Postmaster Morgan, of New York, Shot Down by Lunatic.

GIRL PREVENTS FATALITY

Daughter Strikes Revolver as Crazy Man Pulls Trigger—Bullet Injures Only Slight Wound in Victim.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Edward M. Morgan, postmaster of New York City, was wounded in the abdomen this morning by a bullet fired by E. H. R. Mackey, an eccentric English stenographer, who then committed suicide.

Mr. Morgan probably owes his life to the quick wit and bravery of his 14-year-old daughter, Dorothy, who saw Mackey draw his revolver, and struck it with her hand. This deflected the bullet, otherwise the postmaster would have been fatally wounded.

An investigation of the life and record of Mackey reveals that he was of a morbid nature and a former inmate of an asylum in Worcester, Mass. That his act was premeditated is made certain by a letter which he left, but which was a fancied grievance against Mr. Morgan and the postoffice authorities concerning the handling of his mail.

IS NOT AFRAID OF MICE

Elephant at New York Zoo Punishes Rodent Intruder.

New York Press.

There was once a rumor going the rounds that the genus elephant fears the genus mouse. It is now known to be a myth.

All was quiet in the Bronx Zoo elephant house and Luna formerly known as Athena, was prowling against the wall of her abode. Now and then she grunted uneasily.

She saw a creature so small as to be almost invisible. It was a mouse, and the first Luna had ever seen.

The elephant, the keeper says, stood trembling at the rear of her house, her trunk raised against the farther wall.

The mouse made the next move. It advanced to the middle of the elephant's trunk. This it did to the elephant and started to romp about the huge forelegs.

Then Luna decided to stop the antics of the mouse. She cautiously brought her forelegs together. As the mouse jumped upon her toes she managed to press one of her huge feet on the little animal's tail.

There was much squeaking and struggling at the base of that elephant leg as the mouse battled valiantly to escape. Luna was not to be outdone.

With her trunk she gingerly picked up the struggling mouse by the tail and held it aloft where she could examine it more carefully. Then she trumpeted loudly, at the same moment hurling her captive away from her. The mouse struck the wall with a thud and fell to the floor of the cage. Evidently it was not hurt.

When the elephant saw that the mouse was unharmed she returned to her usual position. The mouse was not seen again.
