COURT TO DECIDE FISH-LAW FIGHT

Officials of Washington to Be Asked to Secure a Decision.

COMPLICATIONS IN VIEW

Authorities of Sister State Must Furnish Data Regarding the Rights Which Apply to Interests

at Stake.

Washington officials will be asked immediately to carry into the courts for a legal determination the controversy affecting the fishing rights of Oregon and Washington in regulating fishing on the Columbia River. This step has been decided upon by the fishing interests of that state, which have tired of the delay in initiating this litigation, which, it was understood, was to be brought immediately following the conference which was held in Portland between the chief executives and other officials of the two states Sunday.

A. R. Burke, of Cathiamet, president of the Washington Trappers and Seiners' Association, yesterday called at the office of Master Fish Warden McAllister, only to learn from that official that he proposed to continue his vigorous enforcement of the fishing laws as enacted by the people of this state. The Oregon Fish Warden also advised his visitor that in enforcing these laws he would continue to exercise the jurisdiction over the Columbia River that the Attorney-General of River that the Attorney-General of state assured him belonged to Urges Appeal for Fishing.

Before leaving for his home last night, Mr. Burke, who is Republican nominee in his county for State Representative, said he would write to Governor Mead and urge Washington state officials not only to proceed immediately to perfect the appeal to the United States Supreme Court in the Chris Nellson case, but at the same time would agree to appeal a commission. Chris Nellson case, but at the same time would agree to appoint a commission, representing the fishing interests of Washington to confer with a similar commission to be named by Governor Chamberlain. The purpose of these commissions as proposed by Mr. Burke is to meet and prepare a set of uniform fish laws to be presented for enactment by the legislatures of the two states this Winter, Fishermes, have states this Winter. Fishermen have come to recognize that the only way the serious tangle in which they now find themselves involved can be solved satisfactorily is for both states to agree on uniform legislation on salmon fishing so far as the Columbia River is cerned. Until such legislation can be draft-"Until such legislation can be drafted and enacted by the legislatures of the two states, the Washington fishermen do not feel that they should be liable to prosecution under Oregon laws which are in direct conflict with those of their own state," said Mr. Burke in discussing the situation, "At the same time they do not feel that they should be required to initiate and prosecute such litigation as is necessary to have the rights of the two sary to have the rights of the two states determined in the courts. We contend that the Washington officials should give us protection even if it becomes necessary to resort to the courts. It is for these reasons that I have written to Governor Mead urging that the state of Washington proceed immediately with the appeal in the Netheron and the Netheron a be drafted for presentation in the legislative bodies of both states next

Reports From Deputies.

Deputies from the Master Fish War-Deputies from the Master Fish Warden's office returned yesterday from the upper Columbia and reported having found only one fishherman, an Indian, openly violating file law. They reported further that practically all uniawful fishing on the upper river is being done with set nets which makes the work of the deputies the more difficult in patrolling the river. Numerous arrests are being made daily on the lower river. on the lower river. As a means still further of compli ating an aiready unfortunate tangle, Washington fisherman have proposed to fishermen living in this state and operating on the Columbia, that they supply themselves with a license is-sued in Washington and thereby prothemselves with the same protec tion the officials of that state have promised resident fishermen. But the possession of such a license would not exempt the Oregon fishermen from ar-rest for Master Fish Warden McAllisrest for Master Fish Warden McAllister declares he will continue to make arrests in violation of the Oregon fish laws as rapidly as the offenders can be apprehended, regardless of the number or character of licenses they may hold. In insisting on this course, the Oregon official is merely following out the instructions of Governor Chamberlain and Attorney-General Crawford, who maintain that their position is sustained by the recent court declaions. Until the insufficiency of these rulings has been established by a higher authority, the Oregon authorities will continue their present thorities will continue their

ASTORIA, Or., Sept. 16.-The fisheries situation here is quiet on the surface, but water bailtis and deputies operating under orders of Master Warden McAl-lister are incessantly at work watching both shores and making frequent arrests for all manner of violations. Twenty-one cases have been filed with Assistant District Attorney Howard Brownell up to nightfall Tuesday and eleven more were filed today, upon which he is issuing for-mal warranta and these are being served as rapidly as possible. This was the confident statement made tonight by John Redmond, the noted Irish Nationalist leader and member of Parliament, who is here for a three weeks' visit. He will address the members of the United Irish League in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago.

"Nothing has done so much to bring the British cabinet to a tolerant view of the Irish home rule question," continued Mr. Redmond, "as the open sympathy which the public men of the United States have voiced for our cause. The public opinion of the world and particularly of the Anglo-Saxon race has shamed the British Cabinet into making concessions to the cause of home rule, which in their aggregate constitute almost a revolution."

"I was given up to die by a leading doctor. Got one of Dr. Miles books and found that Dr. Miles' Nervine fit my case. From the very first dose I took I got better. I am better now than I have been for pears, and do all my own work on the farm. That's what Dr. Miles' Nervine has done for me, and I am glad to recommend it to others."
