PAUCITY OF FUNDS FELT

Do Not Really Fear Defeat, but Acknowledge That More Interest Is Desirable—Labor Vote Slipping Away.

Portland welcomed the "1909 special" last night, bringing over 100 representative business men from Seattle who are promoting the Alaska-Pacific-Yukon Exposition. The special train of eight cars reached the city at 8 o'clock and two special trolley-cars met the party at the Union Depot and brought them to the Portland Commercial Club, where they were given a reception from 8 until 11, then they returned to their cars. The train pulled out early this morning for Eastern Washington and Idaho towns.

It was a case of "hands across the sea" last night. However keen the rivalry between Portland and Seattle for commercial supremacy, there appeared to be a tremendous spirit of unanimity in which both cities joined for the development of the Pacific Northwest. Leading men of both cities paid high compliments to each metropolis and predicted a greater future for both as a result of the spirit of co-operation that is being fostered.

"Success to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition" was the keynote of last night's reception. Each speaker dwelt on this topic, and Portland assured the visitors of its interest in the coming fair and its intention to work for its complete success.

Greeting by Citizens.

There was a large turnout last night of Portland citizens to greet their friends from Puget Sound. It needed no pronouncement by the toastmaster to show the friendly feeling that exists between the two cities, and the fact that last night's gathering was the first opportunity Portland has ever had to entertain a party of visiting Seattle citizens made it all the more cordial and memorable.

The special train is being operated under the auspices of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce. I. A. Nadeau, director-general of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition is at the head of the party, as vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce. C. B. Yandell, secretary of the chamber, arranged the details and is also in the party. The leading officials of the exposition, J. E. Chilberg, president, and Director-General Nadeau and Treasurer Will H. Parry, are star speakers on the present trip.

"There are 106 visitors in our party," said Director-General Nadeau. "The tour is undertaken by the business interests of Seattle to get better acquainted with our friends and neighbors and join with them in the movement for the benefit of the whole Northwest. The Seattle Chamber of Commerce has just adopted the motto, 'What helps the Northwest helps Seattle.' We realize that the strong spirit of co-operation will do more for the development of this great country than any other one thing.

Oregon's Building First.

"We feel under obligations to Portland for its support. It is a pleasure to us to acknowledge that Oregon's building is the first to be completed on the grounds of the exposition, and we want to testify to your energy and zeal.

"The trip is planned into Eastern Washington, Idaho, the Palouse country, to Spokane and back to Seattle. We hope to spread the gospel of good fellowship and hope to make the different sections realize that there is nothing to our interest that is not also for their own good. Too keen antagonism in the past between the cities has hurt all. We hope that that spirit has been abandoned and that there is a brighter future for all.

"There is a movement on foot, similar to that started at Spokane a while ago, which at that time failed, to organize the commercial organizations of the Coast and I am glad to see that Portland is taking a leading part in that movement. We are indeed grateful to Portland on behalf of the exposition for the support given and the promises of support."

C. W. Hodson, president of the club, presided in the parlor, and introduced the speakers. He presented President J. E. Chilberg, of the Exposition, after Mr. Nadeau had spoken. He said:

Great Benefit Expected.

"While we feel at times that we may be competitors of Portland, your commission has set the example for other states, for Oregon's building has been the first of the state buildings on the grounds to be completed. With the possible exception of the Washington building, the Oregon building will be the finest on the grounds. We believe that the benefits resulting to the Washington cities from the Lewis and Clark Fair will be duplicated for Portland and Oregon by the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition. I want to invite you all, on behalf of the fair, to meet us in 1909."

Senator Samuel H. Piles expressed his hope that the coming Fair will result in large benefits, not only to our own state, but to the entire Pacific Coast. We have come to realize that we must work together. I have had the honor of working in harmony with the Senators from Oregon. I can say they have rendered signal service to the people of your state.

Co-operation Will Conquer.

"There is room on this Coast to build many cities. The only thing we have to do is to get together. I realize that your benefit means our benefit. I have always taken a great interest in opening up the Columbia River, and have always supported any movement looking to that end. It belongs as much to Washington as to Oregon, and for that reason I am interested in opening it up to commerce and navigation.

"None can ever forget the Exposition that was held in Portland. No one who has ever visited it can forget this beautiful city of roses as we saw it during the Exposition. Portland itself will reap everlasting benefits from our Exposition."

Congressman W. E. Humphrey paid warm tributes to Portland. He said:

"I admire your city and your buildings. This Commercial Club structure would be a credit to any city of this country. I like your men and I admire your women, but save me from your politics. Poor old Kansas with her Populists and her 'isms' stands before Oregon abashed.

"If I am re-elected, I shall do all in my power to open up the Columbia River from tidewater to Kettle Falls. Your fair was the greatest success of any ever held in the United States, and if it had not been for the fact that we could point to it to offset the miserable failure at Jamestown, I doubt if we could have secured the Government appropriation. Let us join closer and work for the common good. In proposing a toast for this beautiful city, let me say: 'Here is to Portland, the beautiful, may she grow and prosper as long as the Columbia flows to the sea.'"

John Elwell, of Vancouver, Wash., who came over to Portland with a delegation of business men from that city to help greet the visitors, made a few remarks in which he said:

"We are sorry the party could not spend more time in Vancouver. Ours is the oldest town on the Columbia River. Aside from the old landmarks, of which we used to be proud, we can show you two miles of new bitulithic pavement and a new street railway that is just about to commence operation. The latch-string is always out and we shall be glad at any time to see you over there."

Toastmaster Hodson said any speech-making event at the Commercial Club would be considered incomplete at which Tom Richardson, manager of the club, did not speak, and he was accordingly introduced. He did not make an extended address, but talked briefly of the common interests of Seattle and Portland and said both should become better acquainted and work together in harmony.

Future of the Northwest.

"When we realize that there are only about 2,000,000 people in the entire Northwest, we may have some idea of the great future that is ahead of this territory," said he. "You people of Seattle have an optimism that I am proud of, but I wish you had our organization. We are supporting your exposition from motives of cold-blooded selfishness, for we want Oregon and Washington to have more people so we can sell them goods. I want you to come down here again, and in the daytime, when you can see how our city is growing."

Mr. Richardson also told of the work of the Commercial Club along publicity lines and recommended a similar organization for Seattle.

President Hodson invited the visitors to step up to the dining-room and partake of a luncheon that had been prepared by the club chef. Bowls of punch refreshed the excursionists, who left the club at a late hour for their cars, after enjoying the hospitality of Portland to the utmost and expressing their wish that friendly visits between the two cities will be more frequent in the future.

Those making up the special train party are as follows: J. E. Chilberg, I. A. Nadeau, Samuel H. Piles, Will H. Humphrey, F. W. Baker, Will H. Parry, C. B. Yandell, J. P. Aarons, E. H. TWO KILLED BY MANIAC

Asylum Overseer and Woman Patient Slain With Iron Bar.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—In demoniacal fury, Andrew Lightfoot, a mulatto inmate at St. Elizabeth's Asylum for the Insane, today killed Patrick Maloney, the overseer of the grounds, and Millie Follin, a young inmate of the asylum, and severely injured Miss Robinson, another inmate. The murderer escaped from the grounds and fled to the swamps nearby, where a cordon of police, a score in all, quickly surrounded the place of concealment. He was finally caught, after the police found it necessary to shoot him, inflicting a wound in the leg, and he was taken back to the asylum.

The murder occurred directly in front of the main building for the men patients at the asylum, which is a Government institution. Maloney, 50 years old, lived on the place with his family. Lightfoot, 40 years old, had been an inmate of the asylum for eight years and was regarded as harmless. For some time he has been serving as an assistant to the overseer. An iron bar was the weapon he used, crushing the skulls of his victims.

Grant Wallace in Accident.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—Grant Wallace, the well known artist and writer, slipped and fell while attempting to board a streetcar at Waller and Stanyan streets, the wet asphalt causing him to lose his footing. His left arm was broken and his left shoulder badly strained. He also suffered lacerations of the face and body. He will be incapacitated for several weeks.

HAS GRAY IN MIND AS CHIEF JUSTICE

Bryan, It Is Said, Will Honor Delaware Jurist if Elected to Presidency.

SHREWD POLITICAL MOVE?

Circulation of Rumor Calculated to Weaken Force of Hughes' Attack on Nebraskan as Enemy of Courts.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—(Special.)—If William J. Bryan is inaugurated as President next March it is believed by those most in his confidence that during the early part of his Administration he will appoint Judge George Gray, of Delaware, as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States to succeed Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller. Of course, neither Mr. Bryan nor his advisers will discuss such a question, any more than they will discuss his prospective cabinet appointees in the event of his election. It would be most imprudent for him or for them to do so, yet in some mysterious way the suggestion leaked out after his recent visit to Chicago and the announcement was made that he would speak in Wilmington on September 17, and at that time be the guest of Judge Gray.

What Mr. Bryan and Judge Gray discussed at the latter's home last Thursday probably will not be made public by either of them. However, it is known that Mr. Bryan has had the Gray appointment in mind for some time. To just what extent he may have communicated it to his counsellors or to Judge Gray himself can be only a matter for speculation. Mr. Bryan will say nothing about it; obviously he cannot. Chief Justice Fuller, a party Democrat before he was appointed to the bench by the late President Cleveland, has now presided over the Supreme Court for 20 years, and having passed the age of 70, has long been eligible to retirement. It is said, however, that for the past five years he has been holding on to his office in the hope that a Democrat would be elected President and that he might turn over his judicial robes to a Democrat.

Favors Non-Partisan Bench.

There are now six former Republicans and three former Democrats on the Supreme Bench, and it is said that the Chief Justice believes that appointments should be made from both great parties, and that he would particularly like to see his own successor a man of his own party allegiance, insofar as a justice of the Supreme Court, can have any politics.

One of the objections which many prudent men have made to the election of Bryan has been the fear that he might pack the Supreme Court with judges who might be considered as unsafe. The point was made by Governor Hughes in his speech opening the Ohio campaign at Youngstown that the next President would have the appointment of three and possibly four Justices of the Supreme Court. At the present time Justice John M. Harlan who has served 31 years, and Justice David J. Brewer, who has served 19 years, are eligible to retirement as well as Chief Justice Fuller. Justice Edward D. White has served 14 years, and might or might not retire during the next Administration. Justice Rufus W. Peckham has served 13 years, and the same is true of him. The question naturally has arisen with many as to what sort of appointments Bryan, if President, would make to fill their places.

Democrats believe that there could be no possible objection raised against the elevation to the Supreme Bench of a man like Judge Gray, and that if people get the idea that Bryan's selections for the bench will be men of such high standing as Judge Gray, or men of his caliber, that the Nebraskan's chances will be greatly advanced. Although Judge Gray bolted Bryan in 1896 and supported the Palmer and Buckner ticket, the two men are now in accord and appear to have formed a sort of mutual admiration society.

Was Bryan's First Choice.

The fact that Judge Gray was Bryan's first choice for the Vice-Presidential nomination at Denver, is well known, and those who have seen the telegrams which Bryan sent to Judge Gray at the time, declare that there can be no doubt of his sincerity in the matter. Had Judge Gray consented to accept the nomination, there is no doubt that he could have had it.

The appointment of Judge Gray it is argued would please Bryan's labor friends, and at the same time prove eminently satisfactory to business interests. His record on the bench to which he was appointed by the late President McKinley has been such, it is contended, as to warrant his promotion to the higher tribunal. While the probable appointment of Judge Gray to the Supreme Court, in the event of Bryan's election is not regarded as in the nature of a political deal, nevertheless Democrats high in the counsels of the party look upon the suggestion with a great deal of satisfaction.

ARCTIC VILLAGERS PERISH

Whole Settlement Is Found Frozen Stiff in Death.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 22.—Frozen stiff and evidently a long time dead, a whole village of Siberian Eskimo were found on the Siberian coast by a party of Indians who went in a canoe last June to see their comrades, to discover what experiences they had gone through during the Winter. Their provisions were completely exhausted, and in their famished condition they had eaten the walrus skin covers from their houses and had actually begun to devour the clothing that covered them.

This tale is told by Rev. Edgar O. Campbell, who is in charge of the Presbyterian mission station at St. Lawrence Island, near Nome, in a letter to Rev. Wallace H. Lee, of Seattle. Only once a year has St. Lawrence Island communication with the outside world, and the letter received from Mr. Campbell is the first news of the disaster brought to Seattle. After the long Winter spent at St. Lawrence Island the Indians went on the trip and made the ghastly discovery mentioned.

EAGLE KILLS LITTLE CHILD

Big Bird Is Captured, but Released on Order of Game Warden.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 22.—The little daughter of David Chisholm, of Eagle's Nest, Alaska, was carried away by a huge American eagle the middle of last July, and three weeks later its torn body was found in the eagle's nest and the bird captured. John Kalem, of Seattle, bought the bird and shipped it to this city, where it has been on exhibition in his store for a few days past. This morning State Game Warden Henry Rief ordered the release of the captive bird.

White Slave Dealer Convicted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—Henry Villette, charged with bringing Margarette Paisse, a young French girl, into this country for immoral purposes, was today convicted in the United States District Court. He will appear for sentence Friday.
