Heney Secured Education and Took Up Law in Face of Trying Obstacles.

KILLS DOCTOR IN SOUTH

Street Fight With Arizona Physician Who Viciously Attacked Young Attorney Results in Former's Death.

The quality of Heney's courage never was questioned. This trait in the man's character asserted itself during his boyhood days in San Francisco. He developed into a man of strong determination. After attending night school in San Francisco for several months, being required during the days to work in his father's furniture store, Heney perseveted and, with the assistance of his instructors in the night school, entered the University of California in the class of 1813. His father refused to allow the bey to continue in college, but young Heney secured a teacher's certificate and, by teaching school in Northern California, raised the necessary funds with which to meet his college expenses and returned to the University three years later, only to be expelled for fighting during his freshman year.

Career Begins in Arizona.

Hency began his career in Arizona by teaching the school at Silver City, a rough mining town, where muscle was as necessary as mental development. Benecessary as mental development. Before the year was out Heney gave up the school and became a miner, afterwards going into the cattle business, eventually returning to Tucson in 1888,
when he resumed his practice of law.
It was while living at Tucson that Heney "got his man," Dr. J. C. Handy, a frontier doctor-politician, was the victim. After inflicting all sorts of cruelty on his wife, Handy finally abandoned her and when she failed to institute divorce proceedings, he brought the suit himself. The husband was successful by threats and intimidation in frightening threats and intimidation in frightening two attorneys, who had been retained by Mrs. Handy, to give up her case and withdraw. It was then that Heney became the woman's attorney, being forced daily to endure frequent insults at the hands of Handy Eighteen months later Handy obtained a divorce, the court awarding him the custody of the chil-dren. But this did not end the case, for Heney appealed, disregarding the threat of Handy that he had better abandon the case immediately or leave the terri-

Fight in Street.

Fight in Street.

A few days later Heney, accompanied by his clerk, was met in the street by Handy, who, purposely, brushed against the attorney, at the same time applying to him the same epithet he had been using since the trial began. Handy then struck Heney in the face and, grabbing him by the throat, Jammed him into the side of a building. Heney reached for his gun, but did not draw it and, feeling Handy's grip on his throat relax, freed himself from the grasp of his assailant and ran backward into the street, drawing his revolver at the same time. Handy followed, at the same time reaching for his own gun. However, he did not produce the revolver, being determined to pravoke Heney to fire the first shot. The dector grabbed Heney's revolver and in the scuffle that followed the gun was discharged, the bullet lodging in Handy's intestines. Then followed a street fight in which Heney, while weiging only 12s, as against his adversary's 200, prevented Handy from getting possession of the sun. After about five minutes of fight sun. Handy from getting possession of the gun. After about five minutes of fight-ing friends separated the two combat-ants. Handy was removed to his home, where he died the next day.

Politics Goes Against Him.

Heney afterwards engaged in politics in Idaho and as county chairman suc-ceeded in routing the Democratic boss and his machine, accepting as his re-ward the office of Attorney-General. Eventually, however, Heney lost out in the political game. He worked to have the territory admitted as a state, in the hope that he would be one of the first two United States Senators from the new two United States Senators from the new state. But in this his plans were de-feated and he decided not only to give up politics, but Idaho as well, and re-turned to San Francisco, where he opened a law office.

of Chinese Government.

The death of the Emperor of China, if it proves true, brings to an end the reign of a sovereign feeble in mind and hody, who has been dominated all his life by the all-powerful influence of the Dowager Empress. Kuang Hsus "reign" will be completely lost in the rule of the Empress.

The Emperor was born in 1870. His succession to the throne was one of the many arbitrary and illegal acts of the Dowager Empress, who adopted him in succession from a generation of the Dowager Empress, who adopted him in succession from a generation the same as that of his predecessor, sithough the custom of the Manchu synasty provides that succession shall go to the next following generation.

Kuang Hsu was four years old when made Emperor and his reign is the third in point of duration in the history of the dynasty. Kang Hsu and Ch Len Lung each having reigned and ruled 56 years.

OWAGER EMPRESS DYING, TOO rules for the property of the dynasty. Too provides the custom of the Dowager Empress.

The question of the succession has agitated the imperial family skees the Autumn of 1997, when it was perseived that the health of the Emperor relved that the health of the Emperor was seriously undermined. In January of 1900 the Dowagor Empress adopted Pu Chun, son of Prince Tuan, the Roxer chieftain, heir apparent, but the disinherited him in November, 1901, at the beheat of the allied powers. Since then the matter of an heir apparent has been in abeyance, and the Dowagor Empress, in whose hands the power of election was, gave notice to her purposes or determination. The Dowagor Empress is and the PEKIN, Nov. 13, 10:30 P. M.—It is re-ported that the Empress Dowager also is dying. This rumor that the Empress Powager is dying, if true, would ex-plain the two edicts issued this after-noon regarding a regency for the empire.

screen the condition of the Dowager Empress. The edicts of today bear the name of Kuang Hsu, which indicates that he was still alive at the hour the members of the Grand Council were in conference at the palace. This was at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The second edict orders that Pu Wet, son of Prince Chun, a child 5 years old, be trained in the palace for succession to the throne. This makes him heirpresumptive.

The hour of the day at which these edicts were issued shows that the imperial family, as well as the Grand Councillors, before deciding upon the appointment of Prince Ching, president of the Board of Foreign Affairs, from the Eastern Tombs, whither he went to inspect the mauso-leum of the Dowager Empress.

of the Emperor. Confirmation of the demise, he continued, would probably be demise, he continued, would probably be made by the American Minister at Pekin. Through nearly all of the 34 years that the Emperor was on the throne he was in poor health, the Minister explained, and added that the Emperor's death at this time would not interfere with the policy of reform which had been adopted and partially put into practice by the Chinese government. Mr. Wu explained that as the Emperor had no direct descendants, the infant son of a brother of the Emperor would probably be called to the throne.

A dispatch was received at the State

A dispatch was received at the State Department just before noon today from American Minister Rockhill at Peklin, reporting that the Emperor was dying. The message was sent about 2 o'clock this afternoon, Pekin time.
