

BEVERIDGE FLAYS BRYAN'S POLICIES

Declares Fallacies in His Past Record Are Still in Evidence.

INDIANAN SPEAKS TO 8500

Even Though Elected, Democratic Nominee Would Find His Hands Tied in Upper House by Own Party, Declares Senator.

shouting, "Our next Senator from Oregon." At the outset of his remarks, Senator Beveridge invited those in the audience at any time during his address to ask questions or to question the correctness of any statement he might make, but in extending this invitation he explained that it should be understood from the beginning that "agitators and politicians" were barred.

Turns Tables on Opponents.

The Senator had scarcely begun his address, when some commotion was caused by taking a flashlight photograph of the audience. "Never mind," advised the speaker, "that was just a flash of light on the situation on which I shall attempt to throw further light." Later in his address, the Senator remarked: "Mr. Bryan is the best speaker in the country, but—" and at this point his voice was drowned by the applause of the friends of the Nebraskan in the audience. "I am glad to see there are so many of the people here to whom I am desirous of speaking," continued Senator Beveridge, when the demonstration subsided, "for I want them to be convinced of the error of their way. But they should have waited for me to finish my sentence before applauding. I wonder if they will applaud when I have done so? I will finish the sentence now.

Comparisons Drawn From History.

"Mr. Bryan is the best speaker in the country, but so was Patrick Henry in his day, but who would have thought of making Patrick Henry President instead of Washington? Wendell Phillips also was the best speaker in his day, but who would have made his President in place of Bryan rather than to permit him to run my business and go into bankruptcy." By referring to the order of succession to the Presidency in the earlier history of this country, Senator Beveridge showed that it was nothing unusual for the retiring chief executive to be succeeded by the candidate of his own personal choice. "And it will be for the very same reasons that Roosevelt at this time will witness his successor his closest friend, wisest counsellor and his best-equipped officer, William H. Taft, the ablest administrator and trained statesman ever presented in the history of the republic."

No Unkind Word for Bryan.

After reviewing briefly the history of the two political parties and urging the importance of the pending contest as it concerned the welfare of the country, Senator Beveridge said in part: "I have not an unkind word to say against Mr. Bryan. I quit making partisan speeches years ago, believing that the parties belong to the people and not the people to the parties. Bryan is a good man, but not a wise one; it takes both wisdom and wisdom for such a position. He is righteous, but not right; upright, but not steady; brave, but not prudent. It takes these qualities to make the chief Magistrate of the mightiest people of the world.

"It was only 30 years ago Bryan advocated free silver and if he had succeeded at that time and introduced that system the country would have been ruined. More recently he urged the Government ownership of railroads, which I think he himself would now admit was a dream that would have been realized by succeeding generations had it been introduced. He now proposes to control the business of the nation under a franchise system and at the same time denounces the employment of so many Government officials. But his franchise plan would provide for at least 100,000 additional Government officials.

What Reason for Change?

"But why should we have any change at all? Taft is Roosevelt policies personified. Should we make a change because of the few turbans in the Republican party who for seven years have been opposing the policies of Roosevelt? We have unshored our own reactionary element and the progressive forces of the party are now in the saddle.

"If Bryan were President today he would find two-thirds of the Democratic members of the Senate opposed to every plan he is now proposing. Take the leader of the Democrats in the Senate, Charles A. Culberson, of Texas; Danahy, of Virginia, and many others I might name, and would they be found supporting these very measures? I again challenge the Democratic National committee to poll the Democratic members of the Senate as to whether or not they would support Bryan's policies.

"But who do we find supporting Bryan at this time? It is the men who hated him yesterday. Who do we find? Judge Alton B. Parker and Richard Olney (Appellate) Now applaud if you will Charles Murphy, of Tammany Hall, and Roger Sullivan, of Illinois, also are supporting Bryan. The hatred of these men for Bryan of yesterday is only equalled by their hatred of Roosevelt today.

Laws Passed by Republicans.

"During the last seven years the Republicans have not passed a law that a Democrat would desire to repeal. We have passed the railroad rate law. Would Bryan repeal it? We have passed the pure food law, the meat inspection law and the irrigation law. Would Bryan stand for the repeal of one of them? For the workingmen, Congress has passed more progressive legislation than any other administration. Among this legislation is included the employers' liability law, the safety appliance law and other measures limiting the hours of employment. If they would not repeal any of these laws, if they indorse everything in Roosevelt's administration, what grounds have they to come forward at this time and ask your support to put us out that you may put them in?

"Of course, the Democrats have some objection to our currency law. But as passed at the last congress this measure was only a temporary expedient. It provides for a currency commission which will investigate the currency systems of all of the countries and make some recommendation for a more satisfactory system to replace the one we now have. Of course, Bryan could develop a currency system in 15 minutes, but sound business men do not want such a system.

As to Tariff Revision.

"The Democrats also propose to revise the tariff, so do we but in doing so we propose to put the country in the foremost ranks of the nations of the world. The Democrats would put us back 30 years and where we find Turkey and Japan today. China is one of the few remaining countries which today have the tariff for revenue only but what about the progressiveness of its people? Tariff for revenue only is a tax on articles which produce the most revenue. It amounts to a tax on coffee and other food necessities of the people. It does not get a new market anywhere in the world and surrenders our own home market.

"The tariff will provide within six months after the inauguration of Taft next March will protect American industry and labor at home and at the same time open up additional markets abroad. We will not provide a straight protective tariff, but a double tariff—a maximum and a minimum tariff. The minimum rate will apply to nations which give our producers the advantage of their markets, while the maximum tax will be made applicable only as a sort of big stick of retaliation to those countries which deny us access to their markets.

System That Is Proposed.

"Under such a tariff system as proposed by the Republicans through revision, Germany in 12 years is selling abroad 12 manufactured articles where we are selling one, Canada, under the same tariff, has shut out our livestock from Europe. Give us the same weapon Canada and Germany have and we will leave them so far behind on the sea of trade that they will never see our smoke. "Let me give you another illustration of just how foolish all of their proposals are. This one I think is the worst because it contains the poison of demagoguery and one which would tear down the pillars of our temple of liberty. I refer to the injunction plan. I know there are those on both sides who do not like to discuss any critical issue. If there is any issue that I am unwilling to talk about I will get out of public life. I am hoping tonight that there are a great many working men here, and particularly union men, because I want to make this very clear to you. There are those who say that the writ of injunction has been abused, but the benefits of this country know that it has not been.

Speedy Hearing of Injunctions.

"Every man, rich or poor, powerful or weak has a right to his day in court. This is the first principle of law-made liberty and liberty-made law. No injunction should issue without notice. It should be speedily heard and then decided. I am against those gorillas who would destroy this most vital writ of conscience. The court of equity is the keeper of the people's conscience and the writ of injunction is its most valuable power. It prevents the digging of a ditch that will damage adjacent property; compels railroads to furnish cars. It stays the hands of lawless corporations from committing acts which once done would work an injury that could not be amended. Under the plan of the opposition you take the bridge off for lawless wealth and bid it run wild. Scores more of injunctions have been issued against capital than against labor. Name me one and I will name you at least 100 against capital.

Effect of Bryan's Plan.

"Mr. Bryan's injunction plan would give the corporations and railroads and the overlords of wealth the arm of the equity courts to despoil the people as much as they will. Why? Because if a corporation or any other form of lawless wealth wishes to do anything it will proceed unhampered. When the act is once committed the corporation doesn't care what you think of it. What it wants is to do the thing. Mr. Bryan's plan means the absolute destruction of this writ because he proposes that wherever a contempt of court is committed outside of the presence of the court the fact as to whether that contempt was committed or not shall be tried by a jury.

"Now suppose that plan is applied to a corporation, to any form of capital. Suppose an injunction has been issued against the manager of a corporation. Suppose he wants to violate it. He has the best legal counsel money can buy. A dozen reasons for violating it would be concocted by those men. He has a jury trial. His hired counsel would take hundreds of exceptions to the evidence and present countless technicalities for the purpose of appealing to the higher

RECORD OF SENATOR BEVERIDGE

Senator Albert J. Beveridge is one of the most progressive Republican members of the United States Senate. He was first elected from Indiana in November 1888 and was re-elected in November, 1904.

He proposed the amendment to the meat inspection bill providing for the inspection of all products of packing-houses engaged in interstate commerce.

Senator Beveridge has since been making a vigorous fight for an amendment to the same bill requiring packers to pay the cost of inspection rather than let the cost fall on the Government.

He also is the author of a bill to prevent the sale of the products of child labor in interstate commerce.

During the last session of Congress before action was taken by the party leaders for an investigation on tariff revision, Senator Beveridge introduced a joint resolution providing for a tariff commission to investigate the subject of revision during the recess of Congress. While his resolution was not adopted, his persistence in keeping the matter to the front was largely instrumental in causing the leaders in the House to order an investigation by the ways and means committee and in the Senate by the finance committee, which accomplished the end for which he was contending.

Senator Beveridge is an advocate of a maximum and a minimum tariff, in line with Governor Cummins of Iowa, and other progressive Republicans.

He is a great and splendid nation and we cannot trust its destinies to an unskilled hand. Mr. Taft has administered a department of the government with brilliancy; as the Solicitor-General of the nation, as a judge on the bench whose decisions were never reversed, as Governor of the Philippines, where he successfully handled the most complicated problems, he was equally capable.

"It is a mighty future that looms before us, and behind us are favoring winds. But also before us are rocks and false lights on the shore. Give us the commander and deliver to him the chart of our destiny, that great leader whose fate has equipped for us, by putting into the chair once occupied by Washington, Jackson, Lincoln their natural successor, that great, that good, that kindly, that just man, William Howard Taft."

Interrupted by Questioner.

Voice in the audience: "Do you think the courts are a nuisance?" "The gentleman asks me if I think the courts are a nuisance. No, they are the bulwarks of our liberties. From the law ton in which the gentleman asked the question I should say that he thought so. Any man who would make a statement like that is either ignorant of the meaning of jurisprudence or else he is a conscienceless demagogue trying to coin the votes of citizens out of the passions of men. Now, I do not believe that the men who proposed this plan fully understand its results, do not comprehend the Frankenstein they are creating. It will be the laboring men themselves who will write their black condemnation on its author's brow.

"Bryan does not know where he is going. He hasn't studied the question enough. He talks so much and travels so much that he hasn't any time to think at all about anything. Mr. Gompers is a sincere and faithful worker, devoted to the uplift of the toiler, but he has not explored to its end the path upon which he would set our feet. I have taken these illustrations to show how thoroughly chimerical, therefore, how run-down their plans are. A statesman must explore the history of every subject to its very foundation. The orator cannot be a statesman; he has no time. The organizer of business cannot be a statesman; he has no time.

Final Question of Justice.

"I am for labor when it is right and only then; I am for capital when it is right and only then. But always I am for justice, whether labor or capital or both should deny it or whether the people themselves in a moment of wrath should refuse it. Only justice is everlasting. Only justice sets on an eternal throne, unshaken and unshakable, and only he who takes his stand at the right hand of justice shall prevail. "We are today the greatest power in the world, and as the first power in the world we ought to build the greatest navy in the world. We ought to have a navy great enough to have as large a fleet on our Pacific Coast as we had last year on our Atlantic Coast. There are some men in both parties who seemed to think last year that there was only an Atlantic coast. When the battleship fleet sailed around the Horn we realized then that the Pacific Ocean is a mighty factor in American history, and we realize now that the Pacific Ocean is the mightiest factor in America tomorrow.

Taft Trained for Position.

"The candidates today are as important as the platform. They are equally true, equally sincere, equally devoted to the interests of the people. Mr. Bryan is inexperienced. Mr. Taft is the most thoroughly trained man that has been presented for the presidency of this country. Bryan is sincere but untried; he is the prolific parent of theories. Mr. Taft is equally sincere in purpose and intention, but he is the prolific parent of mighty plans, every one of which has worked and has risen up and called him blessed. He is a trained statesman, a graduate in the school of deeds performed.

"This is a great and splendid nation and we cannot trust its destinies to an unskilled hand. Mr. Taft has administered a department of the government with brilliancy; as the Solicitor-General of the nation, as a judge on the bench whose decisions were never reversed, as Governor of the Philippines, where he successfully handled the most complicated problems, he was equally capable.

"It is a mighty future that looms before us, and behind us are favoring winds. But also before us are rocks and false lights on the shore. Give us the commander and deliver to him the chart of our destiny, that great leader whose fate has equipped for us, by putting into the chair once occupied by Washington, Jackson, Lincoln their natural successor, that great, that good, that kindly, that just man, William Howard Taft."

MAKES ADDRESS AT CHEHALIS

Senator Speaks From McKinley Stump and Is Warmly Greeted.

CHEHALIS, Wash., Oct. 6.—(Special.)—Senator Albert J. Beveridge, of Indiana, was warmly welcomed at Chehalis, at 2 o'clock today, when his special arrival. A crowd of several hundred people greeted him. Music was provided by the band of the state training school. The Senator talked a few minutes, then held an open session in which he invited any of his hearers to ask questions, which he as promptly answered. When he finished, he mixed with the audience and shook hands with dozens.

The Senator's references to McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft were loudly applauded. He spoke from the McKinley stump.

Amusements

"The Girl of the Golden West"

Everyone who intends to see the beautiful production of "The Girl of the Golden West" this week at the Beaulieu, will secure seats at once. The demand is exceeding all expectations. Never before in the history of Portland stock has such a production been presented.

"Isle of Spice" at the Baker.

"The Isle of Spice," which is making such a favorable impression at the Baker this week, is full of fun of the most rollicking kind. The chorus is larger, smarter and prettier and fitted with twice as much ginger as the ordinary chorus. There will be matinee Thursday and Saturday, and the regular performance every night this week.

AT THE VAUDEVILLE THEATERS.

"The Bogus Strong Man" at Orpheum. Le Clair and Sampson who are at the Orpheum, are English comedy athletic acrobats or travesty gymnasts. They have been the regular performance every night this week.

"The Four Corners of the Earth."

The spectacular melodrama, "The Four Corners of the Earth," which is playing at the Star Theater all this week, is a pure, wholesome story of conquering power, embracing the gamut of human emotions. This production has an unusually strong cast.

"My Jim" and Salome Tonight.

This evening the Lyric will again offer its extraordinary attraction in the shape of that splendid rural comedy-drama, "My Jim," in addition to the phenomenally sensational Salome dance as performed by the famous Nedra Lanscombe at every performance.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

"Man of the Hour" Tomorrow.

Beginning tomorrow (Thursday) night and continuing Friday and Saturday nights, with a matinee Saturday afternoon, the famous political drama, "The Man of the Hour," will be the attraction at the Helig Theater, Fourteenth and Washington streets. The company is composed of the same excellent cast of principals that made such a decided hit in this interesting play at the Helig last season.

"A Knight for a Day" Next.

The new big musical comedy success, "A Knight for a Day," will begin an engagement of four nights at the Helig Theater, Fourteenth and Washington streets, next Sunday, October 11. This will be the first time here of the latest up-to-date Eastern and Pacific Coast. The reason for the postponement of the Western trip until the play's fourth season grows out of the latest demands for "The Classman" on the part of residents of cities and towns east of the Rocky Mountains. "The Classman" has decided to send the members of the original company to the South, East and Middle West the past three seasons, this year will signalize the first tour of the famous play to the Northwest and Pacific Coast.
