support this year, has pledged his support to Johnson for 1912, regardless of how the present campaign may end; that he will aid Johnson in his fight for the nomination, and will support him for election, if nominated. This belief will act as an inspiration to the party in Minnesota, and will probably be instrumental in increasing his plurality in the Governorship election.

MINNESOTA IS DOUBTFUL

Still, Minnesota has shown how it can elect a Democratic Governor, and a Republican electoral ticket, by widely differing majorities, and having done so in the past, it is not surprising that up to the present time nothing has developed in Minnesota to cause alarm in the Republican camp.

To an outsider it would seem that the Republican ticket in Connecticut made a grave mistake in nominating Congressman Lilley for Governor, but a Washington newspaper man, a native of Connecticut, and just returned from his old home, tells a different story.

While it is true that Lilley, at the close of the famous submarine case, was publicly reprimanded by the House of Representatives, and virtually branded as a liar, and while the finding of a House merchant on Behring sea, Japanese sealing vessel owners being anxious to prevent the government negotiating with the United States, while Russia is prohibited from Japan, under the agreement made with England and America, to protect Behring sea.

If this is not done, more Japanese sealers will be sent to Behring sea next season.

LILLEY IS STRONGEST MAN

So generally is this feeling, says the newspaper man, that the Republicans really did a wise thing in nominating Lilley. Strange as it may seem to persons outside of Connecticut, Lilley is the strongest man the Republicans could put up, and this in face of the opposition of the majority of the people of the state, the destruction of such seals, and the rescue of our state from the hands of the political pirates who have seized control of its management is the supreme and overshadowing issue of this campaign.

M'HCARG ENDS HIS WORK

BELIEVES FACTIONAL WAR IS OVER IN OREGON.

Hitchcock's Representative Leaves After Confering With Party Leaders on Taft Campaign.

It took Ormsby McHarg just 72 hours to harmonize the warring factions within the Republican party in this state. At least members of the conflicting camps assured McHarg that he had effected a reconciliation, and with this assurance he departed on the midnight train last night for California. All hands, as a result, have passed out the word that they have put aside personal matters and will now work earnestly for the success of the National ticket in this state.

Mr. McHarg did not bring any band with him. Instead, he slipped quietly into Portland Sunday and just as quietly began interviewing prominent members of the party. He did not mince matters, but spoke plainly. Coming as the personal representative of National Chairman Hitchcock, he improved every minute of his time. He very plainly told the party leaders that Mr. Hitchcock expected them to roll up a Roosevelt majority in this state.

At the same time Hitchcock's representative demanded that all factional differences be forgotten and that further agitation on the Senatorial election be deferred until after the November election. Among the many Republicans with whom Mr. McHarg conferred during his stay here was Senator Fulton and National Committeeman Williams, who were summoned to this city Tuesday by telephone.

"Senator Fulton and Committeeman Williams both assured me," said Mr. McHarg, "that there was no disposition on their part to agitate further discussion of the Senatorial situation at any time when it would embarrass the chances of the National ticket in this state. I have been assured by Republicans here, and I have seen a great many, that they will abandon any factional differences they may have and join in a vigorous campaign that Taft and Sherman may carry Oregon by the usual Republican majority. The Republicans are convinced that one thing at a time is sufficient to engage their attention and they recognize in the election of the Republican National ticket the paramount issue at this time.

There prevails a widespread impression as to the condition of finances which the Republican State Central Committee is supplied in this state. The only money that has been advanced by the National Committee to check for 1909, which is to be expended only in paying for a systematic poll of the voters of the state for use by the National Committee in this and succeeding campaigns. The same fund has been supplied to each of the other states.

As far as Oregon is concerned, no further financial assistance from the National Committee is to be expected. On the contrary, this state will be expected to contribute materially to the campaign fund for use in the doubtful states. Oregon certainly has no place in that category. All that remains for Oregon Republicans to do is to put their shoulders to the wheel and proceed to roll up the enormous majority for their ticket next November which is to be gained through united and harmonious effort."

FIRE BIG GUNS IN OCTOBER

"There have been numerous criticisms," said Mr. Hitchcock, "to the effect that the Republican campaign was at a standstill and that the opposition party was carrying things by default. There may be a semblance of truth in this at the present moment, but it has been considered the wisest plan to make the 'racket and red fire' campaign during the month of October."
