CITIES AFTER OLD RELIC

PORTLAND AND SEATTLE MAY SECURE LIBERTY BELL.

Head of A.-Y.-P. Exposition Offers to Co-operate With Management of Rose Festival.

Immediate steps will be taken to secure for the Rose Festival of 1909 the presence here of the Liberty Bell, the token of American independence and its greatest symbol of freedom and liberty from the mother country. Advices were received from Director-General I. A. Nadeau, of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, yesterday, to the effect that Seattle and the Exposition Commission would exert every influence at their command to bring the honored relic out here next Summer.

Much red tape will have to be unwound, according to statements made by Mr. Nadeau, who some time ago took the matter up with the Mayor and City Council of Philadelphia, in whose charge the cherished trophy is. Under no circumstances can the Liberty Bell leave the "City of Brotherly Love" without an official escort composed of members of the city government, and upon the last occasion of its leaving Philadelphia, three members of the Council accompanied it. It was not allowed to become a part of any of the regular trains out of the city, but was dispatched on a special car with a special engine, and was exhibited along the route, which was from the Quaker City to Chicago, during the Columbian Exposition.

That several years ago the legislative body of the City of Philadelphia voted never again to allow it to leave its present abode, and it will require some powerful influence to overcome this decision. At the same time, President Ralph W. Hoyt, of the Portland Rose Festival Association, hopes, with the assistance of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, to bring pressure enough to bear upon the custodians of the relic to have it sent out here next Summer.

The first step the Festival will take will be to name a special committee to work in harmony with another committee named by the Seattle Fair people. "We will be perfectly willing to select a committee to go back to Philadelphia to use its influence to get the bell, if the Seattle Exposition will do the same," said President Hoyt, of the Rose Festival, last night.

RENEW HYDRANT INQUIRY

Executive Board Refers Old Problem to New Committee.

Greene and Isaac Swett, members of the Board, resulted in the resignation of the entire committee. The new committee will now make an effort to learn the facts.
