HILL SPENDS BUSY DAY IN PORTLAND

Declares That Road From Astoria to Tillamook Is Not Practicable.

GLAD OF TAFT'S ELECTION

Great Railroader Says That Conditions Have Been Settled and Business Will Resume Normal Stride.

James J. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern party of distinguished associates, reached Portland yesterday morning from Spokane. Last night they joined with the commercial interests of this city in celebrating the completion of the North Bank road from Pasco to this city.

is the information we have from the survey that has been made by our engineers. Besides, the business that could be depended on for such an extension would not justify the expense of such a road. To build a railroad down the Coast would involve very extensive and expensive tunneling.

What about the report that you assisted in raising a fund of $800,000 for the Republican National committee in the recent campaign? was asked. "Oh, my goodness," indignantly replied Mr. Hill, "there is absolutely not the slightest foundation for such a report. Even if there was, I certainly would not discuss it."

CONSIDERS ROAD GOOD INVESTMENT

Hill Declares He Would Not Like to Take Back His Money.

FINE ENTRANCE TO CITY

Builder of North Bank Line Is Roundly Applauded as He Pays Tribute to Portland at Banquet.

James J. Hill's speech at the banquet commemorating the opening of the North Bank Railroad followed. Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: A man's heart would be made of either ice or stone if it was not moved by the wisdom that you have accorded me here tonight, and I want to thank you for it.

Faith Has Brought Success. The years I am thankful to say, fall lightly on me; at the same time I am constantly reminded that the future is much darker than the past. It is an easy way to get through without falling. Possibly it was not that, but I always like to play for a sure thing.

Pride in New Line. And without any attempt at giving orders, I want to say to you that I know the great wide world, from Pasco to Portland. "Good, good, good," and great applause. One of them, a man from the Cascade Range (great applause). And I left, although it involved the investment of the expenditure of the amount of money that I do not like to trade back; I would not like to trade back and take the money. (Great applause.)

Neighbors at Milwaukie Avert Their Flight Followed the Unexpected Return of Wife. Friends are unable to explain the mysterious disappearance of James H. Reid, ex-Fruit Commissioner and one of the best-known horticulturists of the state, who left his home at Milwaukie, Or., October 14, and so far as can be learned, has not been seen since that time.

Refers to Mr. Cotton. Now we have got into Portland pretty fairly well, and have a fair amount of room down there, but my friend Cotton (laughter and applause) is a thing in the world against Cotton, he is a good fellow, and every one of you know it, but what a power of resistance he has. (Laughter and applause.)

Talk of the Future. Now it is getting well on in the evening, and we will be serious a moment if you will allow me. It is easy to give advice; maybe it is easier to give advice than it is to take it; but let us reason as to the future. I am not a prophet, or the son of a prophet. Governor Mead, or your sister state north of the Columbia, gave me credit for forecasting something for Washington. It was able to call attention to some of the conditions of the country. I am glad.

Hit by Timber, Back Broken. Gottlieb Muttie, an employe of the Multnomah Box Factory, at the foot of Bancroft avenue, who lives at Hilldale, was perhaps fatally injured in the yards of the factory yesterday morning, while unloading some lumber. A large piece slipped and fell upon Muttie, who was of Vermont, provided they emigrated when they were young. Now it is 32 years since I came to the West, and at that time there was no Minneapolis, although Minneapolis is now a city bordering on 300,000 people. Burlington's Falls was peopled mainly by those who have left the State of Maine to improve their condition, and some from New Hampshire.

Tells Story of Arbitration. After they had been there several years, and without a church, most of them had had Congregational fold, and they thought they ought to have a church, as children were growing up, and they ought to have a place for them on Sunday to worship, having been without a church for several years they thought to go back to the hard and fast Congregational rule of New England was a little binding, and they thought they ought to have a church, as children were growing up, and they ought to have a place for them on Sunday to worship.

Result Goes Against Him. I was driving through the streets shortly after the results of the arbitration and I met a friend who was enjoying a good laugh, and I said, "Prince, what are you laughing at?" "Well," he said, "it's just Steve Emerson down here." And Price went on and told me about this arbitration, and he said, "I asked Emerson how he came out with the arbitration he had with Dudley." I should have said that Emerson, having chosen Stanchfield and Dudley, having chosen Captain Rawlin, the two chose as a third man the new dominion, the new arbitrator. Price asked Emerson how he came out, and his answer was, "Price, I tell you, the next time I have anything to arbitrate, I am going to have one man on there who believes in hell." (Laughter and applause.) That all he said, but it proved a strong evidence that it was against him.
